THE WEATHER YESTERDAY.

U. S. WEATHER BUREAU, Los Angeles, Jan. 7.—[Reported by George E. Franklin, Local Forecast Official.] At 5 o'clock a.m. the barometer registered 30.13; at 5 p.m., 30.10. Thermometer for the corresponding hours showed 43 deg. and 54 deg. Relative humidity, 5 a.m., 70 per cent.; 5 p.m., 82 per cent. Wind, 5 a.m., calm; 5 p.m., west, velocity 5 miles. Maximum temperature, 64 deg.; minimum temperature, 40 deg. Barometer reduced to sea level.

DRY BULB TEMPERATURE.

Los Angeles	42	San Francisco	44
San Diego	46	Portland	22

Weather Conditions.—The storm which appeared yesterday morning off the Oregon coast remains about stationary, though with increasing energy. Cloudy weather with rain in the coast sections and snow in the mountain regions prevails as far south as the San Joaquin Valley. A second depression has formed in Western Nevada, which is likely to cause cloudy, threatening weather Sunday south of the Tehachepi. The temperature has risen generally west of the Missouri River, though zero temperature prevails in Eastern Washington and Montana, and freezing weather from the Columbia River northward. Light frost occurred at Los Angeles this morning.

Forecasts.—Local forecast for Los Angeles and vicinity: Increasing cloudiness tonight, becoming unsettled Sunday, probably without rain; somewhat warmer; light to fresh winds, mostly southerly.

ALL ALONG THE LINE.

The time is ripe when Los Angeles should have not only an "owl" train to San Francisco, but owl cars on its street railways.

The City Health Officer says the grip has arrived in Los Angeles. One of the best ways to have it catch you is to be frightened half to death for fear it will.

The news again comes—this time from San Luis Obispo—that the "gap" in the Southern Pacific's coast line "is to be immediately closed." The persistent, perennial faith of the people along this line in the promises of Uncle Collis is something sublime.

The Monrovia Messenger urges the citizens of that place to make an effort to induce the Terminal Railway Company to extend its proposed electric line not only to Alhambra and Sierra Madre, but to Monrovia. This is not by any means an unreasonable proposition, nor is there any doubt that Monrovia will be connected with Los Angeles by an electric line before many more years shall have passed.

The Executive Committee in charge of the raising of the fund to be devoted to the campaign at Washington in the interest of the Nicaragua Canal is apparently getting earnestly at work. It is unfortunate that this work has been allowed to drag until now. It should have been finished some time ago, in order that one or more special representatives might now be at the capital to help on the fight.

The first consignment of freight for the Orient, via the new California and Oriental steamship line, arrived in San Diego on Thursday last. It will be a source of regret to prohibitionists to learn that it comprised twenty full carloads of beer, 3400 barrels, or exactly 280 tons, in all. The beer is consigned to Manila, via Hongkong, and will cost about $16 a barrel laid down at its destination.

Santa Barbara is not likely to be seriously troubled with tramps hereafter. The Board of Supervisors have fixed a little scheme which is likely to render that county practically immune from this sort of disease. They have adopted a resolution providing for a chain-gang keeper, whose duty it shall be to work all inmates of the County Jail eligible to service for eight hours every day on a county rock pile, to be provided by a designated member of the board.

Civil Service.

The United States Civil-service Commission announces that applicants for the positions of assistant custodian-janitor, elevator conductor, engineer (second and third classes,) fireman, janitor and watchman, and other similar minor positions in the Federal building in this city should apply for application blank, form 1052, which may be obtained at any time from L. M. Kinkead, secretary custodian board, or from the commission at Washington. These applications, after being properly executed, should be forwarded direct to the commission at Washington. No educational test will be given for the positions mentioned above, but applicants will be graded upon the elements, first, of physical ability as determined by age and physical condition; second, ability and character as workmen, and, third, experience; upon the information brought out in the answers made to the questions in the application and vouchers and the medical certificate. Applicants must be between 21 and 60 years of age. It will not be necessary for them to appear at any place for examination.

Contractor Neu Coming.

P. W. Neu, of the firm of Heldmeyer & Neu, the Chicago contractors for the San Pedro Harbor breakwater, will come to Los Angeles in a short time to make his home here during the life of his contract. He is expected within a couple of weeks. Work has been in progress steadily on preliminaries for some weeks, and the heavy lifting derrick is now in position at Terminal Island, and the donkey engine on board. One barge is now about completed, and this will be used to pick up loose stones about Clemente Island for the present. The lumber for other barges is expected to arrive shortly.

Merchants and Manufacturers.

The Nominating Committee of the Merchants 'and Manufacturers' Association met yesterday afternoon and decided to nominate as directors of that association for the ensuing year the follownig members: George Arnott, N. Bonfilio, R. L. Craig, Bryon Erkenbrecher, E. C Haskell, W. G. Hutchison, W. E. Keller, B. Kingsbaker, J. W. Lynch, R. E. Marx, C. C. Reynolds, J. M. Schneider, R. D. Scriver, Frank Simpson, Arthur B. Thomas.

Water Conference.

The Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association have been asked to send representatives to a conference to be held in San Francisco on January 21, under the auspices of the State Miner's Association, for the discussion of the question of conservation of water, on which it is desired to obtain a consensus of opinion.

LETTERS TO THE TIMES.

[The Times freely publishes the views of correspondents on timely topics, without holding itself responsible for opinions thus expressed. Letters should be brief, plainly written, clear in statement and properly vouched for. No attention is paid to anonymous contributions. Cut it short; the space of 250 words, on the average, is sufficient for the expression of an idea. When the contributions are too long for insertion in full, extracts will be printed.]

Those Dire Prophecies.

G. W. SEIBERT, Los Angeles: Referring to a letter in The Times of January 5, on "Startling Predictions," by Sir Robert Ball, permit me to call the attention of your readers to the fact that the character of the book of Job, quoted by your correspondent, is highly figurative and not to be interpreted contrary to other plain, literal statements of scripture.

It is written, "Surely the Lord will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants, the prophets," (Amos iii, 7,) and the greatest of all the prophets was our Lord Jesus, who made no reference to any such calamity, as has been predicted by Astronomer Ball. On the contrary, the word of God, harmoniously interpreted, fortells, not overwhelming calamities to the physical earth, but rather its beautifying and perfecting as a fit abode for mankind, after their full restoration (if willing and obedient) to their original condition in Adam, in the "image of God," to be accomplished by the reign of the Christ during the 1000 years, the "Times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." (Acts iii, 19-21.)

The shaking of the earth is frequently mentioned in scripture, but the context and other plain scriptural statements show us that not the literal, physical earth is meant, but the symbolic earth, (society as now organized,) which will indeed be "shaken" to its foundations in order that everything false, corrupt and contrary to the law of God, socially, politically and ecclesiastically, may be utterly removed. To this "time of trouble" our Lord referred in Matthew xxiv, 21, and the prophet Daniel in Chapter xii, 1.

We remember that the "wisdom of this world is foolishness with God," (I. Corinthians iii, 10, 20,) and that the "wisdom of its wise men (astronomers, etc.,) shall perish (come to naught,) Isaiah xxix, 14.) "Therefore will not we fear, though the earth (social conditions) be removed (transformed) and though the mountains (kingdoms, governments, etc.,) be carried into the midst of the sea (i. e., be swallowed up by the desperate and anarchistic masses of the people.") (Psalms xliv, 1-3.)

"How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord,
Is laid for your faith in His excellent word!"

"Thy word is truth."—John xvii, 17.

The Sixth Ward Park.

CITIZEN, Los Angeles: The friends to location of the Sixth Ward Park were in hopes that the opening of the new year would not bring them face to face with the solution of that problem which the precipitate action of the outgoing members of the last Council has caused to be taken up, and again try to solve what seems to be very simple. When it is known that we are rapidly approaching our tax limit under our present charter, and that we will soon be required to use the utmost economy to keep in good condition the already many public enterprises the city has embarked in, it would seem that in taking on new enterprises the city should look closely to what they will be called upon in the future to expend in order to keep up the improvements in all parts of the city, in as respectable condition as the best interests of the city will require.

Referring to the location of the two tracts that were before the last Council for park purposes, a glance at the map will show the distance from Main street to Alameda street (near the eastern city limit) to be about two miles. Within that area are four main thoroughfares running north and south. Commencing from Main street, we have Stanley avenue, Central avenue, Compton avenue and Alameda street. The distance from Main street to Stanley avenue is about one-half mile, and to Central avenue one mile. Therefore the location of a park on Central avenue would be about equidistant from Main street and the eastern city limits. Central avenue at present is the only avenue having an electric car line. I mention Main street as the western limit for the reason that it is known to all that Main street has been, and is at the present time the imaginary, but real, line of property value, and practically social intercommunion; also all the territory west of Main street is easily accessible by car lines already in operation, to all the parks in the north and western portions of the city, at one fare. This being the case, it would seem that a park to be located in the south or eastern portion of the city should be located where it will accommodate the greatest number of residents, both for the present and future.

The opponents of the Keysor site, containing nine and a quarter acres of ground, urge that the city should purchase at least twenty acres, and make a driving park of it, and that it should be located near the western portion of the territory named, arguing that it would be patronized equally from the west and east, which would be entirely impracticable and an unreasonable conclusion to come to under the existing circumstances. Westlake Park comprises about thirty-five acres of ground. Deducting the area of the lake and the surrounding streets, and taking into consideration the area of the park occupied usually by the visitors, it is safe to say that less than seven acres of ground is usually occupied to accommodate the thousands that frequent that resort.

The purchase price of the Keysor tract would leave the Park Commissioners about $6000 available funds for park improvements. The improvements already upon the ground, which can be utilized, would be equivalent to at least $2000 additional. The resident portion east of Main street, which would be tributary to that park, is made up largely of small property holders, salaried men, artisans, and a class of people who will only patronize parks that are easy of access. All they require is a small breathing place centrally located, available to the greatest number at the least expense. Hoping and believing that the incoming Council would take full time to thoroughly investigate the merits of all tracts presented, and in that investigation would divorce their judgment from the real estate speculations that have been launched in that portion of the ward where it is proposed to locate the twenty-acre park, and would with the advice and counsel of the Park Commissioners meet out to that portion of the city equal justice.

The present status of the park contest is this: The old Council verbally accepted Boettcher's propositon for the purchase of his twenty acres on Stanley avenue for a park site. There was no money paid down, or written contract entered into. The old Council died December 31, before they had completed their contract with him. In the true sense, the present Council is to administer on the actions of the old Council, as far as closing up unfinished business. As administrators, their constituents will only expect them to deal fairly with both parties. Whether they will consider it their duty to inquire into this park site question, when it is a matter of record that the unanimous recommendation of the old Park Commission was wholly ignored, is a matter they individually must decide.

A SHORT SERMON.

Our talk this morning, friends, will be: "Does advertising pay?" Our text will be: "Put merit in your goods and truth in your ads, so shall your purse not go lean." Success costs nothing—it's failure that costs. The man with his feet on his desk is setting a bad example, but don't be too sure he is loafing. Don't laugh at the man who writes with violet ink on tinted paper printed with a monogram and soiled by his fingers. "Send me won grose uv shew tax today Shure—Xpress." His writing may look like a cross between knot holes and season cracks, but THERE'S BUSINESS IN IT. You don't like some particular merchant's style of advertising. Well, a Durham bull don't relish red sunshades, but after swishing his tail a few times he gathers them in all the same. Advertise early, often, regularly, continuously, conscientiously. Be liberal with your publisher, candid with your public and heaven will send you customers. During the coming week we will offer some splendid values in hosiery and underwear, and we want each and every one of you to pay us a visit. We will now close by saying—

In advertising men begin to see
Deception wins not more than honesty.
The advertisement often proclaims the man,
Thus let him note who doth these pages scan.

Ben-Bey's Ben-Yan Is the Most Remarkable Discovery of this or any Preceding Age....

After using this wonderful remedy and testing its merits on more than 10,000 men in California and surrounding States, BEN-YAN is now offered for sale the first time. Its merits were known years ago, but BEN-BEY determined not to place it on the market until it had been thoroughly tested and its wonderful power demonstrated.
This great remedy was discovered by BEN-BEY while sojourning in the Sandwich Islands, and was suggested by the wierd story of a Kanaka.
This is the only remedy known to science which will develop weak and undersized organs.
Its action on the nerve centers positively and forever cures nervous debility of every name, form and nature.
BEN-YAN will vitalize the circulation and nerves; strengthen debilitated and weakened organs—develop, enlarge and restore them, and thus make a new existence. It also cures leucorrhoea and all forms of female weakness.
This wonder-working remedy can be obtained from the BEN-BEY MEDICAL CO., 211 Nolan & Smith Building, cor. Letter from California.

EDITOR TIMES—Dear Sir: In your esteemed issue of Oct. 19, I read with painful interest the letter from Rev. Goheen, describing the sufferings of those wretched creatures in the famine scourged district of India, and I noted particularly these words: "Many are dying and thus are relieved of their misery in this world. But the sad, sad thought comes up again, are they prepared to meet their God? We know they are not. Pray earnestly for them that they may be saved before it is too late. Pray for us missionaries also that we may have grace and strength for such a time as this."

As I read, the question arose in my mind: Is it reasonable to suppose that an all-wise, all loving and all-mighty God has made the eternal welfare of millions of his creatures dependent upon the efforts of a handful of missionaries? Can we believe that the thousands, perhaps millions of these poor creatures who are never reached by the Gospel in this life are therefore doomed to be eternally lost? Nay! Love and reason answer, The Eternal One, who is "too wise to err, too good to be unkind," has certainly not so arranged the affairs of men, seeing that the Scriptures declare "God is love," and that he is "not willing that any should perish, but that ALL should come to repentance," and further that he "so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life." (2 Pet. 3:9; John 3:16.)

But what is to become of these millions of God's creatures?

Some will answer, "We believe that if the heathen lead clean, moral lives, obey the voice of conscience and live up to what light they have, they will eventually reach heaven, whether they ever heard of Christ or not."

If this be true, that God will save the heathen in their ignorance, then in the name of common sense and pity, let us cease spending thousands of dollars and sacrificing hundreds of lives in sending missionaries to them, for if the heathen hear the Gospel and obey it not, they are then under condemnation and may be lost, whereas they were perfectly safe in their ignorance according to this mode of reasoning. Further since "God is no respector of persons," if the heathen can be saved this way, let us also cultivate ignorance and our chances of salvation will thus be greater.

If any claim that morality and good works on the part of heathen will save them, let such remember the Apostles's words, that salvation is "not of works, lest any man should boast," (Eph. 2:9) but it is "by the faith of Jesus Christ." (Gal. 2:16.) Even God's chosen people, the ancient Hebrews, could not be saved by their attempts to keep the laws known of God, as it is written, "by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight." (Rom. 3:20.)

Again some may suggest that "the heathen all have some God which if they worship honestly, they will all go to heaven." If those who advocate such a theory would only investigate some of the heathen religions and see how they are characterized by murder, theft, idolatry, licentiousness and general depravity, they would soon cease to claim salvation for the heathen under such conditions. But the Word declares of Jesus, "There is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved, neither is there salvation in any other." (Acts 4:12)

Thus far the answers to our question have been hopeful and from those whose hearts are warmer and broader than their creeds, but occasionally we will meet with others who tell us that those who die without a knowledge of Christ are eternally lost, even going so far as to declare that God predestinated them to be lost, elected them to go to eternal torment before they were born! What a reply from Christian people who claim to believe that "God is Love!"

But let us turn from human creeds and speculations and put our question to the Word of God itself. Listen to the inspired reply, "The Scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed." (Gal. 3:8.) Thus we see that not through ignorance, nor morality nor worship of false Gods does Jehovah intend to save the heathen, but through faith alone.

Such being God's revealed purpose, how are the heathen to have faith, (without which "it is impossible to please God,") except they hear the gospel, for faith cometh by hearing?" Millions have turned to dust, other millions are going down into the grave, i. e. the condition of death where there is "no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom," hence neither opportunity nor ability to hear or believe in the gospel, their very thoughts having "perished" (Psa. 146:4.)

Since the vast majority of the heathen are dead, entirely out of existence as though they had never been born, and they never heard the gospel of Christ during their lifetime, how can the Scripture be true that Christ is "the true Light, which lighteneth every man that cometh into the world?" Surely here is a vast multitude who came into the world and yet were never enlightened. Is not then their enlightenment still future, if the scripture is to be fulfilled?

Hear another inspired answer to our question, God "will have ALL MEN to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth, for there is one God and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus; who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time." (1 Tim. 2:4-6.) "To be testified in due time." Ah, that is the key to the whole glorious plan of our God! And that "due time" for the heathen and for all others who have never come "unto a knowledge of the truth" in all its aspects and completeness, is in the Millennial Kingdom of him who gave himself a ransom FOR ALL, our blessed Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, who declared "the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice and come forth "—John 5:28.

The work of Christ at his first Advent was to redeem, to purchase the whole world of mankind, "every man," with his own precious blood. At his second appearing and his kingdom, "the times of restitution of all things," Acts 3:19-21. Christ will restore "that which was lost" through Adam's transgression, raising the dead, opening the blind eyes, unstopping the deaf ears, both mentally and physically, thus bringing all who have not heard the "glad tidings of great joy" into a full knowledge of the truth as it is written, "the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea," and "they shall teach no more every man his neighbor and every man his brother, saying, know the Lord: for THEY SHALL ALL KNOW ME, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord."—Isaiah 11:9; Jeremiah 31:34.

All men shall be brought unto the knowledge of the infinite Justice, Wisdom, Love, and Power of the Father through the agency of his beloved Son, the Seed of Abraham, of whom it is written, "In thy seed shall all nations of the earth be blessed," and surely the heathen form the larger part of the nations of the eatrh, statistics of the Missionary Societies showing that more than two-thirds of the human race now living are in total ignorance of the only true God and Jesus Christ his Son.

In God's sight ignorance neither justifies nor condemns, knowledge alone brings responsibility. When all men come to a knowledge of the truth, then they will be on trial for everlasting life. Those who have the knowledge of the truth now are on trial, but the great trial time for the world in general is in the Millennial Age, the great judgment day of 1,000 years when Christ shall reign and judge the world in righteousness and the people with equity. And the saints who have made their calling and election sure during this age shall be joint-heirs with Christ, sitting with him in his throne and judging the world and also angels. (Rom. 8: 17; Rev. 3: 21; 1 Cor. 6: 2, 3; Rev. 20: 6.)

Of that judgment day Moses wrote, "A prophet (Christ Jesus, the head and "the church which is his body," Eph. 1: 22, 23.) shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, LIKE UNTO ME; HIM SHALL YE HEAR in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass that the soul, which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people." (Acts 3: 22, 23.) And again, of the obedient in that day it is written, "He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God and he shall be my son." "But the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: WHICH IS THE SECOND DEATH." (Rev. 21: 7, 8.)

Although the "wages of sin is DEATH," and always has been and ever shall be, yet the penalty is called the SECOND death at the end of the Millennial age because from the FIRST death, which came to all mankind through Adam's sin, all mankind will have been released at Christ's appearing and during his kingdom, but he "dieth no more," and hence there will be no resurrection from the second death. Those who go into it must have been willful sinners against clear light and knowledge. The wicked will be destroyed utterly, (Psalms 145: 20) not kept in eternal life under any conditions of consciousness or suffering, bodily or mental. Eternal life is "the GIFT of God," and he will not give this gift to any except the obedient. "The wages of sin is death, but the gifts of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Rom. 6: 23.)

So then, while in no wise relaxing our efforts to call all men everywhere to repentance reasoning with them of "judgment to come," according to our ability and opportunity, let us not work ourselves into a frenzy of feverish haste to save the heathen "before it is TOO LATE," for the eternal and omnipotent one is not DEPENDING upon our puny efforts, although he does indeed grant us the precious privilege of showing our love and zeal by giving our little all in co-operation with him in his plan of salvation. Let us therefore rest by faith in the promise of our God that his word shall not return unto him void, (Isa. 55: 11) "The Lord of hosts hath sworn, saying, surely as I have thought, so shall it come to pass, and as I have purposed, so shall it stand." "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth: for I am God and there is none else. I have sworn by myself, the word is gone out of my mouth in righteousness, and shall not return, that unto me every knee shall bow, every tongue shall swear. (Isa. 45: 22, 23.) He "will have all men to come unto the knowledge of the truth in due time!" And thank God, the kingdom is near, even at the doors.—(Matt. 24: 33.)

"There's a wideness in God's mercy
Like the wideness of the sea;
There's a kindness in his justice,
Though severe his judgments be.

There's no place where earthly sorrows
Are more felt than up in heaven;
There's no place where earthly failings
Have such kindly judgment given

For the love of God is broader
Than the measure of man's mind,
And the heart of the Eternal
Is most wonderfully kind.

But men make his love too narrow
By false limits of their own,
And they magnify his vengeance
With a zeal he will not own.

If our faith is true and simple,
We will take him at his word,
And our lives will be all sunshine
In the sweetness of our Lord."

Sahara Quick Sands

Nothing is too big or too small to escape the maw of our hungry globe. Quicksands are the traps she spreads for smaller fry. Probably the worst and most dangerous in the world are the "Shotts" of the Sahara. These are perhaps the dregs of some historic sea. Now they are covered over with a thick crust of salt and sand. Whole caravans have walked unconsciously into these death traps and been quickly swallowed up. You can sound these quicksands to a deapth of 600 feet without finding bottom.

THE SOUL.

"The soul that sinneth, it shall die."—EZEK. 18:4.

What is the soul? The popular idea about the soul seems to be that it is an immortal, indestructible something, (nobody knows just what), which is implanted in some part of man's body (nobody knows just where), and which uses the body as an instrument and a dwelling place, but which at death flies away to heaven or "hell," according to the past life of the person.

A prominent theologian has defined the soul as "a thing without interior or exterior, without body, shape or parts, of which you could put a million into a nutshell." A very eloquent definition of "nothing," we would say.

Science is dumb when we question her concerning the soul. The unceasing efforts of extensive research have failed to discover any organ, bone or other part of the human organism, which is indestructible. The following is copied from the American Practitioner and News: "As for the hypothesis that there is in the body an indestructible germ that will resist death, and on resurrection day reconstruct the body, there is nothing in all the realm of anatomy and physiology to support it. It is an ancient conceit, and has far less significance than the fable of the Phoenix. And to say this hypothesis gains any support from the fact that there are in the body some organs whose function is not fully understood, is absolute nonsense."

But what say the Scriptures? We have all been reading Genesis 2:7 as though it were written, "and man RECEIVED a living soul." But the record is that after the Lord God had breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, "man BECAME a living soul." Now there is certainly a wide difference between receiving a soul and becoming a soul! The Apostle Paul states the same matter still more clearly, saying, "The first man, Adam, WAS MADE a living soul." 1 Cor. 15:45.

The creation of the human soul is not such a mysterious and utterly incomprehensible thing as is generally supposed. It is possible, perhaps, that our finite minds cannot grasp all the PHILOSOPHY of the chemical changes which transformed the dust of the earth into flesh and blood and bones, but we can reverently seek to understand what the Creator has chosen to reveal unto the children of men, regarding the MANNER of man's creation.

It is written, "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground." This was the first step, this was the creation of the BODY. This body had ears, but they heard not; eyes, but they saw nothing; nerves, but no sensation was perceived; blood, but it flowed not; a heart, but it did not pulsate. In a word, this was a perfect organism, prepared for activity, but it must needs wait for the energizing principle of LIFE to be applied, and in scriptural language this took place when God "breathed into his nostrils the breath of life."

The vitalizing breath, or spirit of life, inflated the lungs, the blood was oxygenated and began to flow, sensation, hearing, seeing, thinking commenced,—the man "BECAME A LIVING SOUL." Gen. 2:7. That which had been an inanimate organism became a living, conscious, sentient being, capable of living forever upon condition of obedience to the laws of his Creator.

Illustrations are rarely perfect in every detail, but they sometimes assist in making more clear what is difficult to explain, and this one may help us. Let a candle represent the body of Adam. Let a lighted match represent the breath of life. When the match is applied to the candle a flame results, which would represent the soul. The flame continues to burn so long as the candles last and there is sufficient oxygen in the room. But if either condition ceases, then the flame dies out. Where does it go?

So with the human soul: as long as the body is in proper condition to support breathing, and there is sufficient oxygen obtainable, the soul will live. But, if for any reason, through accident or disease, the body becomes unable to continue the breathing process, or the life-giving oxygen is cut off from the lungs, the soul dies, just as the flame of the candle goes out. Where does it go?

Another illustration that might be used is that of a pan of water placed over a fire. The result will be steam. The pan of water would represent the body; the heat represents the spirit of life; the resulting steam would represent the soul. So long as the water and heat are in contact the steam will be present. But remove the water from the fire, or the fire from the water,—what becomes of the steam?

In the form of an Algebraic equation, we might illustrate this matter thus: Body plus spirit equals Soul. Subtract either of the first members of the equation and the result will be zero. Destroy the body, or take away the spirit or breath of life, and the Soul ceases to exist, it GOES NOWHERE, just as the flame and the steam went nowhere, they simply ceased to exist, because the very conditions of their existence,—upon which their existence depended. were destroyed.

Thus we get the thought that Adam WAS a living soul, and that as a living soul, he could be destroyed in death, even as his Maker had forewarned him. If Adam were an IMMORTAL being, the threat of death could have meant nothing, for an immortal being could not die, could not be destroyed, for that is the meaning of the word immortal,—"deathless, death-proof, indestructible."

Belief in the inherent immortality, or indestructibility, of the human soul is a distinctive mark of heathen and savage nations. But Plato, the Greek philosopher, was the first to embellish the doctrine and make it acceptable to the more enlightened and highly educated nations of Greece and Rome, and from them through the Papacy, it has come down to our own day. The first teacher of his error was a most wise and subtle one, even the great adversary, Satan. Let us read the account of his first lesson on this subject to the children of men. In reply to the tempter's question concerning the forbidden tree in the Garden of Eden, "the woman said unto the serpent, we may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden, but of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, LEST YE DIE." "And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall NOT SURELY DIE." (Gen. 3:2–4.) In Genesis 2:17 it is written that the Lord had said to Adam, "Thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt SURELY DIE." Shall we believe SATAN'S LIE or GOD'S TRUTH? Without good and sufficient proof to the contrary, reason would teach that He who CREATED is also ABLE TO DESTROY. "Thou turnest man to DESTRUCTION." Psa. 90:3. See also Psa. 145:20; Matt. 10:28.

It is difficult for those of us who have so long been indoctrinated in the belief that man has an immortal soul to understand the teaching of the scriptures on this point. But, "Let God be true, (though it prove) every man a liar." (Rom. 3:2.) It would be just as proper for a man to say, "I HAVE a man," as to say, "I HAVE a soul." He IS A man, and he IS A soul. Why, we use this word every day ourselves in the very same way, saying, "I didn't meet a soul on the street," or "There wasn't a living soul in the room."

Some will doubtless be surprised to learn that the lower animals are also referred to in Scripture as being "souls." In Genesis 1:20, 21, and 24, we read about "moving creatures" in the waters, "fowl that may fly above the earth;" "great whales" and "cattle" and "creeping things" and "beasts of the earth;" and after the flood the Lord speaks of the "living creatures," Gen. 9:10, 12, 15, 16. In each of the foregoing texts the Hebrew word used is the same word which was used in describing Adam's creation,—namely NEPHESH, "soul." In Numbers 31:28 we read, "Levy a tribute unto the Lord . . . one SOUL of five hundred, of the persons, and of the beeves, and of the asses, and of the sheep." Again the same word NEPHESH, "soul."

All animal souls, man as well as beasts, were taken from the earth, and at death they return to the earth. "Dust thou art and unto dust thou shalt return" (Gen. 3; 19) is indeed true of the soul, notwithstanding the poet Longfellow's beautiful verses to the contrary. In Eccl 3;19 we read, "That which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts: even one thing befalleth them: AS THE ONE DIETH, SO DIETH THE OTHER: YEA, THEY HAVE ALL ONE BREATH: ALL GO UNTO ONE PLACE; All are of the dust, and all return to dust again." And let us remember these are the words of King Solomon, to whose request for wisdom the Lord replied, "Behold, I have done according to thy words: lo, I have given thee a wise and an understanding heart; so that there was none like thee before thee, neither after thee shall any arise like unto thee." (1 Ki. 3:12.)

(Of course we are not to forget there is this EXCEPTION in the case of man, which is not true of the beasts, that God has promised A RESURRECTION from this condition of death. destruction, nonexistence. But just now we wish to get the thought clearly in mind that man is not an immortal being, but that he can be destroyed by his Creator, and that such was the penalty pronounced upon him in the day of his disobedience.)

Adam began to die the moment of his disobedience, but being perfect in his organism, it took death 930 years to bring him down to the dust. "And all the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years; and he DIED." (Gen. 5:5.) Thus he died within "the day" of his disobedience, the thousand-year day, for it is written "One day with the Lord is as a thousand years." (2 Pet. 3:8.) Adam is still dead, and will remain in that condition until the hour shall come "in the which all that are IN THE GRAVES (not in heaven or "hell"), shall come forth." (John 5; 28, 29.)

(If any be still unconvinced that the soul can be destroyed, let him take an Analytical Bible Concordance and hunt for the expressions, "immortal soul," "undying soul," etc. Or the writer will be pleased to send upon request free reading matter, which will treat the subject in a more exhaustive and satisfactory manner than our time and space will permit.)

There is one text which is very generally relied upon to prove that only the body dies while the soul goes to heaven or "hell." It is found in Ecclesiates 12:7, and reads, "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was; and the spirit shall return to God who gave it." To this we fully agree, but we should notice that this text does not say the "soul" returns to God who gave it. The soul and the spirit are not one and the same thing, as is popularly supposed. The Hebrew word from which this word, spirit, is translated is "Ruach," and primarily it means wind, or breath, and is so translated in numerous texts of the Old Testament. In Job 27:3 we find the same word, "The spirit (ruach) of God is in my nostrils." The same word occurs again in Genesis 7:21, 22. "All flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of beast, and every man: All in whose nostrils was the BREATH (ruach) of life, of all that was in the dry land died."

Thus we find that the word spirit means the "breath of life" originally communicated to Adam and the other animals. Perhaps it would more properly be translated, "power or privilege of life." Adam received this power to live, this privilege of life, and when he disobeyed his Creator this favor was withdrawn, the spirit or breath of life was taken away, and he died.

Now in the text above referred to, the body returns to the dust, to the earth whence it was taken, and the spirit, privilege of life, (not a THING, but a PRINCIPLE, or energizing power) returns to God in the sense that it is no longer under the control of man. The spirit returns to God in the sense that the favor or privilege IS TAKEN BACK by its Giver.

Again, it is impossible that the spirit and soul should be one, because the soul is composed of two parts, viz: the body and the spirit. The body is not the soul, neither is the spirit the soul, but both together produce the soul. It would be just as proper to say the body and the soul are the same thing, as to say the spirit and the soul are the same thing. The body returns to the dust, the breath of life "goeth forth" (Psa. 146:4) and the man, the soul, dies.

The spirit of life is called "the breath of life" probably because life, once started, is maintained by the breathing process, and to the finite mind, the breathing is an EVIDENCE OF LIFE. When breathing ceases we have the first evidence to our natural senses that life has ceased, that the soul is dead,

In conclusion, let us remember that wherever we may find in Scripture any passage which would seem to contradict this clear teaching that the human soul is NOT immortal, we should examine it to see whether it is not figurative, or symbolic, or parabolic language, which must always bend to such plain and literal statements as "The soul that sinneth, it SHALL DIE," "All the wicked will He destroy."

(The subjects of DEATH, "HELL," and THE RESURRECTION we hope to examine in further study at some future time, if the Lord will.)

Filling Up the Measure.

"I cannot say that I have any admiration for meekness; it is certainly something I never pray for," said a woman loftily the other day.

"But everyone who works with her has need to pray for an extra amount for her own use," thoughtfully commented one who had overheard the remark. "There is need for meekness—a good deal of it—wherever she is."

That is usually the case with those who are so ready to dispense with or despise any virtue—somebody else has to make good the deficiency. The quick-tempered person is never the one to tolerate outbursts of passion from others; they must be self-controlled. The plain-speaking person, who always insists that frankness gives the right to bestow advice and criticism unasked, is ordinarily very resentful of a return in kind. Meekness is forbearance, gentleness, readiness to those who will have none of it are sure to make heavy draughts upon the stock of those about them. Tact, unselfishness, and regard for the feeling and wishes of others must need exist wherever people work successfully together—somebody must fill up the measure. The strange thing is that anyone should ever think of such qualities as weak! —Forward.

CUNNINGLY devised schemes for the disfranchisement of citizens in the South having become apparently successful, it is now the duty of Congress to reduce the representation of States in which this injustice has been done. This Constitution requires such action and if Congress fails to enforce the requirement it will make itself a party to the crime of depriving citizens of their rights. If Congress does not put Constitution into effect it will be but little less derelict than the States that have violated this fundamental law. The outrage of permitting 5,000 voters in the South to have as much power as 40,000 in the North ought to stir up the indignation of the latter and lead to a remedy of the evil. Let the Constitution be enforced.

DEATH.

("The Wages of Sin Is Death."—ROM. 6:23.)

There is probably no other subject of so universal interest among mankind as that of death, and in the minds of the majority it is a source of much anxiety and uncertainty as they stand beside the open graves of their loved ones.

"There is a Reaper, whose name is Death,
And with his sickle keen
He reaps the bearded grain at a breath
And the flowers that grow between."

A proper understanding of death, what it is, whence it came, and how and when its power will be destroyed, is a most essential part of "the faith once delivered unto the saints," (Jude 3), for, unless we understand death, we shall be unable to fully appreciate the great work of our blessed Redeemer who left the glory which he had with the Father and was "made man," that he "by the grace of God might taste death for every man," who died that we might have life. (Heb. 2: 9.)

(It is not possible within the limits of this article to go very thoroughly into this subject, yet we hope to suggest a few thoughts which may lead to further study and investigation.)

It may at first appear strange that a word so familiar to the whole human race should require to be defined, yet such is the confusion of thought and teaching, both by scientists and religionists, that probably few persons clearly understand the true significance of the term, death.

Webster defines death as, "That state of a being, animal or vegetable, but more particularly of the animal, in which there is TOTAL AND PERMANENT CESSATION OF ALL THE VITAL FUNCTIONS, when the organs have not only ceased to act, but have lost the susceptibility of renewed action."

Although the Scriptures do not define death in so many words, but rather describe the CONDITION of the dead, yet the thought presented is invariably one in contrast with that of life.

Every idea or fact has its opposite: light, darkness; heat, cold; day, night; truth, error; love, hate; life, death. Each of the foregoing terms defines a condition in which its opposite is absolutely absent. And had we not been taught from earliest childhood that death was NOT death at all, but that when a man dies, he is "more alive than before," we would never have entertained for a moment the absurd thought that death means life.

But, what say the Scriptures? It is written, "The living know that they shall die, but the DEAD KNOW NOT ANYTHING,"-Eccl. 9:5. "There is no work, nor device, nor KNOWLEDGE, nor wisdom in the GRAVE whither thou goest." Eccl. 9:10. (What a reproof for those who "seek unto the dead," through spirit mediums for advice, wisdom, knowledge. Isa. 8: 19.) "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into SILENCE,"Psa. 115:17. "Wilt thou show wonders to the dead? Shall the dead arise and praise thee? Shall thy loving kindness be declared in the grave? or thy faithfulness in destruction? Shall thy wonders be known in the DARK and thy righteousness in the land of FORGETFULNESS? Psa. 88:10-12. "In death there is no remembrance of thee: in the grave who shall give thee thanks?"-Psa. 6:5 "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day HIS THOUGHTS PERISH."-Psa. 146:4. (If the righteous dead cannot "praise the Lord," and the wicked dead forget their evil ways. surely the good cannot have gone to heaven at their death, or the bad to "hell.")

Let us now notice a few texts which teach that death means destruction. Gen. 6:7,-"I will DESTROY man whom I have created from the face of the earth, both man and beast, and the creeping thing, and the fowls of the air." Gen. 7:4,-"Every living substance that I have made will I DESTROY (margin reads "blot out") from off the face of the earth." Gen. 18:23,-"Wilt thou also DESTROY the righteous with the wicked?" Jer. 15:7,-"I will destroy my people, since they return not from their ways." Psa 55:23,-"But thou, O God, shalt bring them down into the pit of DESTRUCTION; bloody, deceitful men shall not live out half their days." Psa. 145,20,-"All the wicked will He DESTROY." Luke 17:29,-"The same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven and DESTROYED them all " Luke 6: 9,-"Jesus said unto them......is it lawful on the Sabbath days to do good or evil? to SAVE life or to DESTROY it?"

For the present these few texts may suffice, though countless others might be cited. They all agree in describing death as a condition of silence, of forgetfulness, of no thought, no wisdom, no knowledge, no work, good, bad or indifferent,—in short it is a condition of non-existence, of destruction, of extinction.

As to the dominion of death, no argument is necessary to prove its universality, so far as mankind is concerned. "What man is he that liveth and shall not see death? Shall he deliver his SOUL from the hand of the GRAVE?"—Psa. 89:48. All die, the infant of a few days or hours, the youth in his manly pride, as well as the gray haired octogenarian. "The wrath of God is revealed against all unrighteousness," and every undertaker's sign, every funeral procession, every cemetery corroborat to the Word of the Lord, that death has "passed upon all men,"-Rom. 5:12.

But some one may say, Oh, these things only prove that the BODY dies. and everyone believes that. But the SOUL doesn't die, the soul is immortal. "O man, who art thou that repliest against God? Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus?"-Rom. 9:20. What blasphemy in the creature to contradict his Creator, who has declared, "The soul that sinneth it shall die,"-Ezek. 18:4. How strange that any should prefer to believe Satan's lie, "Ye shall not surely die," rather than God's truth, "Thou SHALT SURELY DIE.,'-Gen. 2:17; 3:3,4.)

(Having considered the subject of the Soul in our former study, we need not say more here than to reiterate that the soul is the whole being, the whole man, (body and breath of life together), and when the Scriptures declare the soul that sinneth, it shall die, it is equivalent to saying, the person, the man, that sinneth, he shall die.)

There is one thought, however, in this connection which we might notice. Did Adam's BODY sin, did its hand reach forth of itself, without the desire of Adam, and take the forbidden fruit? If it did, then reason would teach that the hand should die. But is not this manifestly absurd? It was not Adam's body that disobeyed God. It was the whole being, the living soul, Adam, the will, the desire, the mind, the heart, which used the hand as an agent,—the man that sinned, and who theretofore came under the sentence of destruction,—"dying thou shalt die." Adam had failed to stand the trial for continued existence. He proved himself unworthy of further favors from God, although instead of destroying him instantly, God allowed the sentance to be carried out gradually, that his creature through experience with sin, sickness and sorrow, might more fully realize the "exceeding sinfulness of sin." But at the end of 930 years the sentence was fully executed, and "Adam died," Gen. 5:5.

Death is not a friend, but an enemy, and is scripturally called the "curse." Let us inquire how came this curse or injury upon mankind? The divinely inspired answer to our question is found in Rom. 5:12;18-19. "By one man's disobedience sin entered into the world, and Death by Sin, and so death passed on all men." Who was this one man through whom this awful penalty of destruction came upon our race? "In Adam all die," 1 Cor. 15:22. The first man, Adam, had life and could have retained it everlastingly upon obedience to his Creator He was fully warned of the result, and Paul declares, "Adam was not deceived," 1 Tim. 2:14. He was, therefore, a wilful sinner, a deliberate transgressor. Having been created perfect, in the image of his Creator, and fully capable of perfect obedience, the penalty was perfectly just. The violation of the divine command demanded the destruction of the disobedient one As the death penalty began to operate the moment he sinned, that moment his dying began, and he. therefore, could impart only a dying, imperfect life to his offspring. Thus, through the law of heredity, death passed upon all men. Sin also was entailed, for did not the first-born, Cain, murder his brother? And so it is written, "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God; there is none righteous, no not one,"-Rom. 3:10,23.

The wages of sin is death. The whole race was sold by Father Adam under sin to Satan,—became his servants, and death with its concomitants of suffering, disease, tears and sorrow, is the wages the world receives from "him that hath the power of death, that is the devil," Heb. 2:14.

In view of the foregoing and countless other scriptures which might be cited, how strange it appears that any child of God should ever have believed or taught that "the wages of sin is ETERNAL TORMENT," mental or physical, or both! Did Jehovah declare to Adam that in the day of his disobedience he would surely go to "hell" to be eternally tormented, roasted with fire and brimstone? And did not Adam suffer a great injustice when he was informed by his Creator that he would "surely die," if the real penalty was that he would surely live forever in torment? (But we must leave the further discussion of this subject of "Hell," for future study.)

All Christians believe that Jesus Christ took the sinner's place, paid the penalty of his disobedience, do they not? Did Christ suffer eternal torment when he redeemed the sinner? No, assuredly not. "Christ DIED for our sins, according to the Scriptures," 1 Cor. 15:3. "He hath poured out his soul (being) unto DEATH,"-Isa. 53:12. "He was cut off out of the land of the LIVING: for the transgression of my people was he stricken,"-Isa. 53. 8. "I am the good shepherd, the good shepherd giveth his LIFE for the sheep."-Jno. 10:11. "For Christ also hath once suffered, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to DEATH in the flesh," 1 Pet. 3: 18.

Our blessed Redeemer's work is most beautifully set forth in his own illustration when he said, "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone:but if it DIE. it bringeth forth much fruit."(Jno. 12:24.)

Jesus. alone, of all that were born of woman, had life, "in him was life,"(Jno. 1:4), all others were under condemation to destruction. None of the sons of Adam could "by any means redeem his brother. nor give to God a ransom for him," Psa. 49:7. But with God all things are possible, "God will redeem my SOUL from the power of the grave (margin reads "hell"), Psa. 49:15. "Then he is gracious unto him and saith, Deliver him from going down to the pit (of destruction). I have found a RANSOM," Job. 33:24. "The GIFT of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Rom. 6:23.

The word ransom signifies an equivalent, "a corresponding price." A perfect man, Adam. had forfeited his right to life and plunged all his descendants into destruction with himself. Divine Justice is represented as requiring "eye for eye, tooth for tooth, life for life," etc., Levit. 24: 17 21. Therefore, it required the life of another perfect man as an offset, a corresponding price, a ransom. for Adam. Thus it become necessary for Jesus to be "made man," that he "by the grace of God might taste death for every man," Heb. 2:9.

As a perfect man, he was represented by the "corn of wheat" in the illustration. When the grain of wheat is planted, the same grain does not come up again, does it? No, it dies, that it may give life to the new grains. So it was in our Lord's case He must die if he would give life to the dead world of mankind. His soul (being) must cease to be, AS A MAN he must be destroyed forever in order to meet the requirements of divine Justice. His flesh, his human nature, was the PRICE he gave, and it must not, COULD NOT, BE TAKEN BACK, without the world becoming again subject to the original penalty.

Jesus might have retained life as a man, with all the rights, privileges, joys, ambitions of a perfect man, forever, we may say for the sake of argument(yet actually this could not be the case, as he was made man for the sole purpose that he might give up his human nature), but the world would then have remained in death. Thank God he did not "abide alone." What unspeakable gratitude should fill our hearts when we meditate upon his great and loving sacrifice of himself, "all that he had," that he might redeem us from the power of the grave!

Now we can in some slight measure realize what it meant for him to die. None had ever gone this way before him. If he failed to keep the perfect law of God in its minutest requirement, he would not only forever forfeit his own life, but also the hope of restoring the fallen race.

Let us consider for a moment the character of our wonderful Saviour, "The chiefest among ten thousand and the one altogether lovely." Think how he left the glory which he had with the Father before the world was, being the Alpha and the Omega," the first and the last, "the beginning of the creation of God."(Rev. 3:14) think of the honorable position he occupied as Jehovah's chosen agent in the subsequent creation of "all things,"-Jno. 1:3 think of the unspeakable bliss of heaven with the companionship of the Almighty and the holy angels! Then try to realize what it must have meant for such a being to humble himself and be made "of no reputation" (Phil. 2: 7,8), to become a "friend of sinners," a companion of publicans, to be reviled, persecuted, misrepresented by wicked men whom he had come to save, and finally to be crucified by the most cruel of soldiers, suffering the disgrace of death as a transgressor of the laws of God and man! Yet he "was holy, harmless and undefiled, separate from sinners,"and even the corrupt Roman governor, Pilate. was forced to declare of Jesus. "I find no fault in him."

"The Lamb of God" stands before the world as the Perfect One, saints and sages, infidels and believers alike unable to find any fault in "THE Man."

Is there anything too great for us to give in return for such a sacrifice? In the words of the poet,

"Were the whole realm of nature mine,
That were a present far too small:
Love so amazing, so divine,
Demands my soul, my life, my all."

All that we have and are, or hope to be, our time, our talents, our influence, money, our heart's best affections, our life,—our all consecrated to our Redeemer is but our "reasonable service," as the Apostle declared,-Rom. 12:1.

Although Jesus gave his flesh for the life of the world, and as a man, was destroyed, yet in God's plan his well-beloved and obedient Son was not permitted to suffer eternal loss, therefore, it is written that Christ was "put to death in the flesh, but made alive. (resurrected), "in the spirit" born of the spirit," as he said to Nicodemus. The heavenly Father did "not leave his soul in hell, (Hades, the death-condition), but raised him up the third day, according to the Scriptures, although it was upon another. higher plane, the plane of "the divine nature." (2 Pet. 1:4.) Because he was "obedient unto death, even the death of the cross, THEREFORE God hath highly EXALTED him (above the glory he originally had with the Father) Phil. 2:8,9)" and given him a name which is above every name."

But some may ask, "If Jesus satisfied Justice, why do we still see people going down into the tomb? There seems to be no change." Well, that is true, but we find Jehovah has designed a bride for Christ, the Second Adam, and a certain period of time, from the First to the Second Advent of Christ, called the Gospel Age, has been set apart for the calling and election, selecting and perfecting of this class of "joint-heirs with Christ," (Rom. 8:17.) As the Bride of Christ, the Church, is to sit with him in his throne, (Rev. 3:21) judging the world and angels, (1 Cor. 6:2,3), the work of raising the dead, the first work of the Kingdom when established, cannot begin until after the Church has been made ready. If it had not been for this feature of the Plan of the Ages, the dead would have been raised, and the work of restitution would have begun at the first Advent of our Lord. Or more properly, we might say there would have been but one Advent, and this would take place at the time of the Second Advent, for God evidently designed that mankind should have an experience with evil for 6000 years.

There is not a single text of scripture to warrant the belief that at death every person goes either to a place of heavenly bliss, or to a hell of torment. Our Lord himself declared, "No man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man, (the two most ancient manuscripts omit the words, " which is in heaven," (Jno 3:13.) What, did not Abraham, the "friend of God," go to heaven when he died? or Moses, "the servant of God," or Daniel, "the greatly beloved," or John Baptist, the greatest of all the prophets! Evidently not, if we accept the words of our Lord. Some may say, "Oh, but they did go to heaven after Jesus arose from the dead." But Peter says. "David is not ascended into the heavens, he is both DEAD and buried and his sepulchre is with us unto this day," Acts 2:29.34.

Paul did not expect to go to heaven when he died, for Jesus had said "Whither I go, ye CANNOT COME, but I will COME AGAIN and receive you unto myself," and so the Apostle declares there is "laid up" for him a crown of righteousness, which the Lord shall give him "at that day, and also unto all those who shall love his appearing."—2 Tim. 4:8.

We should notice here, that in view of the ransom having been paid, the sentence of DESTRUCTION has been turned into one of SUSPENSION OF EXISTENCE, scripturally called "sleep." Not that the soul is alive somewhere, or conscious, but that it would not seem proper to speak of those for whom a resurrection has been promised, as being annihilated. Jesus used the word in this sense when he said: "Our friend, Lazarus, sleepeth," But when his disciples did not understand, "then said Jesus plainly, Lazarus is DEAD," Jno. 11:11 14. But because he was about to pay the ransom price with his own precious blood, he spoke of Lazarus as sleeping.

For "the glory of God," (Jno. 11:40) Lazarus was raised from death only TEMPORARILY, else he would be living still. Then there is a point here which we might consider If Lazarus had gone to heaven, was it a kindness on the part of our Lord to call him back to a life on earth again?

There is also a figurative sense in which the word death is used, Our Lord illustrated this when he said, "Let the dead bury their dead," (Matt. 8:22.) Did Jesus mean one corpse would be expected to bury another corpse?" Assuredly not. He evidently meant that in God's sight all mankind are dead, legally dead, under sentence of death, whether in the tomb, or still above the ground, walking in the "valley of the shadow of death," just as all the convicts in a prison are prisoners, although some may be walking in the prison yard, comparatively free, while others are securely locked in their cells.

Jesus spoke of his death, saying, "I have a baptism to be baptized with, and how am I straitened until it be accomplished." (Luke 12:50.) To the Church Paul writes, "Know ye not that so many as were baptised into Jesus Christ were baptised into his DEATH?" (Rom. 6:3,4.) Again, we read of those who were "dead in trespasses and sins. (Eph. 2: 1.) and others who having believed on Jesus, have "passed from death unto life." There are numerous other instances of this figurative use of the word death, and it is only through a knowledge of the Divine Plan of the Ages, according to which the Lord is working out his great and wonderful salvation for all who will accept it, that we shall be able to "rightly divide the word of truth," (2 Tim. 2:15) and understand when the passage is to be interpreted literally or figuratively, and whether it applies to the world in general or only to the "consecrated in Christ Jesus, called to be saints."

Although the Redeemer has provided for the awakening of all who are "in the graves," not at the moment of death, but at the "last day," at "the last trump," "the trump of God," the seventh trump, which shall sound throughout the whole Millennial Reign of Christ, yet to be awakened, as Lazarus was, to the measure of life enjoyed before, will not GUARANTEE everlasting life to any one. "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever BELIEVETH in him should not PERISH, but have everlasting life," and "he that believeth not the Son shall NOT SEE (everlasting LIFE.") (Jno. 3:16,36.) Each one who hears the truth is responsible, and must repent, believe on the Redeemer and work out his own salvation with fear and trembling, obeying the divine will according to his ability. And "every soul (person) which will not hear (obey) that prophet (the Christ, the SEED of Abraham), shall be destroyed from among the people."—Acts 3:23. "The fearful, and unbelieving, and murderers, ... and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone."—Rev. 21:7,8.

Yes, here is that lake of fire and brimstone of which we have heard all our lives! But let us read the whole verse before we jump to conclusions. "The lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, WHICH IS THE SECOND DEATH." As Rev. 20:14 also reads, "The lake of fire: this is the second death." But the second death is something very different from LIFE in torment.

Death is death, and never life, under any conditions, or in any place. "The second death" means destruction, just as the first or Adamic death meant originally destruction. But, since the ransom by our Lord Jesus, there will be a release from the first death, a restoration from destruction. This restoration will bring a trial for life to all mankind except the Church. They will be awakened from death, brought out of their graves, given a "knowledge of the TRUTH" (1 Tim. 2:4-6) as it is in Christ Jesus, and after having been restored to the original image of God, absolute obedience will be required, in thought, word and deed. Any who will refuse to render such obedience will be turned back into death, this is the second death, from which there will be no resurrection, for "Christ dieth no more." The second death brings everlasting destruction not only to wicked men, but to everything opposed to God and righteousness.

Some may say, the penalty of death is not severe enough, death is nothing, we welcome it as a release, not as a penalty. Such fail to appreciate the awfulness of death, annihilation. We cannot now fully appreciate what LIFE IS, perfect life, because we are born into the world in a dying condition. But when the "Times of Restitution" are fully ushered in, when mankind are restored to the divine likeness, with mental, moral and physical powers perfect, when the earth shall "blossom as the rose,"-is turned into one vast Garden of Eden,-when love rules supreme in every heart, when "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death (Adamic death, death for our fathers' sins) neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away," (Rev. 21: 4) THEN it will be "a FEARFUL THING to fall into the hands of living God," whose LOVE provided a ransom so priceless as that of his dear Son, but whose JUSTICE, "the foundation of His throne," demands that the "soul that sinneth, it shall die."

When the Divine Plan shall have reached its glorious consummation, when Christ shall have put all "enemies under his feet," and destroyed "the last enemy death," when the Permission of Evil by the Almighty God shall have been clearly understood by the whole world of mankind, then shall be fulfilled the vision of the Apostle John, "And every creature which is in heaven, and on earth, and such as are in the sea, and all things that are in them, heard I saying. Blessing, and honour, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb, for ever and ever." (Rev. 5:15.)

"THEN shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory. The sting of sin is death, and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory (over death) through our Lord Jesus Christ." (1 Cor. 15:54-57.)

Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

"DO IT TO-DAY."

The time-worn injunction. "Never put off 'til to-morrow what you can do today," is now generally presented in this form: "Do it to-day!" That is the terse advice we want to give you about that which you have been struggling for several days, perhaps weeks. Take some reliable remedy for it To-day—and let that remedy be Dr. Boschee's German Syrup, whice has been in use for over thirty-five years. A few doses of it will undoubtedly relieve your cough or cold, and its continued use for a few days will cure you completely. No matter how deep-seated your cough, even if dread consumption has attacked your lungs, German Syrup will surely effect a cure—as it has done before in thousands of apparently hopeless cases of lung trouble. New trial bottles, 25c, regular size, 75c. For sale by Neely & Minick.

Rheumatism Cured in a Day.

HELL.

"The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God."—Psa. 9:17.

In the Scriptures we find the words death and hell frequently associated together in the same sentence, as for example in Rev. 6:8; 20:13, 14; 1 Cor. 15:55; Prov. 5:5.

We noticed in our last study that "the wages of sin is death," (Rom. 6:23), that the soul that sinneth, it shall die," and that death means destruction. Some have objected to these plain statements of the Word of God, declaring that the penalty of death is not severe enough, even insisting that "there are some people so wicked that there must be a hell of torment for their proper punishment." But these over-zealous and often well intentioned persons really cannot mean what they say. We recall the Iroquois theatre fire in Chicago, and the recent terrible disaster which befell the steamer Slocum at New York. What a thrill of horror encircled the entire civilized world as the awful news was flashed across the wires, and what a wave of sympathy rolled back to the stricken cities! Yet those poor unfortunates endured their sufferings probably not more than fifteen minutes at the longest, then all was over, while the doctrine of "hell," as popularly understood, would consign billions of human beings to an eternity of torment indescribably more awful than these few hundreds suffered.

Is it reasonable to believe that the heart of our Heavenly Father, who "is love," (1 John 4:16) would be less tender, less merciful and less sympathetic than that of selfish, fallen men and women? Ah no!

> "The love of God is broader
> Than the measure of man's mind.
> And the heart of the Eternal
> Is most wonderfully kind.
> But we make His love too narrow
> By false limits of our own.
> And we magnify His strictness

Although for centuries the theological teachers have figuratively shaken the sinner over a "hell" of fire and brimstone, we rejoice to know that this terrible doctrine is not so generally believed or taught as it was some years ago. But our joy is mixed with sorrow and apprehension as we notice that many of those who reject the idea of the "orthodox" hell,—a place of fire and brimstone, supplied with fuel sufficient to last throughout eternity, and furnished with fire proof devils armed with pitchforks, whose duties are to keep up the fires and torture the damned,—while rejecting this belief, at the same time unfortunately reject also the Word of God, because they continue to believe that the Bible teaches this doctrine of eternal torment.

We trust, however, that by the help of the Lord, we shall be enabled to show that neither reason nor scripture supports such a blasphemous doctrine, and taking the "Sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God," we hope to put to flight this hideous, God-dishonouring, devil-created error and send it reeling back into the oblivion of the dark ages whence it issued forth to terrify and sadden the hearts of many dear children of God, who have failed to "search the scriptures daily, whether these things were so." (Acts 17:11.) "Their fear toward me is taught by the precept of men." Isa. 29:13, 14.

Why, just think of it for one moment! Suppose a report were circulated about the town that your father kept a place in his cellar where he tortured stray cats and dogs on red-hot grid irons until they died. Would you not be so indignant that you could not rest day or night until you had satisfactorily refuted such scandalous statements and brought their author to justice? Yet, we are called upon by the theologians to contemplate with complacency a God of even worse character, so cruel that he will torture HUMAN BEINGS, whom they claim he has made immortal so they cannot die like animals and thus put an end to their sufferings. Nay, further, we are even exhorted to love and worship such a being, and lay down our lives in his service. Ah, surely the hearts of these teachers are broader and kinder and more merciful than their creeds, for we believe them incapable of conduct they attribute to the great Jehovah!

No wonder the poor, sinful world does not come to God. The world has a larger measure of common sense, and more correct ideas of right and wrong and of justice than it is commonly accredited with, and so it stands aloof and says, "I will have none of such a God. Why, I could be a better God than that myself." And as a result we see the world full of atheists, agnostics, infidels and worshippers of Mammon, of social and political influence, praise of men, etc., etc., instead of believers in the only true and living God, the adorable One, who is perfect Wisdom, perfect Justice, perfect LOVE.

And further, do those who profess to believe in this eternal torment theory really live and act in harmony with their belief? Could you or I lie down in our beds at night, could we sit comfortably in magnificent church edifices, if we actually believed that every man, woman and child who did not repent and accept the Lord Jesus Christ and join the church, and all the heathen, many of whom never even heard of the true God, of Bible or Christ's atoning sacrifice, are going to be tortured forever and forever after death? I think not. The wonder is that more persons do not lose their reason as they think upon so awful a prospect.

But does not the Bible speak of hell and torment and fire unquenchable? Yes, it is true that the Scriptures do refer to these things, but careful students will note from the context that good and bad alike go to hell. It cannot, therefore, be a place or condition set apart for the punishment of the wicked. And as for the torment and fire unquenchable, these expressions occur only in the parables of our Lord and in the highly figurative language of prophecy and the Revelation.

In this connection we are reminded of an "orthodox" definition of hell. A young man, recently interested in the Divine Plan of the Ages, asked his Sunday school teacher to explain to him about hell. The teacher replied, "Oh. hell is a place of SEPARATION FROM GOD." The young man hesitated a moment, then said, "Well, will you please harmonize that definition with Psalm 139:7, 8, "Whither shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed IN HELL, behold, THOU ART THERE!" At this point in the argument the teacher suddenly remembered he had a pressing engagment, and excusing himself, hurried across the street.

But, what say the Scriptures? There are four words translated "hell" in our English Bible, namely, Sheol (Hebrew) in the Old Testament, and Hades, Tartaroo and Gehenna (Greek) in the New Testament.

Sheol occurs 65 times in the Old Testament, being translated "grave" 31 times, "pit" 3 times and "hell" 31 times, and in two instances the marginal reading opposite hell is "grave," which gives us 29 times for hell as against 33 for grave and 3 for pit. This question occurs to the ordinary reader: If it was proper to translate Sheol by grave 33 times and pit 3 times, why was it not proper to translate the remaining 29 times by one or the other of these two words, instead of by a word having a totally different meaning, in fact a word, which as popularly understood means just the opposite!

However, we are able to excuse the translators of the Common Version, for like those who "killed the Prince of Life," our blessed Lord and Redeemer, we wot that "in ignorance" they did it,—they were blinded by a false theology, born of the Dark Ages. As for the translators of the Revised Version of the Bible, we cannot excuse them with quite the same grace, for they have compromised the truth by NOT TRANSLATING the words Sheol and Hades, thus leaving the common people under the belief that these words have the same significance as the familiar translation, hell, popularly believed to be a place of flames and shrieks and groans, of weeping and gnashing of teeth, while the translators, as eminent scholars, must have known that Sheol and Hades mean just the opposite of all this. Nevertheless,

> "Truth, crushed to earth, shall rise again
> The eternal years of God are hers:
> But error, wounded, writhes in pain
> And dies amid her worshippers."

And now the Church is coming "up out of the wilderness," out of the darkness and superstition that have held her in bondage, lo these many centuries! Leaning upon the arm of her Beloved, she is coming into the light of that glorious day when "the mystery of God should be finished," Rev. 10:7. "Blessed are your eyes for they see: and your ears, for they hear."

Upon examination we find the orginal Saxon word from which the word hell is derived, meant "to cover, to hide, to conceal," and in Old English books we read of farmers helling their potatoes, i. e. putting them into a pit, covering them, or helling the roof, i. e. covering it, thatching it. Thus we see that the word hell, as originally used and understood, was a perfectly proper translation of Sheol and Hades, as signifying the secret, covered or hidden condition of death.

Sheol and Hades, (translated grave, pit, hell) are never used with reference to the BODY, but only when speaking of the SOUL, the being or person. When the particular place of burial is meant, two other words are used, Qeber (Hebrew) and Mnemeion (Greek). In other words Sheol and Hades refer to the CONDITION of the dead, while Qeber and Mnemeion refer to the PLACE of the dead, the literal grave, the tomb, the sepulchre.

Did Job believe in the "orthodox" hell of flames and torment when he prayed to God, "O that thou wouldst HIDE ME in the grave (Sheol) that thou wouldst keep me SECRET, until thy wrath be past?" In this text the translators evidently realized the impropriety of using their favorite word, hell, and so translated Sheol by the proper word grave. (Job 14: 13.)

Jacob, a righteous man, expected to go to hell when he died, but here again the translators were forced to give Sheol its proper significance by using the word grave. See Gen. 44: 29.

Psa. 139: 8,—"If I make my bed in hell, (Sheol), behold, thou (God) are there." David chose a peculiar place in which to make a bed for rest and sleep, if he understood Sheol to mean a red-hot place, full of demons with pitchforks.

Now let us look at the New Testament. Take for example the well known text, Acts 2: 22, "Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell," which is a word for word translation of Psa. 16: 10, where David is speaking prophetically of Christ. And this scripture was fulfilled, our Lord was not left in hell, (Hades) the death condition, but was raised again from the DEAD the third day. (Acts 2: 31; 1 Cor. 15: 3, 4.)

Matt. 11: 23,—"And thou, Capernaum, which art (figuratively) exalted to heaven shalt be brought down to hell." How would it be possible for a city to be brought down to the "orthodox" hell? Yet how reasonable and how true the fulfilment of this prophecy in the utter destruction of the city of Capernaum. It has indeed been brought down to the death condition, to destruction, to oblivion, the very site of this once prosperous and favored city being now in dispute.

1 Cor. 15:55.—"O death, where is thy sting? O grave (Hades), where is thy victory?" Notice that the marginal reading gives "hell" as the equivalent of "grave."

Rev. 20:13, "And death and hell (Hades) delivered up the dead that were in them." The margin reads "grave" as the equivalent for "hell."

Thus we find Sheol, Hades, hell and the grave all mean the very same thing, and refer to the condition or state of death, viz., destruction, non existence.

The apostle Paul, the greatest and most learned of "the twelve apostles of the Lamb," has written in Acts 20:27, "I have not shunned to declare unto you ALL THE COUNSEL OF GOD." Yet we search his epistles in vain for a single word about "hell" or torment being the penalty for sin, though we do find a great deal about "the wages of sin" being DEATH. And the apostle James says, "He which converteth a SINNER from the error of his way shall save a SOUL from (eternal torment? No, from) DEATH. Jas. 5: 20.

But how about the other words, Tartaroo and Gehenna, also translated "hell" in the New Testament? We find the word "tartaroo," occurs but once (2 Pet. 2: 4) and it does not refer to mankind at all, but to the fallen angels who kept not their proper estate, and were, therefore, "cast down to hell," or degraded and restrained from their former powers and privileges. See also Jude 6. That tartaroo refers to a CONDITION of restraint for Satan and the fallen angels, and NOT A PLACE, is evident from the scriptural statement that "the devil, as a roaring lion, WALKETH ABOUT, SEEKING WHOM HE MAY DEVOUR." 1 Pet. 5: 8.

The word, "Gehenna," is used by our Lord in his parables and "dark sayings." The original meaning is the Valley of Hinnom, belonging to the son of Hinnom, hence Gehinnom (Hebrew) or Gehenna (Greek), the name given a deep ravine outside the city of Jerusalem, into which the refuse and filth of the city and carcases of animals were thrown. Fires, made hotter and more lasting by brimstone, were kept constantly burning in order to destroy everything thrown there, brimstone being most destructive to life in every form. The bodies of vile criminals were also thrown into Gehenna as a special indignity and also to indicate the belief of the Jews that such persons would not have a resurrection. This Valley of Hinnom, or Gehenna, was a sort of huge garbage crematory, necessary to preserve the health and cleanliness of Jerusalem. All that went into it was totally destroyed. If by chance any dead body fell short of the flames and lodged on the rocks, it was destroyed by worms, and thus there was no hope of escape from this place, whose fires were not quenched and whose worm died not. (Mark 9: 48.) Thus our Lord used this place as a symbol of utter destruction, in corroboration of the general teaching of the prophets who were before him and of the apostles who followed him, that the "wages of sin is death," and "the soul that sinneth, it shall die"—be utterly destroyed. Therefore, it would be better for a man to pluck out his right eye, (give up any and everything though dear to him as his right eye)—in order that he might secure eternal life, rather than keeping it, be cast into Gehenna fire,—be destroyed (Matt 5:29).

There is a difference, however, between Gehenna and Hades. Although both are translated hell, Hades refers to the condition of death brought upon all mankind through Adam's disobedience, from which mankind will be released by a resurrection, while Gehenna is a symbol of the Second Death, of which we read in Rev. 20.14. It is there called a "lake of fire," just as Gehenna was a literal lake or pit of fire, and it is expressly stated that this lake of fire "is the second death."

In verse 13 we take notice that "death, and hell delivered up the DEAD that were in them." So whatever our understanding of hell may be, we have this assurance that NONE ARE ALIVE there, and also that those who are in hell (Hades) shall be delivered. Moreover, we note that the marginal reading for hell in this text is "grave."

Notice the succeeding verse, "And death and hell (Hades) were cast into the lake of fire." If hell or Hades is a literal lake of fire, it would be rather a strange proceeding to cast a thing into itself, would it not? But no. How evident it is that this verse means simply that hell (Hades,) the death condition from which there IS HOPE OF A RESURRECTION is to be cast into the Second Death, from which there is NO HOPE of a resurrection, because "Christ dieth no more."

But, if any be still unconvinced, let us note that, whatever the significance of hell, whether it refers to the condition of death, as we claim, or to a place of eternal torture, physical or mental or both, as others claim, it is TO BE DESTROYED. It is therefore not an eternal condition, and if it be a place, its prisoners are to be set free. Notice Hosea 13:14, "I will ransom them from the power of the grave (Sheol), I will redeem them from death. O death, I will be thy plagues, O grave (Sheol). I will be thy DESTRUCTION."

And how will the Lord be hell's destruction? It will be through that power he received as a reward for his obedience "even unto death," as it is written, "For to this end Christ both died and rose and revived, that he might be Lord (master, owner) of the dead and living." Rom. 14:9. Because he humbled himself, God hath "highly exalted him and given him a name above every name" and "all power in heaven and in earth." (Phil. 2:9; Matt. 28:18.) He it is that is alive forever more and has "the keys (symbolic of power, authority) of hell (Hades) and of death."—Rev. 1:18. And when his kingdom shall be set up he will say unto all that are in the graves, "Come forth!" There shall be "a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust." Acts 24:15. (But this subject of the Resurrection we must leave for our next study.)

In the light of the foregoing, let us now notice the first part of our text at the beginning of this article: "The wicked shall be turned into hell." Upon examination we find the word translated, "turned" is "shub" in the Hebrew and has the significance of "turned back." And what does that mean? Why, it means that if those who have been brought out of hell (Sheol) by the voice of the Son of Man, will not "hear that prophet," they shall be turned back into destruction from whence they were delivered by the power of their Redeemer. They will have proven themselves unworthy of the privileges and blessings of the "Times of Restitution," the Millennial Age of Christ's glorious reign, and hence must be destroyed from among the people." Acts 3:23.

The second part of the text also includes "all the nations that forget God" in this turning back into destruction. Would we not learn from this that all the nations must first have come to a knowledge of God before they could FORGET him? And thus it is written that God will "have all men to be saved (out from death) and to come unto a knowledge (Greek, full knowledge) of the truth, for there is one God, and one Mediator between God and men, the man, Christ Jesus, who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time." 1 Tim. 2: 2-4. Does this not plainly teach that all men must first come to a full knowledge of the truth (not the confused mixture of truth, error, speculation, traditions of men, etc.) and that those who will not profit by that knowledge and will not hear (obey) that prophet (Christ and his glorified Church who will be the judges in that day) shall be destroyed in the Second Death, not kept alive throughout eternity, amid literal flames of fire, with hideous devils for companions through the ages of the ages!

Truly it is written, "My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts." Isa. 55:8.9. The Justice of God demands the destruction of the wilful violators of his righteous laws after they have come to a full knowledge of him and of the blessed things he has prepared for those who will love and obey him. And his Love approves the sentence of Justice, for, although divine love "takes no pleasure in the death of the wicked," yet Jehovah is of "purer eyes than to behold evil, and cannot look upon iniquity," and has declared that into the glorious "new earth" condition beyond the Millennial Age only such shall enter as will "do his commandments." Rev. 22:14.

Some may object to the plain truth on this subject, claiming that it will lead to more evil among men. But such need have no fear, for the preaching of eternal torment has NOT DETERRED evil doers, statistics showing that in England and Wales the proportion of criminals in 1873 among Roman Catholics was 1 in 40, Church of England, 1 in 72, Dissenters, 1 in 666, Infidels, 1 in 20,000. If the preaching of error has not terrified men into serving God, would it not be a good plan to try preaching THE TRUTH for a while? Error never sanctifies. Our Lord prayed, "Sanctify them through the TRUTH. thy word is truth." Jno. 17: 17.

(An exhaustive study of this subject would require more time and space than are available at present, but any persons further interested may receive by addressing the writer, a free 80-page booklet on "What Say the Scriptures about Hell?"—an examination of every text in the Bible where the word, hell, appears, and which also explains the parables of "The Rich Man and Lazarus," the "Sheep and the Goats," as well as other figurative and symbolic uses of this word from Genesis to Revelation, both inclusive.)

TELL TOWNSHIP.

Last week was poor hay weather owing to so much rain.

A pleasant evening social was given by Miss Edythe Harper recently in honor of her friend Nellie Schmittle, of Altoona. The evening was spent very pleasantly in games and music. Miss Schmittle, organist, and James Harper, violinist, William Parsons the banjo, and Oscar Roddy, the guitar, while the guests were listening to some fine music, Miss Edythe was busily engaged in tastefully arranging the table, a very elegant supper was served. The guests all retired to their homes at a late hour highly pleased with the pleasant manner in which they were so royally entertained.

M. E. Felmlee, who for some time has been on the sick list is now considerably improved.

Messrs. Andy Starr and Emory McMullen accompanied their best girls home from the social held at the home of Miss Edythe Harper on Saturday evening last.

Mrs. Dora Felmlee, of Texas, and her sister Mrs. Luella Bolinger, of Blacklog, are guests of their father M. E. Felmlee and family near Shade Gap.

Friedrich Schiller.

(The Typical German Poet.)

"SOME men are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them," but the true poet is born and not made. To a considerable extent, the circumstances that cluster about his environments and earlier life are conducive to the unfolding of his inclinations and possibilities; but we cannot make a poet, a real poet, I mean, out of him whose proclivities tend in a different direction, though we exert a vast influence in childhood and adolescence, along poetical lines. Versifiers are not poets. Almost any person with a reasonable education and a common appreciation of the "beautiful" in life, together with such a vocabulary as will meet the necessities of the common folk, can put thoughts into rhyme, but that rhyme is not always poetry by any means. The world has had few poets and they have stirred the nations by their genius. We look back at the great Homer, and what skill we find portrayed in the few works that he has left to the civilized world; what genius we find in one living before the dawn of pagan philosophy; and when we consider with what marvelous ingenuity he handles his characters in the "Iliad" and "Odyssey" and with what perfection these old epics have been put together, we must conclude that "back of Homer there is nothing." I say, that the world has had few poets, but a multitude of versifiers; and one of the few who are to be classed among the former, is Friedrich Schiller, the typical German poet.

There is no other writer, perhaps, so popular and so well honored among the German people, as Schiller We can't help but admire the personalities and the works of such men as Luther and Gœthe and Lessing, but none of these ranks so high in the estimation of the common people, as Schiller. He, it was, who came to the peasant in his hovel as the king in his palace, and he commands our special admiration because he came the closest to the people and touched even the poorest heart.

In the consideration of the work of this great man, it is necessary to unfold the principal incidences which have definite bearing upon his life. First of all, he was born on Nov. 10, 1759, thirty years after Lessing and ten years before Gœthe. His ancestry was of the middle class and they were strong and sturdy in their make-up. His father's nature was somewhat restless, energetic and ambitious in a sense, while his mother possessed a sweet, peaceful and gentle disposition, full of literary taste and intense in those fine qualities which so often invite our greatest respect. It was after his mother that the great poet inclined mostly, since her great literary taste took precedence in the formation of his character.

Naturally devout, he first decided to be a clergyman, and such a decision was not without the consent of his parents, but this was later abandoned and opportunities directed him to the study of law. It was not the desire of the young man that law should be supplemented for theology, but circumstances made it so, and it was soon much regretted that the change had to be made, as the school which he attended was very austere in its discipline, and the rigidity prevalent there, struck hard against Schiller's impulsive and sensitive disposition.

Soon with an aversion for law, he turned to medicine. Although this work was not so strenuous, yet he did not have his heart in it. Literature was his god and in it he revelled with the greatest delight, so, soon, in order to give vent to the intensity of his vivid imagination, his thought was expressed in various short poems, and he was gradually launching out into the realm of activity, where his true soul was concentrated and ultimate success was in view.

In a short time appeared his first great production, a revolutionary drama, "Die Rauber." Being anxious to see it played at Manheim, he found his way into the theatre without permission, and a second time doing this he was arrested and restrictions were placed upon him in doing further work. He pleaded in vain for his release, and finally, as an escapade, he fled and in a helpless condition financially, he changed his name and tried to seek recognition whither he went. He had now prepared his "Fiasco" and was engaged in outlining "Louise Mullerin."

Launched upon the sea of misfortune, he sought the help of his old friend, Frau Wolzogen, who opened her home to him and gave him a tranquil place to complete the drama that he had in mind. About this time, in the quiet abode near Meningen, he started his "Don Carlos," but owing to considerable contention among his competitors, his safety was questionable and he gave the matter up.

He next engaged his attention with journalism, founding a periodical, which was devoted principally to literature and drama. In this he was quite successful, and it was about this time that he got an invitation to make his home in Leipzig with Korner, later an exalted government official of Dresden. Here began the second period of his life. History attracted his attention, and it was soon that he wrote his "Revolt of the Netherlands." Having a purpose in view, he visited Weimar, the University of Jena, and several other places. It was there that he met several of the most influential and noted scholars and personages, also his future wife. There, too, he met Gœthe, who proved to be his lifelong friend, as well as his powerful contemporary, and a little later, he was called to the chair of history at Jena. After this distinction had been placed upon him, he read and wrote considerably, and enjoyed the assistance and comfort of his loving and faithful wife, whose sunny and happy disposition was a "lamp to his feet and a light to his pathway." He now completed his history of the "Seven Years' War," read Kantian philosophy, and soon was absorbed in the depths of philosophic thought.

At Jena, Gœthe and Schiller took up the editorship of the "Die Horen" and in this appeared some of the best productions of both writers—Schiller putting forth his finest lyrics and reaching the hearts of the people in general. The best and longest of these poems is the "Das Lied von der Glocke," published in 1800.

Schiller now turned his attention from philosophy to the drama, and "Wallenstein" was now engaging his attention. Desiring to live closer with Gœthe and the theatre, he moved to Weimar, where he spent the last five years of his life. At Weimar he became prosperous, his salary doubled, he bought a home for himself and family, he was co-director of a theatre, and success was evident. But, as is so often the case, just when he was preparing to live happily and comfortably he had to prepare to die. Life was all too short for such a great man. Though dying at such an early age, he has left to the realm of literature some of the best productions that it has. During the last five years at Weimar his pen was never idle. One masterpiece after another came forth, and some of his best are "Wallenstein," "Maria Stuart," "Die Jungfrau von Orleans," "Wilhelm Tell" and "Demetrius" (unfinished) which promised to be his greatest work, had he lived to complete it,

When we look at such a peculiar life as that of Schiller, we cannot but pity him in his direful moments and admire him in his best ones. What a strenuous life was his! It was so much broken up and divided. Now he was at high tide, on a fair way to success; now all was changed and he was down, financially distressed, with scarcely "anywhere to lay his head." Had Schiller not had so many irons in the fire, had he concentrated all his forces upon literature from the word go, what would have been the result? Perhaps the evolution of such a favorable end of life's work was only brought about better by his undulating career.

We best know Schiller by his great drama "Wilhelm Tell," the best known and most popular and perhaps the most perfect of his works. With matchless power does he picture his characters and change the scenes, putting here and there love, beauty, heroism, determination, tragedy and fortitude.

In respect to art, Schiller never excelled or even reached the height of Goethe, for he even said of himself, "With Goethe, I do not measure myself, when he has a mind to apply his whole power. He has more genius than I, and at the same time far more wealth of knowledge; a surer sensitive faculty and besides all this, an artistic taste, purified and refined with artistic accomplishments of every kind." Goethe knew actual men and nature better than Schiller, but on the other hand Schiller understood better what real men ought to be and felt more emphatically that which should lead from the real to the ideal. He knew well how to strike the chords everywhere which bind man to his higher power and nature. He loved freedom, despised tyranny, and was auspicious toward popular enthusiasm. He was less an artist than a teacher and preacher, and for this reason his works are more of the nature of the didactic and the exhortatory.

By all means, we must not forget that Schiller is one of the few men that the world has produced upon whom we can place the title of poet. He is a typical German poet. Years have not detracted in the least from his fame, and his memory, as the years go by, is ever more cherished and more precious to the German people.

The true poet evidently must be a seer. He must not only see what man is but what he ought to be. He must know human nature, not alone as he sees it clouded in the mists of the struggle of life, but as it rises supreme in the power and beauty of the "Great Image." "For poetry was all written before time was, and whenever we are so finely organized that we can penetrate into that region where the air is music, we hear those primal warblings, and attempt to write them down, but we lose ever and anon a word, or a verse, and substitute something of our own, and thus miswrite the poem. The men of more delicate ear, write down these cadences more faithfully, and these transcripts though imperfect, become the songs of the nations. For nature is as truly beautiful as it is good or as it is reasonable, and must as much appear, as it must be done, or be known. Words and deeds are quite different modes of the divine energy. Words are also actions and actions are a kind of words."

Thus, at the early age of forty-five, the chill hand of Death fell upon him. He was buried at midnight, while "the heavens were overhung with clouds." Looking back across a life full of vicissitudes, whose very paths were oftener strewn with thorns than roses; and scanning the pages of such a remarkable life-history, we cannot but entertain a longing desire to some day cast anchor across the sea and visit that sacred spot, under whose sod sleeps such a wonderful man.

TRUTH versus ERROR.

How often we hear our friends lament, "Oh, if we could only know WHAT IS THE TRUTH. There are so many different teachings, so many creeds, so many churches, how can we know which is right and which is wrong?"

To all such we should make but one reply, and that a scriptural one, as usual. It is the same our blessed Lord and Master gave, namely,

"If any man will DO HIS WILL, he shall KNOW of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." Jno 7:17. And those who have not done the will of God cannot know, should not expect to know whether the doctrine be true or false.

But what is this will of God so necessary to be done before we can discern between truth and error? The scriptural answer is (very briefly):

First, That we must acknowledge our fallen, sinful, helpless condition as aliens from God and violators of His holy law, and repent, for "God commandeth all men everywhere to REPENT." Acts 17:30.

Secondly, That we must believe on the Lord Jesus Christ as our Redeemer and accept him as our Saviour and Deliverer from sin and death. For it is written, "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosever BELIEVETH IN HIM should NOT PERISH but have everlasting life," Jno. 3:16.

Thirdly, That having done this the next step is to CONSECRATE all that we have and are, or hope to be, to the Lord's service. As the Apostle Paul exhorts us, "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God (in having redeemed you and forgiven your sins for Christ's sake) that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service, and be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God," Rom. 12:1, 2.

To present our bodies a "living sacrifice" means to live a life of self-sacrifice, giving up the pleasures, ambitions and cravings of the human nature, and giving instead our time, talents, money and service to the development of the spiritual life with its peace and joy which the world can neither give nor take away.

Again it is written, "This is the will of God, even your sanctification,"—1 Thess. 4:3. Sanctification signifies "a setting apart." We are to be set apart for a holy purpose, separate from the world and its hopes, its pleasures and ambitions, as the Apostle Peter declares, "Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a PECULIAR PEOPLE: that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light," 1 Pet. 2: 9.

Moreover, we are not only to do the will of God, but like our beloved Pattern and Forerunner, we must be able to say, "I DELIGHT to do thy will. O my God." Psa. 40:8. We must HUNGER AND THIRST after righteousness, and the CHIEF OBJECT OF OUR LIVES must be to learn and to do the will of God, that we may be well pleasing in his sight.

Those who have taken the foregoing steps of repentance (and reformation of life to the extent of their ability), faith in Jesus and full consecration of their all to the Lord in obedieuce to his will are scripturally declared to be "begotten" of God, as it is it is written, "Of his own will begat he us with the Word of Truth, "Jas. 1:18. This expression is a figure of speech used to illustrate the new condition attained by the consecrated believer who has done the will of God thus far, and who therefore receives a new mind, a new power of discernment, even "the Spirit of Truth, which the Lord declared would "LEAD US INTO ALL TRUTH and show us THINGS TO COME." —Jno. 16:13.

This spirit of truth does not teach us to take EVERY statement of scripture LITERALLY, nor on the other hand to interpret EVERY word FIGURATIVELY, but it shows us how to "RIGHTLY DIVIDE the word of truth" (2 Tim. 2:15) according the divine plan of the ages, and thus we become "workmen that need not to be ashamed," rightly dividing and harmonizing the literal with the figurative.

Error is always dark, confused, contradictory, and its path is sinuous, doubling back upon itself, and fitly illustrates the character of its father, Satan, who was "a liar from the beginning," and "deceiveth the whole world."—Rev. 12:9.

On the contrary, the Truth is always clear, reasonable, harmonious, straightforward, complete and rounded like a perfect pearl, brilliant as a diamond. Its path is light itself, and is the worthy representative of him who is "the light of the world," whose every word was "truth and life."

Let us examine ourselves. Have we done the will of God? Have we received the holy Spirit of the Truth, which the Lord declared would guide us into all truth? Are we natural men, (children of Adam) or are we spiritually begotten of the Lord through the word of truth to newness of life, having the "eyes of our understanding" opened, for it is written, "The NATURAL man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him, neither can he KNOW them, because they are SPIRITUALLY discerned." 1 Cor 2:14. (See also 2 Pet. 1:5:8.)

If we will do the will of God, we may sweep with reverent hand the Harp of God (Rev. 15:2), awakening therefrom such harmony divine as will fill our hearts and lives with joy unspeakable and full of glory.

"God's Word is that harp, which has long been unstrung,
And men heard but discordant its notes:
Now as tuned are its chords from Moses to John,
How grandly sweet melody floats!"

"If ye CONTINUE in my word, then are ye my disiples indeed, and ye SHALL KNOW THE TRUTH, and the truth shall make you free."-free from grovelling fear, free from error, from bondage to the opinions and "precepts of men,"—free to follow the Lord through good or through evil report, in season and out of season, and he that is faithful unto death shall "receive a Crown of Life," Rev. 2:10.

HOW TO MAKE ROADS.

Five Things to Hold in Mind in Construction.

BY WILLIAM REED.

WE believe the feeling of gratification and satisfaction, is very general in view of the fact that throughout our state the question of better roads is prominently being advanced to the front. Possibly there has been more money spent on the repair of roads, with less permanent and good results, than in any other enterprise with which we are acquainted. In a large measure roadmaking seems to be a neglected art; while there has been marked and wonderful advancements in nearly all other lines for the convenience, comfort and benefit of mankind, roadmaking has not kept pace and is far behind other improvements. Yet what is more used by the great army of mankind than roads? Roadmaking seems to be little understood, or if otherwise, then there has been too little attention given the subject. Nearly every person who has given the matter any attention, has his own ideas, or different ideas in the construction of roads.

A legislator once presented a bill for consideration to the body with whom he was associated, relating to hogs, and among other bright things he said on the subject, made mention of the fact that he knew all about hogs as he was raised among them. The writer will not attempt to make so broad a claim as this, regarding roadmaking, yet he is proud of the fact that in young manhood he helped to make roads, and is still prouder of the fact that ever since he has been able to make use of them either in walking or driving as circumstances permit. These facts have prompted me all through life to give roadmaking considerable thought, attention and study. I hope it will not be considered egotisical in me, although engaged in quite a different calling, in giving a few suggestions, which if acted on or carried out will give us much better roads in our town and throughout our county, at no more or very little more expense than we are now expending on them.

There are five features that must be considered if we are to have good roads and maintain them good, viz: good drainage, foundation material used, proper crowning or elevation of the middle of the road, and proper care of the road when once made. The most important feature and the one most neglected of all, is good drainage. It matters not of what material a road is made nor how well it is made if the matter of drainage is not considered the road will never be a permanently good one. The first thing that should be considered in roadmaking is how to drain it thoroughly; get the water off the road bed in the quickest, shortest way possible. First, last and all the time, make provision to get away with the water. If allowed to remain on a road or in ditches at the side of the same and not drained into the fields or forests a road bed becomes softened and cannot be kept from being cut up by vehicles passing over it; when there are winter springs in the road and there are several such places it the roads near our town, a drain should be dug from them leading to the side of the road leading on into the fields, this drain filled to within a few inches of the surface with stone, making what is called a French drain. If there is not sufficient fall at the side of the road and objections to draining into a field should be made, then a good sized hole should be dug at the side of the road and a wagon load of stone dumped into it and the water drained into it. This and the drain in the road is then covered with several inches of earth and this muddy, unfavorable piece of road disappears forever. One of the worst pieces of road we have found in the county is on the Stone Creek road just north of the bridge, at or near Samuel Neal's, also another piece on the northwest side of Sunset Park. If a drain were cut in the middle of the road at the bridge parallel with the road until it reached the rising hill and filled with stone as above, then a number of side drains leading from it into the creek we think that a foundation for a much improved road would soon be developed. No matter how much stone is dumped on this it will crush down and the mud will came to the surface. This and the other at the Park need good under drainage and they never can be made good and passable all the year round unless so treated. The expense would not be great, and yet the results permanent and good. When a person builds a residence or any other structure one of the first considerations is good drainage. He well knows if this feature is neglected trouble ensues. The same theory holds good in roadmaking, yet as it is everybody's business, the thing is neglected and we are willing to put up with the trouble. Notice how careful the Pennsylvania railroad is in keeping water away from the road bed.

The next is foundation and material usad. Stone or slag from furnaces are the best material used but they are not always convenient and are too expensive to be brought from a distance in making roads through a sparsely settled country. The next is proper crowning or elevation and shaping of the road. This and drainage are in a measure linked

The Rich Man and Lazarus.

(Luke 16: 19.31.)

It has been urged that this parable contradicts our position with respect to what the Scriptures teach concerning the punishment for sin. And we agree that if the parable teaches what it is popularly supposed to teach, it is certainly an unanswerable argument in favor of the "orthodox" doctrine that the wages of sin is "eternal torment." (Compare Romans 6:23.)

Notwithstanding the prevailing views, religion is a reasonable matter. Our God is a God of reason, who has given us similar reasoning powers and exhorts us to exercise them, saying, "Come now, and let us reason together." Isa. 1:18.

The general consensus of opinion among Bible students has placed the above passage of Scripture in the category of parables, and surely their opinion is worth considering and accepting unless we find very good evidence to the contrary.

But strangely enough, while accepting this as a parable, many insist upon treating its statements LITERALLY when drawing their lessons and conclusions from it. Let us notice some of the absurdities and difficulties into which we fall when we attempt to take this parable literally.

First, we must conclude that the rich man went to "hell" because he wore "purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day." For the most careful reading does not reveal a single word which would indicate that the rich man was a WICKED man.

Secondly, we must conclude, if we take it literally, that Lazarus was "carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom" because he was a beggar, and "the dogs came and licked his sores." Notice there is not a word about Lazarus' being a GOOD man, a friend of God and of righteousness,—not one word.

Thirdly, if we take the account literally, we must conclude that if WE would attain that coveted place of favor, Abraham's bosom, we must be sick beggars, full of sores, and the companions of dogs. And that if we wear good clothes and have plenty to eat every day, we are sure to go to "hell."

Fourthly, if "Abraham's bosom" be literal, it would hold very few of this earth's sick and poor and wretched millions.

Fifthly, if the rich man was confined in a literal place, heated with literal fire, the drop of water which he begged Lazarus to bring upon the tip of his finger to cool his tongue would be TURNED TO STEAM long before Lazarus could possibly reach him.

But why consider further the absurdities of a literal interpretation, why not accept the account as a parable, and try to interpret it as such?

In a parable the thing said is never the thing meant. This is the law of the parable. Our Lord frequently spoke of his followers, calling them "SHEEP" in one parable, "wheat" in another, "virgins" in another, "servants" in still another, "soldiers," his "bride," etc., etc. None of these terms are to be taken literally. If we did so, we would find ourselves wondering how soldiers could be sheep or servants could could be wheat, etc.

There are many interpretations of this parable, but the one which most forcefully appeals to the writer is found in the pamphlet, "What Say the Scriptures about Hell," offered free to our readers some time ago, and the offer is still good. It is as follows:

In attempting to expound a parable such as this, an explanation of which the Lord does not furnish us, modesty in expressing our opinion regarding it is certainly appropriate, we therefore offer the following explanation without any attempt to force our views upon the reader, except so far as this own truth-enlightened judgment may commend them as in accord with God's Word and plan. To our understanding, Abraham represented God, and the "rich man" represented the Jewish nation. At the time of the utterance of the parable, and for a long time previous, the Jews had "fared sumptuously every day"-being the special recipients of God's favors. As Paul says: "What advantage, then, hath the JEW? Much every way: chiefly, because to them were committed the oracles of God (Law and Prophecy). "The promises to Abraham and David invested that people with royalty, as represented by the rich man's "purple." The typical sacrifices of the Law constituted them, in a typical sense, a holy (righteous) nation, represented by the rich man's "fine linen,"-symbolic of righteousness.-Rev. 19:8.

Lazarus represented the outcasts from divine favor under the Law, who, though sin-sick, hungered and thirsted after righteousness. Although these included "publicans and sinners" of Israel, in the main they were Gentiles, all nations of the world aside from the Israelites. These, at the time of the utterance of the parable, were entirely destitute of those special divine blessings which Israel enjoyed. They lay at the gate of the rich man. No rich promises of royalty were theirs, not even typically were they cleansed; but, in moral sickness, pollution and sin, they were companions of "dogs." Dogs were regarded as detestable creatures in those days, and the typically clean Jew called the outsiders "heathen" and "dogs," and would never eat with them, nor marry with them, nor have dealings with them. (John 4:9). As to how these ate of the "crumbs" of divine favor which fell from Israel's table of bounties, the Lord's words to the Syro-Phoenician woman give us a key. He said to this Gentile woman,-"It is not meet (proper) to take the children's (Israelites) bread and to cast it to dogs (Gentiles) and she answered, "Truth, Lord, but the dogs eat of the crumbs that fall from their master's table." (Matt. 15:26, 27.) Jesus healed her daughter, thus giving the desired crumb of favor.

But there came a time (when as a nation they rejected and crucified the Son of God) when their typical righteousness ceased—when the promise of royalty ceased to be theirs, and the kingdom was taken from them to be given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof—the Gospel Church, "a holy nation, a peculiar people," (Titus 2:14; 1 Pet. 2:7, 9: Matt. 21:43.) The "rich man" died to all these special advantages, and soon he (the Jewish nation) found himself in a cast-off condition, in tribulation and affliction. In such condition that nation has suffered from that day to this.

Lazarus also died: the condition of the humble Gentiles and the "outcasts" of Israel underwent a change, and from them many were carried by the angels (messengers—apostles, etc.) to Abraham's bosom. Abraham is represented as the father of the faithful, and receives all the children of faith, who are thus recognized as heirs of all the promises made to Abraham; for the children of the flesh are not the children of God, "but the children of the promise are counted for the SEED" (children of Abraham): "which seed is Christ," —and if ye be Christ's, then are ye (believers) Abraham's seed (children) and heirs according to the (Abrahamic) promise." (Gal. 3: 29.) Yes, the termination of the condition of things then existing was well illustrated by the figure, death—the dissolution of the Jewish polity and the withdrawal of the favors which Israel had so long enjoyed. There the Jews were cast off and have since been shown "no favor," while the poor Gentiles, who before had been "aliens from the commonwealth (the polity) of Israel and strangers from the covenant of promise (up to this time given to Israel only) having no hope and WITHOUT GOD in the world," were then "made nigh by the blood of Christ" and reconciled to God.—Eph. 2: 12, 13.

To the symbolisms of death and burial used to illustrate the dissolution of Israel and their burial or hiding among the other nations, our Lord added a further figure—"In hell (hades, the GRAVE) he lifted his eyes, being in torments, and seeth Abraham afar off," etc. The dead cannot lift up their eyes, nor see either near or far, nor converse; for it is distinctly stated, "There is no work, nor device, nor KNOWLEDGE, nor wisdom, in the grave;" and the dead are described as those who "go down into silence." (Eccl. 9: 10; Psa. 115: 17.) But the Lord wished to show that great sufferings or "torment" would be added to the Jews as a nation AFTER their national dissolution and burial, and that they would plead in vain for release at the hand of the formerly despised Gentiles. And history has borne out this parabolic prophecy. For eighteen hundred years the Jews have not only been in distress of mind over their casting out from the favor of God and the loss of their temple and other necessaries to the offering of their sacrifices, but they have been relentlessly persecuted by all classes, including professed Christians. It was from the latter that the Jews have expected mercy, as expressed in the parable—"SEND LAZARUS, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water and cool my tongue;" but the great gulf fixed between them hinders that. Nevertheless, God still recognizes the relationship established in his covenant with them, and addresses them as children of the covenant. (Verse 25.) These "torments" have been the penalties attached to the violation of their covenant, and were as certain to be visited upon them as the blessings promised for obedience. Lev. 26.

The "great gulf fixed" represents the WIDE DIFERENCE between the Gospel Church and the Jews—the former enjoying free grace, joy, comfort and peace, as true sons of God, and the latter holding to the Law, which condemns and torments him. Prejudice, pride and error, from the Jewish side, form the bulwarks of this gulf which hinders the Jew from coming into the condition of true sons of God by accepting Christ and the gospel of his grace. The bulwark of this gulf which hinders the true sons of God from going to the Jew—under the bondage of the Law—is their knowledge that by the deeds of the Law none can be justified before God, and that if any man KEEP THE LAW (put himself under it to try to commend himself to God by reason of obedience to it), Christ shall profit him nothing. (Gal. 5: 2-4.) So, then we, who are of the Lazarus class should not attempt to mix the Law and the Gospel, knowing that they cannot be mixed, and that we can do no good to those who still cling to the Law and reject the SACRIFICE FOR SINS given by our Lord. And they, not seeing the change of dispensation which took place, argue that to deny the Law as the power to save would be to deny all the past history of their race, and to deny all of God's dealings with the "fathers" (promises and dealings which through pride and selfishness they failed rightly to apprehend and use); hence they cannot come over to the bosom of Abraham, into the true rest and peace—the portion of all the true children of faith.—John 8: 39; Rom. 4: 16; Gal. 3: 29.

True, a few Jews probably came into the Christian faith all the way down the Gospel Age, but so few as to be ignored in a parable which represented the people as a whole. As at the first, Dives represented the orthodox Jews, and not the "outcasts of Israel," so down to the close of the parable he continues to represent a similar class, and hence does not represent such Jews as have renounced the Law Covenant and embraced the New Covenant, or such as have become infidels.

The plea of the rich man for the sending of Lazarus to his five brethren we interpret as follows:

The people of Judea, at the time of our Lord's utterance of this parable were repeatedly referred to as "Israel," "the lost sheep of the house of Israel," etc., because all of the tribes were represented there; but actually the majority of the people were of the two tribes, Judah and Benjamin, the masses of the ten tribes not having returned from Babylon under Cyrus' general permission. If the nation of the Jews (chiefly two tribes) were represented in the ONE "rich man," it would be a harmony of numbers to understand the "five brethren" to represent the ten tribes chiefly scattered abroad. The request relative to them was doubtless introduced to show that all SPECIAL favor of God ceased to the ten tribes, as well as to the two more directly addressed. It seems to us evident that Israel only was meant, for no other nation than Israel had "Moses and the prophets" as instructors. (Verse 29.) The ten tribes had so far disregarded Moses and the prophets that they did not return to the land of promise, but preferred to dwell among idolaters; and hence it would be useless to attempt further communication with them, even by one from the dead—figuratively dead, but now figuratively risen, Gentiles who had received Christ.—Eph. 2: 5.

Though the parable mentions no bridging of this "great gulf," other portions of Scripture indicate that it was to be "fixed" only throughout the Gospel age, and that at its close the "rich man," having received the measure of punishment for his sins, (Isa. 40:1, 2, margin) will walk out of his fiery troubles over the bridge of God's mercies yet unfulfilled to that nation.

Though for centuries the Jews have been bitterly persecuted by Pagans, Mohammedans and professed Christians, they are now gradually rising to political freedom and influence; and as a people they will be very prominent among the nations in the beginning of the Millennium. The veil of prejudice still exists, but it will be gradually taken away as the light of the Millennial morning dawns; nor should we be surprised to hear of great awakenings among the Jews and many coming to acknowledge Christ. They will thus leave their HADEAN state (national death) and torment, and come, the first of the nations, to be blessed by the true seed of Abraham, which is Christ, head and body. Their bulwark of race prejudice and pride is falling in some places, and the humble, the poor in spirit, are beginning already to look upon Him whom they have pierced, and to inquire, Is not this the Christ? And as they look the Lord pours upon them the spirit of favor and supplication. (Zech. 12:10.) Therefore, "Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her that her appointed time is accomplished."—Isa. 40:1, 2, margin.

In a word, this parable seems to teach precisely what Paul explained in Rom. 11:19-32. Because of unbelief the natural branches were broken off, and the wild branches grafted into the Abrahamic root-promise. The parable leaves the Jews in their trouble, and does not refer to their final restoration to favor—doubtless because it was not pertinent to the feature of the subject treated, but Paul assures us that when the fulness of the Gentiles—the full number from among the Gentiles necessary to make up the bride of Christ—is come in, "they (the Israelites) shall obtain mercy through your (the Church's) mercy." He assures us that this is God's covenant with FLESHLY Israel who lost the higher, spiritual, promises, but are still the possessors of certain earthly promises, to become the chief nation of the earth, etc. In proof of this statement, he quotes from the prophets, saying, "The deliverer shall come out of Zion (the glorified Church), and shall turn away ungodliness from JACOB (the fleshly seed)." "As concerning the Gospel (high calling), they are enemies (cast off) for your sakes; but as touching the election, they are beloved for the fathers' sakes." "For God hath concluded them all in unbelief, that he might have mercy upon all. O the depth of the riches, both of the wisdom and knowledge of God."—Rom. 11:26 33. (Hell pamphlet, pages 37-44.)

Thus we see that the parable reasonably interpreted does not refer to the ETERNAL STATE of the sinner, in fact it has no reference whatever to individual sinners, but applies only to the temporary condition of the cast-off Jewish nation after its rejection of Christ, and until its restoration to favor when "the fulness of the Gentiles" shall have come in. (Rom. 11:25.) The pamphlet above referred to also contains explanations of the parable of the "Sheep and Goats," (Matt. 25:31-46); Gehenna, whose "fire is not quenched and whose worm dieth not," (Matt. 5:22-30); the "angels who kept not their first estate" and were "cast down to hell," (2 Pet. 2:4, Jude 6); and "the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone," (Rev. 21:8; 20:14; 19:20.) FEED THE BIRDS.

Apropos of the fact that the ground is under a covering of snow, people in the rural section have now an opportunity to do an excellent work in feeding birds. Partridges and other game birds and animals should be systematically apportioned food each day.

The partridges and song birds will repay the farmers many times over for the trouble of saving their lives. Farmers and others hardly appreciate the fact that partridge is the champion destroyer of the seeds of noxious weeds and of pestiferous insects.

Government investigators examined more than 800 birds, collected from 21 states. They found that more than 50 per cent, of the food is composed of seeds, mostly, of weeds, and that 50 different weeds were represented in the food. Some such birds were killed whose crops and stomach contained 3000 weed seeds, and the calculation was made that from September 1 to April 30 the partridges eat 575 tons of weeds seeds, in the one state of Virginia. In the investigation it was found that more than 31 per cent. of the food is of insects, when they abound, and that 119 different kinds are eaten by the birds. Therefore the game wardens' advice to "feed the game birds" comes home to every farmer.

Starr, the initial number of which, on Mexican home-life, appears in The Designer for February, will cause this already popular magazine to be more than ever eagerly welcomed. "Women Who Wear Crowns," by J. L. Harbour, "Modern Tea-Room Decoration," by Mary Kilsyth, and Julia Davis Chandler's interesting contribution, "The Feminine Side of Rural Life in Pennsylvania," all accompanied by many illustrations, are both appropriate and readable. "Athletics for the Snow-Bound Girl" is the subject of Bertha Hasbrook's discourses "In the Interest of Beauty," and the readers of this number of The Designer will learn "How a man Should Propose," or at least how Lee McCrae thinks he should go through the nerve-trying ordeal. Valentine parties, a Washington supper and a Colonial drill supply the entertainment features, and the short stories are "Bread upon the Water," Fancywork in embroidery, raffia, knitting and crochet is show, and the fashions give a decided hint of spring. A special article describes becoming and comfortable tea-gowns and wrappers.

TELL YOUR SISTER.

A Beautiful Complexion is an impossibility with good pure blood, the sort that only exists in connection with good digestion, a healthy liver and bowels. Karl's Clover Root Tea acts directly on the bowels, liver and kidneys keeping them in perfect health. Price 25 cts. and 50 cts. For sale by Neely & Minick.

A CONTINUAL STRAIN.

Many men and women are constantly subjected to what they commonly term "a continual strain" because of some financial or family trouble. It wears and distresses them both mentally and physically, affecting their nerves badly and bringing on liver and kidney ailments, with the attendant evils of constipation, loss of appetite, sleeplessness, low vitality and despondency. They cannot, as a rule, get rid of this "continual strain," but they can remedy its health destroying effects by taking frequent doses of Green's August Flower. It tones up the liver, stimulates the kidneys, insures healthy bodily functions, gives vim and spirit to one's whole being, and eventually dispels the physical or mental distress caused by that "continual strain." Trial bottle of August Flower, 25c; regular size. 75c. For sale by Neely & Minick.

Rheumatism Cured in a Day.

"Mystic Cure" for Rheumatism and Neuralgia radically cures in 1 to 3 days. Its action upon the system is remarkable and mysterious. It removes at once the cause, and the disease immediately disappears. The first dose greatly benefits, 75 cents. Sold by Neely & Minick Druggists Mt. Union, Pa.

Tonic to the System.

For liver troubles and constipation there is nothing better than DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little Pills. They do not weaken the stomach. Their action upon the system is mild, pleasant and harmless. Bob Moore, of LaFayette, Ind., says, "No use talking, DeWitt's Little Early Risers do their work. All other pills I have used gripe and make me sick in the stomach and never cured me. DeWitt's Early Risers proved to be the long sought relief. They are simply perfect." Persons traveling find Little Early Risers the most reliable remedy to carry with them. Sold by Neely & Minick.

KMOWLEDGE versus MYSTERY.

"The secret things belong unto the Lord our God; but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children forever." Deut. 29:29.

It is impossible to over-estimate the importance of knowledge. "Knowledge is power." This is true not only in the natural but also in the spiritual. "This is the victory that OVERCOMETH THE WORLD, even our faith," and knowledge is the prime essential to a proper faith. The faith that is not based upon knowledge is credulity, blind superstition. God has not required us to accept and believe absurdities. On the contrary he has said, "Come and let us reason together," and therefore we properly expect REASONABLE answers to our questions when we come to our Heavenly Father, humbly seeking knowledge. The Bible is God's revelation of himself and his purposes, and since he has exhorted us to use our reason, why should we refuse to do so?

The large majority of Christians lack that "perfect peace" of mind and heart, which the Lord promises to his children. Why? Because it is written, "Grace and peace be multiplied unto you THROUGH THE KNOWLEDGE of God, and of Jesus our Lord." 2-Pet. 1:2. Yet for generations the theologians have apparently exerted every influence to keep us from searching into the "deep things of God," that we might have a more perfect knowledge of Him.

In the "Dark Ages" people were satisfied (or at least silenced) when they earnestly inquired of their spiritual advisers concerning these most important questions of life, death and the hereafter, and received the reply, "It is a mystery." And there was no other course open to them, they knew not where to turn. Bibles cost several hundred dollars each, and could only be found in old monasteries, chained to a table or desk, and even had every man possessed one of these Bibles at that time, he could not have profited by it, because, as is well known, the Bible was not yet translated out of the Hebrew, Greek and Latin languages into the vernacular of the common people, and was therefore only intelligible to the priests and scholars of the day.

But we live in a different day. "Light, more light," is the watchword of today. Knowledge is what the people demand, the KNOWLEDGE OF THE TRUTH, moreover. They are tired and sick of guess-work, and speculation and dogma, they want a reason for everything, and above all other things they require a reasonable foundation for their religious belief. And although "darkness has covered the earth and gross darkness the people," (Isa. 60:2), for centuries, yet the Lord is now lifting the veil of ignorance and superstition, as he promised by the mouth of his servant Daniel, saying, "Shut up the words, and seal the book, even unto the TIME OF THE END; many shall run to and fro (by rapid transit) and KNOWLEDGE SHALL BE INCREASED," and none of the wicked shall understand, but the WISE (toward God) SHALL UNDERSTAND." Dan. 12:4,10.

Therefore, it is to our shame that so many of the Lord's people are in ignorance of the great and momentous events now transpiring and preparing for the consummation of all things which God "hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Act. 3:19-21.

Our text declares that "the SECRET things belong unto the Lord our God," and it is indeed true that some things are hidden from our understanding, because our minds are finite, and could not grasp the infinite, nor would it profit us to do so, else our Heavenly Father would have so arranged our brains that we could understand. But "those things which are revealed" should be of the most intense interest to all of the Lord's truly consecrated people. And it is our privilege and our duty to "rightly divide the word of truth" so that we can determine what are these things "revealed" for our comfort and instruction.

For example, the condition of the dead is NOT one of the SECRET things of God, for he has clearly revealed this matter in his Word. It should not be a "mystery," and would NOT SEEM SO to any, except for the great Deceiver, Satan, who has been indefatigable in his efforts to make this subject of death a mysterious thing.

This mystery began in Eden. The Lord God had said, "Ye shall surely die." But Satan declared, "Ye shall NOT surely die." (Gen. 2:17; 3:4.) What a mystery was this! We can scarcely blame Mother Eve for being confused over such a statement. Thus the "father of lies" sowed the first seed of mystery, which grew and flourished from age to age until it blossomed forth in that great "Mystery of Iniquity," Babylon the Great, the mother of harlots (the TRUE CHURCH is a VIRGIN, —2 Cor. 11: 2) and abominations of the earth. Note the mark upon her forehead,—"a name written, MYSTERY."—Rev. 17: 5.

And who is he that shall forbid us to seek for knowledge? Surely not our God, for he has said, "Seek and ye shall find, ask and ye shall receive, knock and it shall be opened unto you." "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not, and it shall be given him." Jesus said "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine," and "ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Jno. 7: 17; 8: 32; James 1: 5; Matt. 7: 7.

Some of our Christian friends quote the statement of our Lord when he was about to leave his disciples and ascend unto the Father,—"It is not for you to know the times or the seasons which the Father hath put in his own power (literally, authority.) Acts 1: 7. But why do they stop here? Why do they not finish the whole quotation, and read the very next verse, which says, "But YE SHALL RECEIVE POWER (i.e. ability to know the times and seasons, and the matters concerning the Kingdom in which you are now so interested) AFTER that the Holy Spirit is come upon you," (at Pentecost)" etc. Acts 1: 8. This is also in harmony with our Lord's previous statement to his disciples, "The Spirit of truth, (the Holy Spirit) will guide you into ALL TRUTH, . . and SHOW YOU THINGS TO COME." Jno. 16: 13. Yet how many take a position in direct contradiction to this, claiming we cannot know anything about the future!

The word of God is full of exhortations to seek wisdom and knowledge. "Yea, if thou criest after knowledge, and liftest up thy voice for understanding; if if thou seekest her as silver, and searchest for her as for hid treasures; THEN thou shalt understand the fear of the Lord, and find the knowledge of God. For the Lord giveth wisdom: out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding." Prov. 2:3-6.

How foolish, then, for any of the Lord's people to sit down, apparently, and say, "Oh, I am so glad that all these things are mysteries. It strengthens my faith so much to believe some thing I can't understand, and it increases my peace and joy so much to meditate day and night upon things which are contradictory and unreasonable." Ah, no, friend. "Awake, thou that sleepest," for there is One who saith to the Laodicean (lukewarm) Church, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." Rev. 3:20. "Let your loins be girded about and your lights burning; and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their lord, when he will return from the wedding; that when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately. Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord when he cometh (is come) shall find watching; verily I say unto you, that he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them." (Luke 12:35-38.) "SIT DOWN TO MEAT." Ah, yes, to such a feast of fat things as hath not entered into the heart of man to conceive of! "Things old and new,"—satisfying to the full all our cravings after the knowledge of the "deep things of God."

There is not a single reasonable question concerning the character of our Heavenly Father and his glorious purposes, and his blessed Son and the Kingdom, which need go without a satisfactory answer in these days, for it is written that "in the days of the voice of the seventh angel (messenger), when he shall begin to sound, the mystery of God (concerning his plans and purposes) SHOULD BE FINISHED, as he hath declared to his servants the prophets." (Rev. 10:7.) And "this day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears."

Let us therefore take unto our selves "the whole armor of God, that we may be able to withstand in the evil day," now upon us, for if we do not, we shall surely be swept away into the great sea of infidelity by the tempestuous winds of Higher Criticism, Evolution, Christian Science, Agnosticism, Spiritism, etc., etc., which are beginning to beat so fiercely upon the professing church of Jesus Christ.

WALKS AND TALKS.

BY FRANCLYN MARTHERON.

"I'll strive to be worthy!" Theodore Roosevelt, president of the United States by the call of his fellow countrymen, strengthens that trust and faith we hold within our hearts and souls as he starts upon the second stage of his great national career with these words upon his lips.

Yes, our trust and confidence and faith was strengthened the very moment he spoke those words; and when he took the oath our love and LOYALTY was doubled.

It is no secret why so vast a multitude of people have increased faith and trust in Theodore Roosevelt. True, we trust him and love him,—love him with a love that is indescribable,—because he is so courageous and honest and so stacked with commonsense; but we trust, and have faith in Theodore Roosevelt because he is A MAN THAT DOES, BUT DOES NOT TALK. Oh, what a great, good, noble and brave President we have in the mighty Roosevelt! Listen: "A square deal for every man, rich and poor, alike."

In reading over the lives of some of our greatest poets and master writers who lived in the early part of the nineteenth century, the men who laid the foundation of American literature, one will, no doubt, agree that the life of Washington Irving is the most romantic, most beautiful and far more sublime than that of any other who lived in his age.

But it is the beautiful that appeals mostly to us; altho, the other phases of his life's chapters are strong and drawing and holds the attention wonderfully.

As in the case of a large number of the master writers of all time, a sad misfortune—but nearer a calamity—visited Irving in his early life that inspired into his soul a determination, if you please, to spend the remainder of his days here below to work and use his talents, only in the memory of the one whose passing brought sadness and bitter sorrow to his heart.

The story is a familiar one. A Miss Hoffman to whom Irving was engaged to be married died after a brief illness in her eighteenth year. Her memory—her soul, her being—lay in his mind ready to be called forth by the slightest occasion. Only those who know the great Irving best can appreciate his sorrow.

Washington Irving's remaining days were spent in travel and in writing and all he did since cruel death took from him his love, he did in memory of her. But the true and pure greatness of Irving lies in the single fact that he never again thought of marriage, but forever kept before him the image of his early love in her first youth and beauty.

Washington Irving is honored the world round and his writings are as fresh to-day as they were over half a century ago,—and hence we call him great. But wherein does his true greatness lie? I will tell you. In the most beautiful chapter of his life, in that chapter which tells us of his love, is where we read of the true greatness of Irving—therein lies the greatness of Washington Irving.

They call him Watson. Tom Watson. He's from Georgia—and lives near the South Carolina line [Sequense]. He's a scrapper and is hunting "scrap" to scrap with. This is all Tom has to do now. But he's energetic, wonderfully energetic and vigorous—so he has decided to print a magazine—the name I believe is, "Tommie's Own Phillistine. In here you will see all the scrap gathered up-to-date. Tom Watson is editor himself. Willie Hearst is chief horn blower and watchman in the engine room. Tom comes from the oldschool—I believe he is the only surviving member of that famous cowpuncher trio who gave the country the measles and a bilious spell in the early fifties.

Tom's first issue of his magazine was heralded by chief horn blower Willie Hearst last week. It has not as yet reached the subscriber. But thru the thoughtfulness of Willie Hearst, who, by the way prints every once and awhile a sheet called, "Newski Yellovitch," the public got an idea of what was to be their common fate.

In the first editorial we are told to look out first for the twenty-one cannon shots the reader is requested to imagine to himself to hear spout off. No reason is given for this strange introductory—but I suppose, since it is twenty-one shots we are to imagine to hear boom out, that they are intended to solute a couple of fellows at the same time who imagined last summer they would be the American President from the 4th of last March on for four years—or at least thought "they ought to be." [Yes,-er er-just put up that window a bit-a-er-er-little fresh air wouldn't go half bad!]

The prelude being "shot off," the next in the procession, as announced, will be an article written by the editor on the subject "The Best Way to Proceed to Get Ready to Draft a New American Constitution." Before reading this article one is requested to take a cup of strong French coffee.

The next on the program (and the next to the last number) is a cartoon. The picture represents a piece of earth about two square inches in size and labeled "The United States of America." On each corner sits a portly, cross-eyed monster with a diamond covering his whole breast. In the middle of this plot of earth stands an enormous elephant, whose feet actually cover the whole plot of ground. On his sides are stamped the letters G. O. P. which stand for, "GET OFF THE PLANET," we are told. On the elephant sits something that looks more like an old Roman God that a human being. But we are advised by Willie to tell our friends that he's a man we all know—we mustn't lie about it. Well, on the "man's" head is a crown of sparkling gold and diamonds and below this crown shines something white like ivory. Continuing, the Bugler tells us, that there will be a mighty oak tree—branches, acorns and all—resting on the shoulder of this "man" and labeled "The Big Stick's Sprouting Season." Concluding, we are told to imagine that we hear moans and groans coming from the elephant and to resemble the cries we hear sometimes coming from the oppressed people in Russia.

The last on the program [more air!] is an article written by Willie Hearst, the watchman. It is to be entitled, "Confessions of a Yellow Journalist—or How We Used to Write Things for Poor People to Read and Play the Man Behind all at Once and the Same Time."

Tom adds a note to Willie's announcement and says that the next number will sell for 9c instead of 10c. He says the price of oil has gone up a little so he will go down as he doesn't want anybody to be hindered from getting "Tom's Own Phillistine" whom he knows John Dollar Rockthrower is trying to squash.

No Treating.

The custom of treating to drinks will become a matter of history if a sufficient number of members of the legislature of Pennsylvania can be induced to vote for a bill which has been presented in the house of representatives by Mr. Hitchcock of Tioga county by request. This bill would make it a misdemeanor for a person to buy or give to a thirsty companion a drink of any kind of intoxicating beverage whatever, and for the privilege of buying a drink for a friend the purchaser will have to pay a fine of not less than $5 nor more than $50 for the first offense and for a repetition of the act he will be fined not less than $20 or more than 150 and serve from ten to ninety days in jail.

The Thief on The Cross

—AND—

The Transfiguration.

(LUKE 23:39-43; MATTHEW 17:1-9.)

Our Lord's words to the dying thief are frequently quoted in support of the popular belief and in opposition to what we hold to be the Scriptural teaching on the subject of death and the resurrection. Those who accept the popular view tell us that the thief went to heaven the moment of his death, because the Lord said to him, "To-day shalt thou be with me in Paradise."

But, let us carefully examine this incident. In the first place, what did the thief request of the Lord, -that he should take him to heaven? No, he said, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." Did the Lord come into his kingdom the day he died on the cross? No. Then it is evident that whatever the thief meant and whatever Jesus meant by his reply, he could not have meant that the thief's request would be granted that day, because the Lord's kingdom did not come that day, nor has it yet come, for we still pray, "Thy kingdom come thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven." Surely the will of God is very far from being "done in earth as it is heaven," except by a very, very small minority.

Again, those who insist that Jesus meant he would take the thief with him that very day to Paradise, (which some think is heaven, while others call it "the intermediate state") must encounter another difficulty. Is it reasonable that Jesus would promise to this criminal, whom he probably had never spoken with before they met on Calvary, that he would take him to heaven with him, when to his own disciples, who had "left all" to follow him for three and one-half years, he had said, "Whither I go, ye cannot come,," (Jno. 13:33) and again, "I go to prepare a place for you," and "I will come again and receive you unto myself" (Jno. 14:2,3.) Is it reasonable that the Lord would grant the thief's request and refuse his chosen disciples?

Again, if we hold that Jesus took the thief to heaven, or to any other place that day, we contradict the statement of the Lord himself, who declared, "As Jonah was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth," - not in heaven, or paradise, but in the earth, the grave, whence he was "raised the third day," as he foretold.-Luke 9:22.

And the Apostle Peter corroborates the above, saying, "his soul was not left in hell, neither did his flesh see corruption,"-Acts 2:31. The word translated "hell" is from the Greek word "Hades" and means the grave, the state of the dead. To this interpretation even the "Apostles' Creed" agrees, declaring, "He descended into hell, the third day he rose from the dead." Now, is it not evident that if Jesus descended into hell, he certainly did not ascend to heaven from the cross that day? Indeed he did not ascend to heaven until forty days after his resurrection from the dead.

Is it not clearly manifest from the foregoing that there is something radically wrong with the generally accepted interpretation of this incident?

But, let us examine the matter still more carefully. Where is the difficulty? We find that it lies almost wholly in so small a thing as the position of a comma. If we change the place of the comma, and put it after instead of before "to-day," we have harmony with all the other Scriptures bearing on this subject, and we then read it, "I say unto thee to-day, (this day), thou shalt be with me in Paradise."

"But have we a right to alter the position of the comma? Certainly: the punctuation of the Bible is not inspired. The writers of the Bible used no punctuation. It was invented about four hundred years ago. It is merely a modern convenience, and should be so used as to bring out sense, in harmony with all other Scriptures. Instances of a similar use of the word 'to-day' in modern literature are quite frequent; and in the Scriptures we call attention to the following:

"Therefore I command thee this thing to-day." --Deut.15:15.

"I have set before thee this day life and good, death and evil," --Deut.30:15.

"I command thee this day to love the Lord thy God." --Deut.30:16.

"I would to God that not only thou but also all that hear me this day were both almost and altogether such as I am, save these bonds." --Acts 26:29.

"Not only does the sense of this passage require the punctuation suggested, but its harmony with all the remaining Scriptures similarly demands it, and there can be no reasonable or valid objection to it offered. To suppose that our Lord went to Paradise immediately, would be to suppose an impossibility, for Paradise has not yet been re-established. Furthermore, it is distinctly stated that our Lord's body was buried in Joseph's tomb, and that his soul, or being, went to sheol, hades, and that he was dead, and not alive in Paradise or elsewhere in the interim. The Scriptures distinctly assure us, not that our Lord came down from heaven, or from Paradise, at his resurrection: but that he "rose from the dead, on the third day, according to the Scriptures." (1 Cor.15:4). Our Lord's own words, after his resurrection, were, "Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day." (Luke 24:46). Again he said to Mary, "I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father and your Father; unto my God and your God." --John 20:17.

But let us return to the dying thief. "We can have no doubt as to the import of his petition. He meant that whenever Jesus reached his Kingdom power, he desired to be favored, cared for. Now note our Lord's answer. He does not say that he has no kingdom: but, on the contrary, he indicates by his response that the thief's request was a proper one. The word translated "verily" or "indeed" is the Greek word "Amen," and signifies "So be it," or "Your request is granted." "I say to thee this day (this dark day, when it seems as though I am an impostor, and I am dying as a felon), thou shalt be with me in Paradise." The substance of this promise is that, when the Lord has established his Kingdom it will be a Paradise, and the thief will be remembered and be in it."

"This makes our Lord's word's perfectly clear and reasonable. He might have told the thief more if he had chosen. He might have told him that the reason he would be privileged to be in Paradise was because his ransom was then and there being paid. He might have told him further that he was dying for and ransoming the other thief also, as well as the whole gaping and deriding multitude before him, the millions then entombed, and the millions yet unborn. We know this, because we know that "Jesus Christ, by the grace of God, tasted death for every man," "gave himself a ransom for ALL," that in due time all might have opportunity to return to the Edenic condition, forfeited by the first man's sin, and redeemed for men by Christ's righteous sacrifice.—Heb. 2:9; 1 Tim. 2:5,6; Acts 3:19.

"The garden of Eden was but an illustration of what the earth will be when fully released from the curse-perfected and beautified. The word "paradise" is of Arabic origin, and signifies "a garden." The Septuagint translation renders Gen. 2:8 thus: "God planted a paradise in Eden." When Christ shall have established his Kingdom, and bound evil, etc., this earth will gradually become a paradise, and the two thieves and all others that are in their graves shall come into it, and then by becoming obedient to its laws they may live in it and enjoy it forever. We doubt not, however, that the kind words spoken in that dark hour to the suffering Saviour will no more lose a special and suitable reward than the gift of a cup of cold water, or other small kindnesses, done to those whom this King is "not ashamed to call his brethren." -Matt. 10:42.

(The above quotations are from pages 668-670 of "The New Creation," which will be loaned free upon request sent to the writer)

The Transfiguration Scene is also used by our Christian friends to prove that the dead are not dead, but alive in heaven or elsewhere. They say Moses and Elias were seen with Christ on the mount, and therefore they must have been alive, must have come down from heaven. But those who hold to this position must necessarily contradict the Apostle Paul, who declared that "Christ should suffer, and that he should be the first that should rise from the dead," and that he should "become the first-fruits of them that slept." Acts 26:23; 1 Cor. 15:20,23.

It must be manifest to every unprejudiced mind that if Christ was the "first to rise from the dead," then Moses and Elias were not risen from the dead at the time they appeared with Christ on the Mount, because this incident took place before the Lord's crucifixion. Moreover Jesus had said to Nicodemus, "No man hath ascended up to heaven but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man." (John 3:13). And Peter declared on the Day of Pentecost, "David is not ascended into the heavens, * * but is dead and buried (not alive in heaven) and his sepulchre is with us unto this day." (Acts 2:34,29). Thus we have incontrovertible proof that it was impossible for Moses and Elias to have been actually present with Jesus on the Mount of Transfiguration.

How then shall we understand this incident? Our Lord gives us the key in his words to his disciples, as they were coming down the mountain: "Tell the vision to no man, until the Son of man be risen again from the dead." Matt 17:9.

The Transfiguration scene is thus declared to have been a vision, an appearance, a picture presented to the minds of the disciples, and was probably similar to the experiences granted to John on the island of Patmos, and described in the Book of Revelation. It was a vision, not a reality, and was doubtless just as effectual as the reality would have been, for the Lord's object was evidently to encourage his disciples, to strengthen their faith in him, and that such was the result Peter shows when he declares, "We have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eye-witnesses of his majesty,-when we were with him in the holy mount." 2 Pet.2:16-18.

This scene was without doubt the fulfillment of of our Lord's promise in Matt.16:28: "There be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of man coming in his kingdom." Since Peter associates this experience with the Lord's future power and glory, we may understand Moses to represent the overcomers who preceded Christ, described in Heb. 11:39,40, who cannot be made perfect until the Kingdom is established. Elijah represented the overcomers of the Gospel age, the true and faithful members of the body of Christ.

Let me quote again from "The New Creation." "In this tableau the three disciples formed no part. They were merely witnesses. Christ was the central figure; his features and garments, shining with miraculous lustre, represented in figure the glories which belong to the spirit nature, which our Lord received at his resurrection," 'the express image of the Father's person.' It is this same spirit glory that is represented in the visions of Revelation, where our Lord is represented with eyes as a flame of fire, and his feet bright as burning brass, etc. At his second advent our Lord will no longer be flesh, because, as he testified, "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God." He is now, and ever will be, a glorious spirit being of the highest order--the divine nature: and the transfiguration was intended to convey to the minds of the disciples a faint conception of the glory which excelleth."

Moses and Elias represented the two phases of the Kingdom of Heaven, the one on the earthly plane, the other on the spiritual plane, which under Christ as the Head will constitute "the seed," which God promised to Abraham, saying, "I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven (spiritual seed) and as the sand which is upon the sea shore (earthly seed); and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." Gen.2:17,18.

Thus we trust we have by the Lord's grace been enabled to show that the foregoing incidents are in harmony with the other Scriptural statements that the dead are really dead, out of existence, and cannot become alive again until the hour when the Son of man shall call them out of their graves. (Jno.5:28,29). The Word of God cannot contradict itself. If it seems so to do, is it not more becoming that we humbly acknowledge our inability to "rightly divide the word of truth," and that the fault lies with us rather than with the inspired word of the Lord, handed down to us by the Apostles and Prophets, "holy men of God, who spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." 2 Pet.-1:21.

HILL VALLEY.

Supervisor H. E. Hooper is improving the road considerably of late. H. E. knows how to do the work.

John Harencame was a visitor here recently.

Mrs. Morrow Harencame of Braddock has been visiting here with friends the past week.

Joseph" Reck's barn in Chestnut Grove was destroyed by fire on Saturday evening, all his grain and farming implements being destroyed. No insurance.

Dr. G. F. Beatty was through our Valley on Monday.

The township school will open on Monday Sept., 4.

Mrs. George Schmittle of Altoona was the guest of A. J. Miller and family a few days last week.

Mrs. D. N. Palmer and son Remick visited at Three Springs a few days last week.

Alice Snyder expects to attend Juniata College the coming fall term.

The people of Hill Valley will hold a picnic at Singers Gap on Saturday September 2 and a festival in the evening. This will be a union picnic to which all are cordially invited to come and bring their baskets along. This will be a fine place to spend the day and there will no doubt be a large crowd present. The Shirleysburg cornet band will be on the ground and furnish music during the day. In the afternoon a game of base ball will be played between Shirleysburg and Hill Valley and will be a leading feature. Refreshments of all kinds will be served on the grounds during the day and evening. Let no one miss this outing.

Miss Lottie Gamble of Shade Gap was a visitor to our Valley last week. Miss Gamble will teach the Shade Gap school this year.

Miss Alda Booher and brother Master John of Harrisburg are visiting the Booher family this week.

A New Residence Suburb.

The Union Realty Corporation, an enterprising West Virginia Real Estate Company have purchased from Mr. Alexander Maxwell a track of about 10 acres adjoining the southern extension of Jefferson and Washington streets, and have plotted it into lots, streets and alleys which they have staked off, graded, and scraped in first class condition. A portion of the lots will be offered for sale at public auction on Thursday next and the indications are that all the lots offered will sell readily.

This transaction is an indication that the prosperity of Mount Union is attracting general attention and the investment of additional capital from elsewhere here in various lines of business may be reasonably anticipated in the immediate future. Mt. Union growth has been steady and substantial, real estate values are not inflated and there is a permanent and real basis for their rapid enhancement. The need of an Addition of this kind is apparent, and it will furnish another out-let for our rapidly growing population, and aid the expansion and development of an important section of the town.

Where is Jefferson Heights Addition?

This plan of lots immediately adjoins Washington and Jefferson streets on the south, and has been laid out in conformity with the street plans of the town. The property was purchased from Mr. Alexander Maxwell and is highly diserable for residence purposes. Fifty choice lots will be sold here at public auction Thursday next, rain or shine beginning at 10 a. m. Terms: one-third cash, residue in two equal payments, six and twelve months with interest. A brass band will be present all day, and a general invitation to attend is extended to the public.

Everybody Invited.

Ladies are cordially invited to attend the Jefferson Heights Addition lot sale Thursday next, beginning 10 a. m. The best of order will prevail, and an excellent Brass Band will discourse music during the day. A lot valued at $250 will be given away by public drawing in which all present may perticipate. Lots will be sold on easy terms, and the public are earnestly requested to inspect this beautiful plan of lots in advance of the sale.

A Great Religious Convention.

A convention for the deepening of the spiritual life for the churches of the United States and Canada will be held at Rochester, N. Y., in the Central Presbyterian church, Sophia street, corner of Church street, beginning on Friday, September 1, 1905, and continuing eight successive days, including Friday, September 8, 1905.

Theme: The Cross of Christ. The theme comprehends full salvation purchased by the blood of Jesus, and includes the consummation of redemption at our Lord's second coming (Rom. viii: 24). You are invited, in His name, to come apart for eight days to wait upon God, especially to meet God; to the end that you, His blood-bought children, may in a deeper sense, "know Him and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being made conformable unto His death."

"They came unto the place which is called Calvary: there they crucified Him" (Luke xxiii:33).

"I have been crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave Himself for me" (Gal. ii:20).

"The Word of the Cross * * * is the power of God" (1 Cor. i:18).

Letter from Rev. A. B. Winchester, pastor of Knox Presbyterian church, Toronto, Canada:

"To the saints and faithful brethren in Christ Jesus in the United States and Canada, grace be to you and peace from God our father and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

Moved, as we believe, by the Holy Spirit, several of the Lord's servants attending the International Missionary Union at Clifton Springs in June last, unburdened their hearts to each other and before the Lord respecting the great need for the fuller teaching of 'the Cross' and the consequent deepening of spiritual life at the present time.

Out of this came the conception of the Conference now called in the name of the Lord.

The hearts of these brethren have been much cheered by the precious, manifest tokens of the blessed Spirit's leading in the several preparatory steps now taken. As far as these have been expressed, it is the mind of the brethren that, seeking as we so earnestly do, the presidency of the Holy Spirit, no prominence is given to the names of men lest we should even seem to exploit these for their patronage or their glory. 'He that glorieth let him glory in the Lord.' Although our eyes are toward the hills, from whence cometh our help, nevertheless we are devoutly thankful that, among the signers of the call for this Conference, are some of the most eminent saints and Bible teachers on this continent.

The central thought is, God forbid that I should glory 'save in the Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ by whom the world is crucified unto me and I unto the world.' 'Wherefore, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling,' of every denominational name, in these last days when the Cross is an offence, the love of many cold, and infidelity rampant among even professing Christians and ministers, let us prayerfully, expectantly, humbly come together to consider the Apostle and High Priest of our confession, Christ Jesus. (See Heb. x:19-25).

Oh! that collectively we may be a whole burnt offering and meal offering - expressing consecration and service unto God. Brethren, earnestly and incessantly pray that by the power and blessing of the Holy Spirit great blessing may come not only to those who shall attend the sessions of the Conference, but also and chiefly through them to scattered multitudes.

The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Spirit be with you all.

Your fellow servant in Christ Jesus,
A. B. WINCHESTER."

Hicks for September.

On and touching Friday the 1st no reader need be surprised to see or hear of a crisis in the elements—rain, wind and thunder, with equinoctial tempests in the south coast regions very probable. The disturbances at this time will, in all probability, be prolonged in cloudy, threatening, and possibly stormy weather, up to and through the 3rd, 4th. These are reactionary storm days, and they will bring a return of disturbed and stormy conditions, even if high barometer and fair weather should immediately precede them. Change to rising barometer, westerly winds and clearing, cooler weather will touch most parts about the 5th to 7th.

The regular Vulcan storm period central on the 9th, will be felt as early as the 7th or 8th, in falling barometer, change to warmer and growing cloudiness in western sections. As these conditions increase and advance eastward over the country, storms of wind, rain and thunder will visit most localities about Saturday the 9th to Monday the 11th.

There is always much tendency to prolonged disturbances during the immediate presence of Earth's autumnal equinoctial, especially when full or new Moon falls near the ending of storm periods. These phases of the Moon in September, the equinoctial month, always find the Moon on or near the celestial equator. Hence we find full Moon on the 13th and Moon on the equator on the 14th. The 13th to 15th are also reactionary storm days. We may therefore look for decided storm conditions to continue over these dates. This is a period of probable tidal wave, and heavy equinoctial storms in the south. Barometric and other recognized indications of approaching hurricanes, in all the gulf regions, should be carefully noted all this time. One of the most probable earthquake periods in September will be central on the 13th extending twenty-four to thirty-six hours before and after that day. A marked change to high barometer, westerly gales and much cooler will almost certainly follow general and severe storms at this time. Frosts in many localities, especially northward, between the 15th and 19th, may reasonably be expected.

The next regular storm period is central on the 21st, this being also the central day of Earth's autumnal equinox This period will express itself in falling barometer, rising temperature, threatening storm clouds, with rain, wind and thunder, the crisis falling on the 21st to 23rd, progressively from west to east. It behooves all who navigate the lakes and high seas to keep eyes trained on approaching possibilities at this and other September periods. Another high barometer and change to decidedly cooler will come in from the northwest close behind these storms.

The 27th. 28th and 29th are reactionary storm days, not far from the center of the autumnal equinox, and with the Moon at new and on the celestial equator on the 28th, and in perigee, or nearest the Earth, on the 29th. We predict that within the period embraced between Wednesday 27th and Saturday the 30th, many wide-sweeping and violent storms will visit various parts of sea and land all round the Earth. Localities exposed to the ravages of high tides, and violent inrushing of tidal waves, should keep in mind the probabilities of danger at this time. This same period is also one of maximum earthquake probability. Seismic disturbances and volcanic activity will be natural concomitants of of all these phenomena. They are all alike the product of universal, cosmic forces that are perturbed and out of a state of normalcy at this particular time.

A CONTINUAL STRAIN

Many men and women are constantly subjected to what they commonly term "a continual strain" because of some financial or family trouble. It wears and distresses them both mentally and physically, affecting their nerves badly and bringing on liver and kidney ailments, with the attendant evils of constipation, loss of appetite, sleeplessness, low vitality and despondency. They cannot, as a rule, get rid of this "continual strain," but they can remedy its health destroying effects by taking frequent doses of Green's August Flower. It tones up the liver, stimulates the kidneys, insures healthy bodily functions, gives vim and spirit to one's whole being, and eventually dispels the physical or mental distress caused by that "continual strain." Trial bottle of August Flower, 25c; regular size, 75c. For sale by Neely & Minick.

What is adulterated paint?

Is clay paint? Is chalk paint? Is barytes paint? Is lime paint? Is benzine? Is water? Is soap? Is mud?

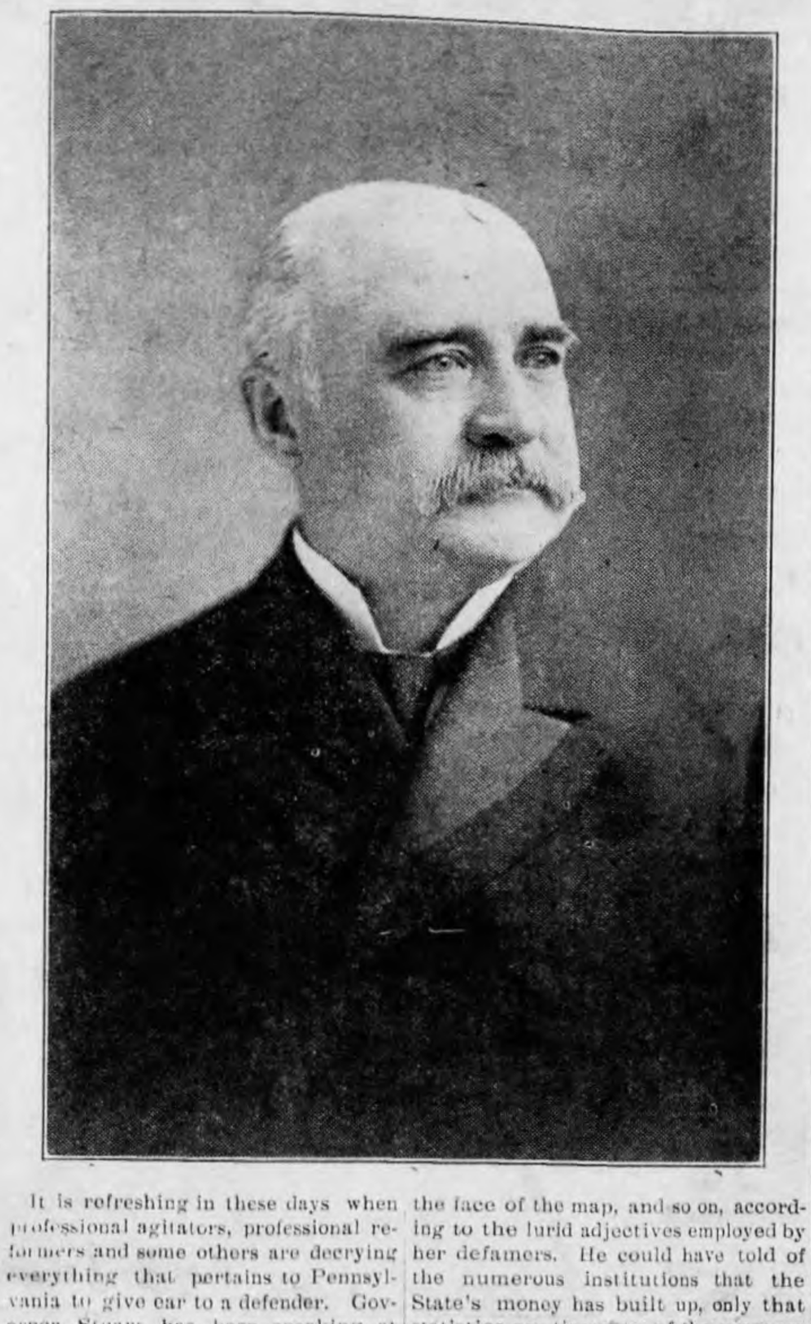
VOL. XXXVI MOUNT UNION, HUNTINGDON COUNTY PA., AUGUST 21 1908 NO.

GOV. STUART SPEAKS FOR PENNSYLVANIA

Points from the Executive's Address Made at Chautauqua, N. Y., Last Week.



It is refreshing in these days when professional agitators, professional reformers and some others are decrying everything that pertains to Pennsylvania to give ear to a defender. Governor Stuart has been speaking at Chautauqua, where many people from many States gather. We wonder if there is commonwealth in the entire Union whose citizens think they have as much or anything like as much to be proud of as Pennsylvania.

Farms and real estate are not taxed in Pennsylvania for State purposes.

Practically all of the State's revenue is derived from corporations

After paying all necessary expenses the residue is distributed to the people in the form of appropriations for public institutions.

Millions go annually to hospitals, asylums and charities.

An appropriation of $1,000,000 is now being used to fight consumption.

The Governor might have particularized, had he had the time, for a mention of the immense sums that are collected as he says, virtually from the corporations and turned into various channels for the promotion of the health, comfort and education of the public would have been an eye-opener to a great many Chautauquans, who have been led to believe that Pennsylvania—a State that is practically free from debt is a sink spot of iniquity, a blot on the face of the map, and so on, according to the lurid adjectives employed by her defamers. He could have told of the numerous institutions that the State's money has built up, only that statistics are tiresome; of the progress we are making with good roads, and incidentally referred to the fact that the State will build a grand highway from Philadelphia and Pittsburg. But he did have time to say considerable regarding the battle against the Great White Plague and he was justified in all that he said, for much abused Pennsylvania is to day leading the way.

It may not be generally known to our own people that in every county there are free dispensaries where not only medicines but advice is given to sufferers from consumption. For those who can leave home there are sanitoria in the forest reservations where, in the pure air and with plenty of out-of-door exercise, the battle is being fought in the most perfect manner known to advanced thought and discovery.

But, after all, it is in the home of the wage-earner where the greatest work is being done. The countless thousands who are too poor to afford time for inactivity are given instruction and are carefully looked after. Incipient consumption is grappled with and defeated. Splendid, magnificent, is this movement.

Good Old Pennsylvania! It is high time that she should be appreciated as she deserves, for there isn't a State in her class.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Curious Old Laws.

Some of the old laws of Nepal, India, were curious. Killing cows ranked with murder as a capital offense, for instance. Every girl at birth was married with great ceremony to a betel fruit, which was then cast into a sacred stream. As the fate of the fruit was uncertain the girl was supposed never to become a widow. To obtain divorce from a husband a wife had only to place a betel nut under his pillow and depart. In Nepal the day is considered to begin when it is light enough to count the tiles on the roof or distinguish the hairs on a man's hand against the sky.

Trained.

"My men work well," said a police commissioner, "because they are well trained. Training, you know, is everything."

He paused and smiled.

"Two physicians were discussing," he said, "a certain pretty nurse.

"'Was she a trained nurse?' said the first physician.

"'She must have been,' replied the other. 'She hadn't been in the hospital a week before she was engaged to the richest patient.'"—Washington Star.

A Limited Luxury.

Two Irishmen were discussing the phenomenon of sleep. Said one, "Oi hear as wan av thim poethry lads calls it 'bald nature's hair reshtoorer.'"

"Yis," assented the other; "shlape's a grand luxury. It's a pity a man can't kape awake long enough to inj'y it. Jist whin he's thinkin' phat a foine long shnooze he'll be havin', begorra, it's mornin'!"—Judge.

Excellent Health Advice.

Mrs. M. M. Davison, of No. 379 Gifford Ave., San Jose, Cal., says: "The worth of Electric Bitters as a general family remedy, for headache, biliousness and torpor of the liver and bowels is so pronounced that I am prompted to say a word in its favor, for the benefit of those seeking relief from such afflictions. There is more health for the digestive organs in a bottle of Electric Bitters than in any other remedy I know of." Sold under guarantee at J. M. Minick's drug store. 50c.

Mrs. C. F. McCormick, wife of the baggage master at Lewistown, had the tip of the fore finger of her left hand torn off in a peculiar manner on Saturday. Mrs. McCormick had taken a horse to water and tied him to the fence with the halter chain. When she attempted to loose him the animal scared and Mrs. McCormick got her finger caught between the fence and the chain of the halter. The injured member was partly amputated and dressed by a local surgeon.

Anna Watt, of Lewistown, in default of $100 bail was committed to jail on Monday afternoon on the charge of larceny preferred against her by Jacob Romig, who alleges that the woman stole twenty-eight dollars in money from him while in her company a few days ago.

About seventy fruit growers of Mifflin, Huntingdon and Juniata counties attended the free demonstration which was held at the county home yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the Division of Zoology of the State Department of Agriculture. The meeting was the largest in the number of attendance of any of the demonstrations conducted in all parts of the State and speaks well of the interest taken in the care of fruit trees in this section. The meeting was held for the purpose of instructing local fruit growers how they can overcome the ravages of the San Jose scale, which has already cause thousands of dollars worth of damage in the more eastern sections of the State, and which has, as yet, not been able to work with much results in this portion of the State. The meeting was conducted by James Bergy of Mifflintown, local inspector and demonstrator. The other prominent State officials present were N. B. Critchfield, secretary of agriculture; H. A. Surface, economic zoologist; and W. E. Grove, orchard demonstrator.

John Petit, a resident of the Klondyke, was arrested and committed to jail recently by Constable Saxton on a warrant issued by Justice of the Peace Zerbe, charging him with surety of the peace. The information was preferred by Petit's wife, who alleges that he has threatened to blow her head off. The prisoner will be given a hearing Wednesday. Petit returned from Mt. Union on Monday and went to his home. He found the place locked. He gained an entrance by breaking in a door. Mrs. Petit did not return yesterday but when she found that he had returned the couple met. After some remarks they disagreed and as a result Petit threatened to blow off his spouse's head. Mrs. Petit left the house and a short time after discovered her husband waiting for her in the vicinity of the jail. She went into a nearby grocery store until her husband could be taken into custody.—Lewistown Sentinel.

Mrs. Fike, formerly Miss Fern Brant, who resides at the home of her parents Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Brant, recently had her right arm broken, she having slipped and fallen while in the act of going to help to get a pail of water.

Harrison Amig, a former resident of Mifflintown, who resides in Beale township, was painfully injured in the right knee by being accidentally jabbed with a pitchfork one day last week, while engaged in threshing the crops on the Parker farm, near Walnut, where Mr. Amig now resides.

Jerome Witmer, who occupies the J. H. Neely farm about two miles north of Mifflintown, had a valuable horse die recently. It was one of the warmest days of this year and three horses were hitched to the binder while cutting oats. At the conclusion of the day's work the team was unhitched, and the animal walked but a few steps when it fell dead.

A stone wall over three hundred feet long has been placed in front of the grand stand of the Port Royal fair ground. The stones were taken from the canal lock at Mexico, where they had been in place for eighty years, and were presented to the fair association by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. It is a fine lot of cut stone.

George Kirk, who recently purchased the Ben Groninger fruit farm, in Turbett township, removed his family from Lack township to that place on Tuesday of last week. In moving he had a rather strange experience. While engaged in unloading his goods, Freedom station, a storm came up, lightning struck a telegraph pole and scattered about on the ground considerable of his household effects which were located nearby.

CENTRE.

For the first time in more than a dozen years the brothers and sisters of Rev. Dr. W. H. Schuyler met to spend a few days together. The family consists of four—James R. Schuyler, a prosperous hardware merchant of Bloomsburg, Miss Elizabeth Schuyler, and Mrs. Thomas W. Simkins, of Lansdown, and Dr. W. H. Schuyler, of Centre Hall.

While standing in an open field Tuesday afternoon a week one of a herd of five cows belonging to Charles W. Slack of Old Fort, was struck by lightning and killed. It was the most valuable cow in the lot. None of the other animals showed signs of being injured.

The collapsing of a scaffold at the ladies' cottage, State College, was responsible for the injury of three workmen, but none fatally injured. Ross Wallace, of Milesburg, had two ribs fractured; Brint Wallace, of Bellefonte, face and hands cut and bruised; Carl Wallace, of Bellefonte, ankle sprained and shoulder badly brusied.

FRANKLIN.

Mrs. John B. Brumbaugh, of Mont Alto, who is 76 years old, a few days ago arose at 5 a. m., got breakfast for 17 persons, who are boarders at her home, packed six dinner pails, milked a cow, then got her own breakfast, washed the dishes and put out a large wash by 11 a. m., after which she got an elaborate dinner. She has a great endurance and is never ill.

William Porter, of near Roxbury, Letterkenny township, fell from a house roof while at work on Monday afternoon and broke his right arm. He is otherwise injured and in a critical condition. His mother, with whom he makes his home, is an aged lady, and is prostrated over the accident.

While fishing in the Conococheague on Thursday afternoon John L. Lesher, Jr., caught a large bass that weighed four pounds and measured over nineteen inches in length. Mr. Lesher claims this to be the largest bass ever caught in this section.

FULTON

A valuable young mare belonging to David Kelso, who lives near Knobsville stepped on a rusty nail last Monday a week and lock jaw developing, the animal had to be shot.

Ex-County Treasurer, Adam C. Lauver has sold his mill property a mile south of Webster Mills, together with the farm belonging to the mill property, to William M. Mellott, of Ayr township, for, as we have been informed, the sum of six thousand dollars. Possession was given last Monday morning, and the new firm will be known as W. M. Mellott & Son.

A large touring car turned turtle near Squire Daniels' place in Licking Creek township last Thursday. It required the aid of two of the Squire's horses to haul it back to the pike from the ravine into which it fell. Fortunately no one was hurt. The cause of the car leaving the road was that an inexperienced occupant of the car toyed with the wrong lever.

BLAIR

John W. Butts was struck by a bolt of lightning and instantly killed in the quarries of the Standard lime and stone company, half a mile south of Martinsburg. He was a truck loader and was leaning against one of the stone trucks in the quarry when the bolt struck him. The top of his straw hat was torn out and the electric fluit passed down his breast and right side.

New Railroad in Penn'a.

The largest railroad contract let for a number of years has been closed at Pittsburg by which the Vanderbilts intend to complete a line between Pittsburg and New York, at the same time tapping the coal—fields of Central Pennsylvania and making the shortest haul from the bituminous region to New York.

The contract calls for 310 miles of railroad and aggregates $13,000,000. The William J. Oliver company, of Knoxville, Ky., has the contract. The new line is know as the Pittsburg, Binghamton & Eastern railroad Major H. A. Schwanecke is vice president and chief engineer. E. H. Gay & Co., of Boston, New York and Pittsburg, have financed the proposition. Work on 33 miles between Canton, Bradford Co., Pa., to Binghamton, N. Y., will be begun immediately.

The new company was organized some years ago to build a line from Clearfield, Pa., to Bingnamton, N. Y. Later the Vanderbilt interests took a hand in the deal and succeeded in obtaining control of the organization. Up to the present time over 21 miles of the right of way have been graded and about 5 miles of track laid.

ABOUT SPIRITUALISM

BY GERTRUDE W. SEIBERT.

There are two popular and deeply rooted beliefs which prevent the majority of persons from arriving at a correct understanding of the truth about Spirtualism, viz: First, that the manifestations through spirit mediums in general are absolute deceptions, due to sleight-of-hand trickery or fraud, pure and simple: second, that the dead are not dead, but "more alive than ever."

Any one who will take the trouble to investigate the first of these errors, viz: that all spiritualistic phenomena are deceptions, can find abundant data furnished by the most conscientious, reliable and unprejudiced scientists to the effect that these manifestations are "beyond the power of human beings to produce," and that hence they must be the result of supernatural powers exerted by some agencies, not human. Facts are difficult things to fight against, and scientists have declared these spiritualistic manifestations to be facts which cannot be scoffed out of existence. And although there are many counterfeits and many frauds, as Spiritualists themselves, acknowledge, the very fact of a COUNTERFEIT argues the existence of a GENUINE

Since the facts of spirit phenomena prove to be of superhuman agency the conclusion is immediatly laid hold upon that these supernatural agents are the spirits of dead people, for Spiritualism upholds and claims to prove the popular belief that when human beings die they do not die, but become more alive than ever.

That man is by nature, by creation, by birth, immortal, is a theory accepted by all civilized nations as well as by the majority of savage tribes and heathen nations. This is evidenced among the heathen by the manner of the burial of their dead. But because such is the belief of almost the whole world of mankind, is it any PROOF that such a belief is really the TRUTH on the subject?

As Christian people, we certainly hold that the only true source of knowledge concerning matters beyond our natural powers to explain can be found only in that fountain of wisdom, the Word of God. Jesus said, "Thy word is truth." A brief search in any reliable Bible concordance will be sufficient to satisfy the inquirer after truth that the expression "immortal soul" cannot be found in the Bible. There is not a single statement in holy scripture in which the soul of man is declared to be immortal! On the contrary, the saints of the Gospel age are exhorted to "SEEK for glory, honor, immortality, eternal life." (Romans, 2:7.) Why should the Apostle Paul urge the church to seek for that which all men already possess, according to popular belief.

No. The word of God distinctly declares that man is mortal, not immortal, and that God is able to destroy and will destroy the wicked among mankind. IMMORTALITY is a condition of being in which death, extinction, is an impossibility. MORTALITY signifies a state of being in which death is a possibility, though not a necessity, as many seem to believe. A careful study of the Bible will show that man was created mortal, else what weight could there be in the warning of Adam's creator that he must die if disobedient? Adam's disobedience to the wise and necessary laws of his Creator brought upon him the predicted penalty, and not only upon himself, but also upon all his decendants. As it is written, "By one man sin entered the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men." (Read Gen., 2:17, 3:19; Romans, 5:12, 17:19, 6:23.)

Webster defines death to be the "cessation of being." Death is the absence of life—its opposite. Death cannot be life under any conditions any more than hate can be love, cold can be heat, error can be truth, darkness can be light. Death is cessation of life, extinction of being. And this extinction is not the death of the body alone, but the whole being. "The SOUL that sinneth it shall die." Ezek., 18:4,20.) Jehovah did not say to Adam, "In the day that thou eatest thereof thy BODY shall surely die," but "THOU (thou a sentient, living being, a soul) thou shalt die." And the sentence was carried out. "Adam died." (Genesis, 5:5.)

Countless scriptures declare that the dead "know not anything—also their love, and their hatred, and their envy, is now perished," and that their "thoughts perish," in fact, they are as utterly out of existence as though they had never been. They are "dust." (Gen., 3:19.) But the hope of a resurrection, a life from the dead, a living again, is guaranteed to the whole world through the sacrificial death and blood of "the man Christ Jesus, who gave himself a ransom (a corresponding price) for all." (1 Tim. 2:5-6.) "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." (Romans, 6:23.)

Seeing then, that the scriptures are so definite on this subject, how can we account for the prevailing belief that man has inherent immortality, and cannot be destroyed by his Creator and that death is "only an appearance," not death at all, but more abundant life? This question can readily be answered by reference to Genesis, 3:4, "The serpent said unto the woman, ye shall not surely die." Thus Satan, using the serpent as a medium, contradicted the word of God, which declared "thou SHALT surely die." (Gen., 2:17.) Let us not forget the meaning of death. To die means to cease to exist, to become extinct. Here we have the origin of the belief in man's immortality, or deathlessness, and Satan through various agencies has continued to affirm the lie. In the Dark Ages he used the grosser forms of deception, but in these days he is forced by the increase of knowledge to adopt more refined methods, even "transforming himself into an angel of light," as Paul declares in 2 Cor., 11:12-15.

Since "there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave, whither thou goest," as Solomon says, and further declares that "the dead know not anything," in fact are out of existence, turned to dust, is it not clearly evident that they cannot possibly return to the living and speak and act through spirit mediums? This must be the logical conclusion of every unbiased mind, especially among those who accept the word of God as the final court of appeal in all matters of this kind.

Although it is impossible for the dead to act through human beings, is there any proof that it is impossible for that old "serpent, the devil and Satan," to act through human beings now, even as he did in the days of Moses in Egypt, when the magicians and sorcerers performed miracles by their enchantments? Moses performed miracles through the power of God. Did Jehovah work through the magicians also? This is not a reasonable conclusion in view of the context. That Satan and his evil angels can and do act through human beings as mediums is abundantly proved by numerous passages of scripture.

Is it reasonable to believe that Jehovah would forbid the Israelites to have dealings with "familiar spirits," if such dealings were impossible and contrary to fact? (Read Deuteronomy, 18:10-12; Leviticus, 19:31, 20:6 27; 2 Kings, 21:6, 23:24; 1 Chronicles, 10:13.) Can we believe that our Lord Jesus was deceived when he spoke to the evil spirits and commanded them to come out of those persons whose bodies they had made their abode? (See Luke, 4:33 36-41, 8:26-33.) The new Testament contains many instances in which evil spirits spoke and acted through human beings as mediums, in one instance throwing the possessed one into the fire, in another making the poor wretch walk naked among the tombs. We read also of a young damsel being used as a medium and "she brought her masters much gain by soothsaying." (Acts, 16:16.) Are these examples so very different from the methods followed by the prince of evil in these days?

Yet we should not understand that all mediums or believers in Spiritualism are the intelligent and willing servants of Satan, for the scriptures plainly tell us that he is the deceiver, the adversary, who deceiveth the whole world, "blinding the minds" and "ruling in the hearts of the disobedient" of mankind. Many conscientious persons have pursued a wrong course ignorantly, even as Saul of Tarsus did, but those whose hearts are pure will not long remain in darkness of unbelief and ignorance of the truth.

Spiritualism claims more than 1,000,000 followers, and is on the rapid increase, while the scriptures indicate a still greater falling away from the truth into error of various kinds. The VERY FACT that the majority of intelligent people believe "there is nothing in Spiritualism" lays them open to an insidious attack from the enemy, who will undoubtedly be permitted sooner or later to show them that there is something in Spiritualism, and that that something is utterly beyond the power of the human mind to comprehend, except it be aided by the word of God, which alone is able to make us "wise unto salvation," and "keep our feet from falling and our souls from death."

The heart of every true soldier of the cross must praise the Heavenly Father for his blessed provision for every time of need. He has never permitted his children to be assailed by any error without at the same time putting within their grasp the shield of faith, the "faith once delivered unto the saints," and "the sword of the spirit, which is the word of God."

Let us read the Apostle Paul's warning, "Now the Spirit (of God) speaketh expressly that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to SEDUCING SPIRITS and doctrines of devils." (1 Tim., 4:1.) Therefore, seeing we have this warning, let us "put on the whole armor of God, that we may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil, for we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against (evil) powers against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against WICKED SPIRITS in high places." (See margin, Eph., 6:11-12.) The armory of God is his word, the Holy Bible.

All readers farther interested in this subject and in the subject of "Immortality" and "What is the Soul?" may address the writer and receive free of charge reading matter which will satisfy all honest and unprejudiced investigators from the standpoint of reason facts and scripture that Spiritualism is demonism and the work of Satan, the enemy of mankind, whose efforts are untiringly exerted to misrepresent the justice, wisdom, power and love of the Almighty Jehovah, and to lead men from one error to another until he destroys them mentally, morally and physically, if they will permit him.

ROOSEVELT WANTS TO HELP FARM LIFE

COPYRIGHT BY CLINEDINST 1902

President Roosevelt has appointed a commission to inquire into the present conditions of agriculture and farm life in the United States and to suggest methods by which they can be bettered through action of the federal government.

The President is especially solicitous as to whether or not the government can do anything to improve the social life of the farm, thereby making it more attractive to the farmer and his family and checking in some degree the unhealthy exodus from the country into to the city. In this communication he notes particularly the farmer's wife, whose "influence upon the life of the nation" he regards as very great, and who, therefore, is entitled to the consideration of those who are interested in the nation's future welfare.

It is the opinion of the President that the farmer and his crops constitute the basis of national prosperity, and that therefore the farmer is entitled to the fostering care of the nation's government to a greater extent perhaps than men of less vital callings. If there is any way by which life on the farm can be made more remunerative financially and more attractive socially the President thinks the whole country would be interested in knowing about it.

So deeply impressed is President Roosevelt with the importance of this subject of improved farm conditions that he holds there is only one more important matter before the people today, namely the conservation of natural resources.

Celebrate Fifteenth Wedding Anniversary

J. Monroe Lutz

Mrs. J. M. Lutz

On Saturday last, April 15, 1911, between 3 and 7 o'clock p. m., Mr. and Mrs. J. Monroe Lutz celebrated the 15th anniversary of their wedding, at their home in Shirleysburg. Upwards of 125 guests were present to help commemorate the event. The occasion was a very pleasant one and everybody, seemed to be enthusiastic over the day and what it stood for. The pastor of the family, Rev. A. C. Lathrop of Mt. Union was present and made very fitting remarks, closing with prayer. The meal was elaborate, consisting of turkey, chicken, salads, sandwiches, ice-cream, cake, coffee, etc.

Mr. and Mrs. Lutz were the recipients of many handsome presents, including a number of pieces of cut glass, 2 rocking chairs, silverware, china dishes, and among the crystal we noted five handsome water sets.

Mr. J. M. Lutz and Miss Alice Fultz were married, April 15, 1896 in Germany Valley, Miss Fultz being the second wife. To this union two children have been born, while to the first union, there were five children—in all there are three sons and four daughters. Mr. and Mrs. Lutz are members of the Baptist church and rank among the prominent and well known residents of Shirleysburg. We extend congratulations and best wishes for many years more of happiness and prosperity.

Among the guests were the following men and their wives respectively: W. W. Wilson, John Appleby, Joseph Gray, John Basore, G. W. Miller, C. E. Barton, Wm. Crone, David Lightner, Samuel Myers, Loraine Harvey, Scott Miller, G. D. Boyer, J. H. Miller, Isaac Gifford, Albert Masemore, Wm. Berkstresser, Asaph Price, S. K. McKeehan, Albert Rorer, S. Fogle, C. M. Houchin, J. E. Pecht, Bruce Bence, A. S. Welch, Chas. H. Welch, Rev. A. C. Lathrop, Dr. J. C. Stever, Dr. W. J. Campbell and C. S. Ewing.

The following ladies were present, in addition to the above mentioned who accompanied their husbands: Mrs. John Lightner, Mrs. W. H. Lightner, Mrs. Myers, Mrs. Blanche Rogers, Mrs. T. J. Harris, Mrs. Ella Harris, Mrs. Wm. Harris, Mrs. Jno. Withington, Mrs. Harriet Myers, Mrs. C. E. Emerick, Mrs. H. T. Thompson and son William, Mrs. J. C. Lotz, Mrs. Wm. Harrison, Mrs. Mary Gifford, Mrs. Ira Faust, Mrs. Chas. Fetterolf, Misses Blanche Wogan, Thelma Crone, Florence Barton, Ada Gifford, Ganelle Gifford, Isabel Barber, Nora Myers, Myra, Gladys and Reba Faust, May Hamer, Edna Lutz, Clara Garver, Mary Davis, Florence Myers, Frances and Lizzie McGinnis, Fanny, Anna, Rebecca and Winifred Lutz.

The following unmarried gentlemen were there: Homer Myers, Harry Scott, B. C. Barton, W. P. Dunmire, Byron Lutz, and Howard Garver.

THE CHURCH AND ITS MISSION.

By Gertrude W. Seibert

When urging our friends to become Christians, how often we hear the excuse, "Well, if I only knew which was the right Church, I would join it, but there are so many different denominations, each claiming to be the only true Church, how can I decide which is the right one?" And truly it does seem confusing, from the popular standpoint, but "Come, let us reason together," as saith the Lord, and let us see if we cannot arrive at a satisfactory conclusion respecting this most important matter.

There are two ways open to us,—we may study the creeds of the various denominations, and try to select from them those doctrines which appeal to our heads and hearts as reasonable and true and good. But this method would prove almost an endless task, as well as most unsatisfactory, because the majority of us have our minds more or less prejudiced by early teaching and environment.

The other way, and surely the more reasonable one, is to take up the Bible and read what God himself has declared regarding the true Church and its characteristics.

In beginning our study we first notice that the word Church is the English translation of the Greek word Ekklesia, meaning "That which is called out," or we may say it refers to a company of "called-out ones." Naturally we inquire, from what is this company called out? Let the Apostle Peter reply, in his declaration to the Church, "Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light. "This darkness is figurative, and refers to the ignorance, both mental and spiritual, of the world in general, as it is written, "Darkness covereth the earth, and gross darkness the people." Thus we see that the Church, recognized of God, has been called out of this darkness of superstition and ignorance common to the world. Again, our Lord declared to his disciples, "If ye were of the world, the world would love its own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen (called) you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." "Out of the world" cannot be taken literally, for that would mean that we must die in order to be really out of the world. It evidently signifies out from the SPIRIT of the world, the ambitions, pleasures, selfishness, etc., of the world, as the Apostle exhorts the Church, Love not the world .. for all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life is not of the Father, but of the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." (I John 2:15, 16).

Furthermore, the Word declares the Church is called out of Babylon. "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." Rev. 18:2-5. Babylon signifies "confusion," and refers to Christendom with her false claims, evil practices and confusing errors.

Next we inquire, Unto what is this company called? First of all the sinner is called to repentance, as Jesus declared, "I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance," (Matt. 9:13) Those who repent and "believe on the Lord Jesus Christ" are then called to be "sons of God," for "as many as received him (Christ) to them gave he power (privilege) to become the sons of God." (Jno. 1:12). In other words, the first step is to become justified, counted right, free from sin, through faith in Christ, and the next step is the call "to be saints," (Romans 1:7; 1 Cor. 1:2.) To be a "saint" does not mean to be absolutely perfect in word and deed, It signifies sanctification, a setting apart for the Lord's service. "This is the will of God, even your sanctification," The saints are also called "unto his kingdom and glory," "called unto glory and virtue;" "The God of all grace hath called us unto his eternal glory," i. e. to become "partakers of the divine, (immortal) nature," (1 Thess. 2:12; 2 Pet. 1:3; I Pet. 5:10; 2 Pet. 1:4).

What are some of the characteristics of the true Church? We have already mentioned separation from the world and its spirit, Next we may note the Lord's comment, "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." (Jno. 13:35). The true followers of Jesus Christ delight to "lay down their lives for the brethren" of like precious faith, even as Jesus laid down his life for the Church. (1 Jno. 3:14, 16). The true Church must thus become copies of God's dear Son, as it is written, "Whom he did foreknow he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the firstborn among many brethren." (Rom. 8.29).

Another characteristic of the "called-out ones" is that they suffer persecution. Not that every individual or sect which is persecuted is thus marked as belonging to the true Church, but that every member of the true Church will suffer persecution, as it is written, "ALL that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution," and "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you and persecute you and say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake," "Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." (2 Tim. 3:12; Matt. 5:10, 11).

We may well inquire, why is it thus, why must the godly suffer persecution? We would naturally be inclined to expect the opposite experience for those who love God and keep his commandments. We answer, the Scriptures speak of the members of the true Church as "living stones," and as literal stones must be quarried, chiseled and polished, so must these figurative, "living stones" suffer trials, persecutions, polishings in order to fit them for their position in the "temple of the living God." It was written even of Jesus that he was "made perfect through suffering," and that he "learned obedience by the things which he suffered." "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him (Jesus), "2 Tim. 2:12. Therefore, the converse must be true, if we do not suffer, we shall not reign with him.

That "the Church, which is his Body," shares with Christ, her Lord, in his sufferings, is clearly taught in the "Lord's Supper," the Cup representing his shed blood, of which consecrated Christians only should partake. The communion service is "a memorial or remembrance, from year to year, of the death of our Lord and our convenant to be "dead with Christ," as the Apostle declares, "The Cup of blessing, which we bless, is it not the communion (another translation reads participation) of the Body of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion (communion, participation) of the Body of Christ? For we being many, are one bread and one body." (1 Cor. 10:16, 17.) And Jesus said, "Ye shall indeed drink of my cup (of suffering) and be baptized with the baptism (of death) that I am baptized with." "And he took the cup and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it. For this is my blood of the new testament." (Matt. 20:23; 26: 27, 28).

The members of the true Church love God supremely and serve him through love and not through fear. See 1 John 4:7, 16-21; 5:1-3. The Scriptures clearly explain the source of the general fear and dread of God which we see even among many professing Christians, saying, "Their fear toward me is taught by the precept of men, "Isa. 29:13. "Perfect love (resulting from true knowledge of God) casteth out fear." (I John 4:18)

Again, the true Church of Jesus Christ know the truth, as he declared "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free," (Jno. 8: 32, Yes, free from error, free from fear, free from slavish bondage to the opinions of men. Free also from Satan's power, having been "translated out of the kingdom of darkness into the Kingdom of his dear Son," (Col. 1:13).

Although among the members of the true church there are "not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble;" according to worldly standards, yet they know what they believe, and being "taught of God," they rest not their faith upon the creeds or speculations of fallible men, but upon the inspired Word of the Living God, and they are able always "to give an answer, to every man that asketh, a reason of the hope that is within them." While others dream and speculate and wonder, the true Church knows and rejoices in the truth. We may state this proposition so positively because the Lord promised that his Holy Spirit would guide the Church "into all truth." And it is a fact that at no time in the history of the Lord's true people have they ever been in ignorance regarding God's purposes, as he declares, "Surely the Lord God will do nothing but he revealeth his secret to his servants the prophets." (Amos. 3:7).

It was the special work of the prophets of old to warn the people of God and to bring his messages unto them, as there was no written Word. Today, although we have the written Word of God, we still need some one to explain it, and therefore God "hath set some in the Church, first Apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, etc." "for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the Body of Christ," (1 Cor. 12:28, Eph., 4:11, 12). Note that it is God himself, (not Bishops, Presbyteries, Conferences, or other members in the Church) that sets up the prophets and teachers for the edifying of the Body of Christ.

Another characteristic of the true Church is knowledge of the future. Read our Lord's words in John 16. Speaking of the Holy Spirit he says, "When he the Spirit of Truth shall come, he will guide you into all truth, ...and show you things to come," (Jno. 16:13). If, therefore, any Christian now living be ignorant of the wonderful and fearful events just about to come upon the world and the professing Church, he lacks one very positive and important evidence of sonship and membership in the true Church. The Holy Spirit declares that we are now living in the Laodicean stage, of the professing Church of Jesus Christ. "He that hath an ear to hear, let him hear what the Spirit saith" unto the Laodicean Church, Rev. 3:14-22.

To the natural man, the Bible is a sealed book, incomprehensible, confusing, but unto the true followers of Jesus Christ he declares, "It is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them (the world) it is not given." (Matt. 13:11). "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them for they are spiritually discerned. Now we, (the church) have received, not the spirit of the world, but the spirit of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God." (1 Cor. 2:14, 10).

Very properly the next question may be, By what name is the true Church called, how shall we recognize it? We answer, Go to your Bible. Any name there applied to the Lord's footstep followers will be the name of his Church, the only one recognized by Jehovah. We find various names given to the Church such as, "The Church of the Living God, the pillar and ground of the Truth," "The Church which is his body," "The Church of the first-born, written in heaven." (It does not matter whether their names are written on an earthly man-made Church roll or not, if only they are "written in heaven," "in the Lamb's book of life.") Various symbols are also used in connection with the true Church. She is called a "chaste virgin." "The Bride, the Lamb's wife, "wise virgins," "sheep," "soldiers," "branches in the Vine (Christ)," "wheat," etc. In the days of the Apostles the Church was called by the name of the City in which it was located, as for instance, "The Church of God, which is at Corinth," "the Church at Philadelphia, Ephesus, etc." Note well that it is one Church, not many denominations. In Revelation the messages are sent unto the angel (messenger or minister) of the Church, in Thyratira, Philadelphia, Sardis, Smyrna, etc. We are accustomed to thinking and speaking of "Churches of Jesus Christ," or "Evangelical Churches." But this is unscriptural. The Lord recognized only one Church, and the Apostles warned the early Christians against schisms, divisions into sects, and against taking sectarian names. Read 1 Cor. 1:12.—"Is Christ divided? Was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized in the name of Paul?" And we might add, in the name of Luther, Wesley, Calvin, etc?

The very best definition of the Church I have yet seen is the following: "The Lord's Church, the only one to which the name ekklesia, body or Church, is properly applicable, is so insignificant, so unostentatious, and comparatively so poor in this world's riches, that it is not recognized, nor recognizable from the worldly standpoint. It is neither man-made nor man-ruled; nor are its members enrolled on earth, but in heaven. (Heb. 12:23), Its head and bishop is the LORD, its law is his Word: it has but one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism; and it is built upon the testimonies of the holy apostles and prophets—Jesus Christ himself being its chief corner-stone,"—Pastor Russell.

How may we become identified with this Church, this called-out company, how shall we join the Body of Christ? We answer, the first steps are a hearty acknowledgment of sin and repentance therefor, belief on the Lord Jesus Christ, "the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the World," and the acceptance of him as our personal Redeemer. After this we cease to be counted as sinners, we have "peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." Now we are in a position to hear and obey the Apostle's exhortation, "Brethren, I beseech you by the mercies of God (in providing a Redeemer and sending you the Gospel), that you present your bodies living sacrifices, holy and acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." (Rom. 12:1), This further step is called consecration or sanctification. The Lord says, "Sanctify yourselves (set yourselves apart to my service,) and I will sanctify you." To those who do thus set themselves apart, the Lord grants a new heart, a new mind, a new will, figuratively called "begetting." (James 1:18). These are no longer natural men, to them "the deep things of God" are revealed—the dark sayings, the mysteries, which the Apostle declares the "natural man cannot receive.." To these newly begotten ones, old things, old hopes, affections, ambitions, have passed away, all things have become new. Indeed the Scriptures call these by the name of "New Creatures in Christ Jesus." These are now accepted of God through Jesus Christ as probationary members of the true church. The probation lasts, not for six months, but "until death." If found faithful unto the end, they are received into "full membership," in the "first resurrection." (Rev. 20:6).

But, some may ask, Is there no outward form or ceremony by which or through which the consecrated may indicate their desire to join the company of called out ones? Yes, we answer. The Lord has given to the Church a beautiful and most appropriate ceremony, called baptism. Water baptism, or immersion, as Scripturally used, symbolizes consecration unto death. The water-immersion is the outward symbol of the inward immersion or burial of the will in the will of Christ. That the water baptism is not the essential, but the symbol or shadow is clearly indicated by Paul in Romans 6. "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into (water? no, into) Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into-death; that like as Christ was raised up by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life." Thus we see the true baptism, the reality, is to be "dead with Christ," but the outward, symbolic ceremony is the water baptism. What more appropriate? As the body is lowered into the water, completely buried in a watery grave, then raised up out of it again, as if by resurrection, so we, the consecrated have become "dead to the world', and as the Apostle declares we rise out of the old life, and begin to "walk in newness of life.',

Some may ask, Is water-baptism necessary? We reply, our Lord Jesus was immersed, and he is our pattern, our "forerunner," the "Captain of our salvation," and when John demurred, Jesus replied, "Thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." If we would follow in his steps, I am sure we would wish to follow his example both in the symbolic and in the real baptism..

All who are thus baptized into Christ are called "sons of God," "brethren of Christ," and are exhorted, "If ye be risen with Christ (figuratively) seek those things which are above." What does it mean to be a son of God? Jesus was the first begotten, the only begotten Son of God, previous to Pentecost. Let us note some of his characteristics, for we must follow in his steps. He declared, "I delight to do thy will, O, my God." He was "meek and lowly of heart," and "when he was reviled he reviled not again." Of him it was prophetically written. "The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up." He "gave all that he had," as represented in the parable of the "pearl of great price." "He laid down his life for the sheep." He did the will of the Heavenly Father "unto death, even the death of the cross. A study of Jesus' life and character will help us to so walk that we may be worthy of the Father's love and approval.

Some may say, You set the standard too high, you make the Christian's pathway too narrow! But not so, neither we nor any man, but Jehovah God himself has fixed the conditions of the "high calling of God in Christ." Our Lord Jesus declared, "Strait is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." However, lest any should become fearful and despair, we have the blessed assurance that the Lord "knoweth our frame, he remembereth that we are dust." He does not expect us to live up perfectly to the requirements of his perfect law which none but a perfect man could keep. But what he does expect and require is a perfect heart, a perfect desire to keep his holy law, and works according to our ability. "The Lord looketh not upon the outward appearance as doth man, but upon the heart," the intentions, the efforts. We are "accepted in the Beloved," who thank God, makes up for all our imperfections and shortcomings, so long as our hearts are in harmony with the divine will.

What is the present mission or work of the Church? Some reply, It is to convert the world. But what say the Scriptures? Did Jesus convert the world, did he even try to convert the world? Was it not his purpose to suffer and die according to the Father's will and to begin the selection and training of the first members of his Body, which is the Church? He constantly referred to his future work at his second advent, and taught his disciples to wait for that return before the great work of blessing the world would begin. Meanwhile they were to make themselves ready for that high exaltation to a position in his throne, even as he humbled himself and endured even unto death and was rewarded by an exaltation to a place in the Father's throne. It is written in Rev. 19:7, "Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honour to him; for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife (the Church) hath made herself ready.' This would indicate that the chief work of the "betrothed virgin," the Church, is to make herself ready during the interval between the first and second advents of her Lord. But how shall she "make herself ready?" Perhaps the first feature of that work would be the development of a character pleasing to the Heavenly Bridegroom, Christ. To this end the Apostle Peter exhorts the Church. "Brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure (to a position in the Body of Christ); for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall. For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting Kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." "If ye do these things," what things? They are mentioned in 1 Pet. 1:5-7. "Giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue, and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness LOVE.

A secondary work of the Church in this Gospel age is to witness to the world, to "preach the Gospel unto the meek," for we know that only the meek will have "ears to hear" at the present time. It will require the terrible crash of "the Great Day of His Wrath" to open the ears of the unbelieving masses before they will be willing to "hear him that speaketh from heaven," whose voice will "shake the whole earth" and "fill it with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord as the waters cover the great deep!"

Overcoming the world is also one of the necessary works of the Church Read the promises in Revelation 3 and 4. They are all made unto him "that overcometh." What does it mean to "overcome the world?" Does it mean to take a sword or pistol and fight with our worldly enemies until we kill them? Jesus' said, "Be of good cheer, I have overcome the world.' Then, if we know how he overcame we will be prepared to attempt the overcoming of the world ourselves. We all know, as Christians, how Jesus conducted himself. He was obedient to "the powers that be," he let his light shine calmly and purely in the face of the world, and exhorted his disciples, to "let your light so shine among men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father, which is in Heaven." One of the chief requisites in overcoming is FAITH. "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even your faith." Indeed Faith is the ground or foundation upon which the whole superstructure of Christian character must be built. It enters into every one of the other virtues. For that reason it is written, "Without FAITH it is impossible to please God!"

Another part of the Church's present mission is to sacrifice. The Christian Church in the flesh was represented by the priesthood of the nation of Israel, who offered sacrifices for the sins of the people. All true followers of Christ, "the Highpriest of our profession," are called to sacrifice, to deny themselves, to take up their cross daily and follow him. But some may say, "What can we sacrifice to the Lord?" we have no money, no ability, no "talents." We answer, every consecrated Christian has at least "one talent" of time, influence, strength, reputation or ability which may be used in the Lord's service, acceptable to God through the merit of Christ's sacrifice imputed to it. We must use our every talent in the service of the Lord, sacrifice our personal pleasures, preferences and proper rights, to serve the Lord and his people, if we would hear the Master say, "Well, done, good and faithful servant," when we come to the end of the way. (This of course does not mean that, we are to neglect our families or sacrifice other persons' preferences, time and rights. The Lord requires only our available talents, our un-mortgaged ones.)

What will be the Church's future reward and mission? Let the Apostle Paul reply. "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise," (Gal. 3:29), and the promise to Abraham was that in his seed "all the families of the earth should be blessed." The second advent of the Lord will be for the purpose not only of blessing all the families of the earth, but he will also judge them. And in this work of judging the Church will share with him, as it is written, "Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world?" Furthermore, it is declared by the Apostle, "Know ye not that we shall judge angels?" When we begin to realize something of the great work to be done by the Church in the next age, when the Kingdom of Heaven is set up, we no longer wonder that the preparation for so great a position must include much testing, many trials, much polishing, many bitter experiences to fit the Church to be judges who, like their great Pattern, Christ, can be "touched with a feeling of the infirmities of the whole world!" Truly the world will have nothing to fear from such a great and merciful Judge and Priest. "He will judge righteous judgment." In order to be fully fitted for this great work the Church must become "like him," be "partakers of the divine nature," "put on immortality," with its deathless powers. Oh, for such a privilege, would any hesitate to sacrifice the mean and trifling things of this world! Who would weigh the pleasures of this mortal life against the marvelous privileges and powers of the "world to come!" Were the whole realm of nature ours, it were a mere bagatelle compared with the glories of the "life everlasting!"

"Awake, my soul, stretch every nerve
And press with vigor on;
A heavenly race demands thy zeal,
And an immortal crown!"

In conclusion, therefore, if we can find such a company of called out ones, who are separate from the world, its ambitions, affections, pursuits, spirit, pleasures (such as dancing, cardplaying, theatre going, etc.), whose love for the Lord and his Word is so great that it is their delight to meditate upon it day and night; whose faith is built, not upon the creeds or opinions of fallible men, however good they may be, but upon the infallible Word of the Living God; who not only accept every positive statement of the Scriptures, but are also able to "rightly divide the Word of God," literal and figurative passages being equally clear to their minds; who can play upon the "Harp of God," bringing forth its harmonies divine, with not a discordant note, instead of "twanging away upon one string," one doctrine,—if you can find such a company (and do not expect to find a large one, for the Master said, "Fear not little flock, for it is the Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom"), you had better associate yourself with them at once, for the time is short in which to make your calling and "election sure," the "acceptable day" of the Lord is drawing rapidly to its close! Since 1875 the proclamation has been going forth, "BEHOLD THE BRIDEGROOM!" and all the "wise virgins" who have oil in their vessels, (the Holy Spirit in their hearts), as well as in their lamps, (the Word of God), are one by one entering into that heavenly marriage of the Bride and the Lamb!

"Behold, the Bridegroom cometh!
And all may enter in,
Whose lamps are trimmed and burning,
Whose robes are white and clean.

We see the marriage splendor,
Within the open door,
We know that those who enter
Are blest forevermore;
We see our King, more lovely
Than all the sons of men;
We haste because that door, once shut,
Will never ope again."

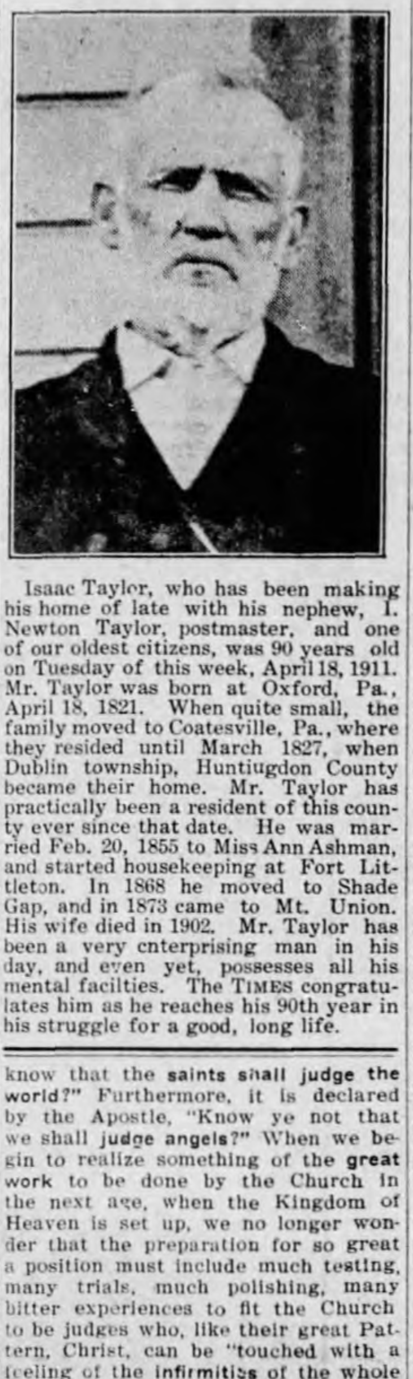
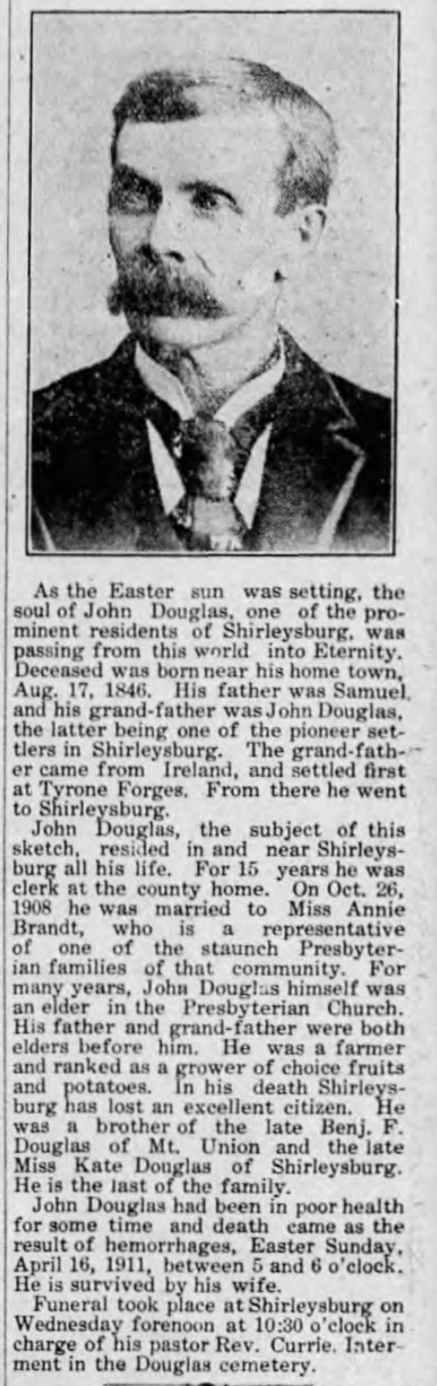
ISAAC TAYLOR IS NINETY YEARS OLD



Isaac Taylor, who has been making his home of late with his nephew, I. Newton Taylor, postmaster, and one of our oldest citizens, was 90 years old on Tuesday of this week, April 18, 1911. Mr. Taylor was born at Oxford, Pa., April 18, 1821. When quite small, the family moved to Coatesville, Pa., where they resided until March 1827, when Dublin township, Huntingdon County became their home. Mr. Taylor has practically been a resident of this county ever since that date. He was married Feb. 20, 1855 to Miss Ann Ashman, and started housekeeping at Fort Littleton. In 1868 he moved to Shade Gap, and in 1873 came to Mt. Union. His wife died in 1902. Mr. Taylor has been a very enterprising man in his day, and even yet, possesses all his mental facilities. The TIMES congratulates him as he reaches his 90th year in his struggle for a good, long life.

JOHN DOUGLAS DIES AT SHIRLEYSBURG



As the Easter sun was setting, the soul of John Douglas, one of the prominent residents of Shirleysburg, was passing from this world into Eternity. Deceased was born near his home town, Aug. 17, 1846. His father was Samuel, and his grand-father was John Douglas, the latter being one of the pioneer settlers in Shirleysburg. The grand-father came from Ireland, and settled first at Tyrone Forges. From there he went to Shirleysburg.

John Douglas, the subject of this sketch, resided in and near Shirleysburg all his life. For 15 years he was clerk at the county home. On Oct. 26, 1908 he was married to Miss Annie Brandt, who is a representative of one of the staunch Presbyterian families of that community. For many years, John Douglas himself was an elder in the Presbyterian Church. His father and grand-father were both elders before him. He was a farmer and ranked as a grower of choice fruits and potatoes. In his death Shirleysburg has lost an excellent citizen. He was a brother of the late Benj. F. Douglas of Mt. Union and the late Miss Kate Douglas of Shirleysburg. He is the last of the family.

John Douglas had been in poor health for some time and death came as the result of hemorrhages, Easter Sunday, April 16, 1911, between 5 and 6 o'clock. He is survived by his wife.

Funeral took place at Shirleysburg on Wednesday forenoon at 10:30 o'clock in charge of his pastor Rev. Currie. Interment in the Douglas cemetery.

Death of W. J. Cresswell.

William J. Cresswell died on Sunday, April 9th, 1911, very early in the morning in Shirleysburg, having made his home for a few years with Mr. John Jacobs. He had been in declining health for several months and yet kept about at some little daily duties to the last. Saturday night he seemed so spent out, that some one went several time to see after him, and about two o'clock found that the spirit had taken its flight.

The funeral service was held in the Presbyterian church Tuesday morning by an old friend and former pastor Rev. W. G. Finney, and his body rests in the Douglas cemetery. He had been very much alone in the world, as his own immediate family had long since departed. Some relatives interested themselves in him as he grew old, and saw that he was properly laid to rest, yet he had many friends in this neighborhood. His life was a sermon. He was such a Christian, of a rare fine spirit.

His was a marvellous example of a life of trust in God; the Gospel of hope and good cheer was his message to the world. He was a good man, a gentleman, so unobtrusive with grard self-effacement to be with him and converse made one think not of Cresswell but of Christ. The riches of his abounding life enriched all who knew him. He was very useful in the church, ever ready to pray and speak a word. The church suffers a great loss in his departure, yet his memory is blessed.

History of the Civil War

Fifty years ago, on April 12, 1861, Fort Sumter was fired upon.

Fifty years ago this country was just awakening to the shock of the greatest war that has ever been fought.

In this Semi-Centennial Year The Inquirer will print a continued story of the momentous events of that period which altered the history of this country if not of the entire world.

A complete History of the Civil War retold in graphic and dramatically interesting manner by an expert historian.

The entire narrative of the great conflict, as told by war correspondents of The Philadelphia Inquirer in the field from 1861 to 1865, will be retold with historical accuracy in the light of later developments.

This is not the story of the war reprinted day by day and lastiug through the long drawn out period of nearly five years.

From the firing upon Sumter, in April, '61, to Bull Run, in July, '61, no critical tests of strength of the two great armies occurred, the period being occupied mostly with recruiting and some few minor battles.

The Inquirer will tell the entire story of the War in the next three months.

A full page every Sunday will describe in their order the great battles of the war, while the intervening articles in the daily issues of The Inquirer will make a connected story, covering the entire conflict.

Do not miss this highly instructive and entertaining history, which will be a daily and Sunday feature in the Inquirer during the next three months of this Semi-Centennial Year.

If you are not now a regular reader leave your order at once for both the Daily and Sunday Inquirer.

SOME OLD FASHIONED IDEAS.

This republic is still the home of certain old-fashioned folks who believe that government is best which governs least. Those cherishing such views must realize that the tide is setting strongly in the direction of the thing he hates. For in his mind there exists the settled conviction that the trend toward increased governmental supervision is not only unwise but also an evil thing.

The man whose notions of government dwell in the early days believes the advocates of socialism ought to feel greatly encouraged by the steady advance of the principle of government supervision. The public schools are socialistic and during recent years the adoption of a provision whereby books and most of the material used by the pupils in their work are purchased by the district has indicated the tendency in that direction. This, however, is a state affair.

The power of the federal government had greatly increased during the period that has elapsed since the close of the Civil War. If one of the earlier citizens, one who passed from the stage of action in the beginning of the year 1860, were privileged to revisit the "glimpses of the moon" long enough to master the history of the nation since that time, or to study the enlarged powers and practices of the government, he would perceive that twentieth century people are living in a world in no wise resembling the first decade of the last half of the nineteenth. And in nothing would he perceive more radical changes than in the powers of the government at Washington.

One of the most powerful agencies of the new regime is the interstate commerce court. Its functions are supposed to be indicated by its name. It has formulated a considerable body of decisions under which the rights of the states, the powers of corporations and the privileges of the individual have been largely curtailed. For instance, Kansas and some other states cannot enforce their prohibitory laws because the interstate commerce court holds that a state government dare not interfere with interstate commerce, so that the police powers of the state cannot be invoked to prevent the importation of alcoholic stimulants in the original packages. By the same court certain corporations are forbidden to increase their rates and at the same time not permitted to adjust their affairs so as to prevent loss and possible ruin.

The old-fashioned person is persuaded that the interference of the government with the freedom of the state to prohibit the importation of things harmful is wrong. He believes if it really has such a prerogative something should be done by congress to curtail it and to enable the state to enforce its own laws. He believes the government which interferes with the reasonable power of corporations to so adjust their rates as to insure a living profit should go a little further and protect the corporation against the aggressions that are continually threatening it.—Altoona Tribune.

THE FARM.

Agriculture is the mainspring of all industries. All are dependent upon it for their daily sustenance. The king himself is served by the field. The profit of the field is for all; stagnation of crops means stagnation to all business enterprises. The banker and the beggar, the prince and the peasant, are all fed from the products of the soil. We are all dependent upon mother earth.

Agriculture sows the seed from which springs up trade and manufacturing enterprises, all commerce. All business is, directly or indirectly, the fruits of agriculture. The thousands of wheels which are revolving in the country today, whether moved by water or steam, are engaged in remolding the products of the earth into some useful form, and the thousands of ships which are traversing the oceans and rivers of the world are merely transporting these products, either in a raw or manufactured state, to a market. The millions of money deposited in our banks represent the capital accumulated from these products.

Our costly and commodious public buildings, our beautiful private residences, our splendid turnouts, all the representatives of value are ultimate results of the crops of the earth. When crops fail, stagnation in all lines of business takes place. The whirling spindles and flying shuttles of our manufactories would also cease, our ships would have no demand for discounts were it not for the crops produced from mother earth.

When the labors of the producer are rewarded with bountiful harvests, the spindles multiply, the ships are well freighted and money is current. The resources of the country are maintained mainly from the soil.

While 85 per cent of those who enter upon a mercantile career become bankrupt, it is an anomaly for a farmer to ask his creditors to take 50 cents on the dollar. We never hear of a farmer prince or a millionaire husbandman. Yet, as a class, they are the mosti ndependent people on earth.

We can cite to you thousands and tens of thousands among the tillers of the soil who are as independent as any prince and live surrounded with the comforts, if not the luxuries, of life, all produced from the bountiful earth. There is no other line of business that could be made to pay a larger dividend than farming, if systematically and properly managed. In this as well as every other line of business it is intelligent labor that commands success. Were a manufacturer to conduct his business in the shiftless manner in which many farmers direct their affairs, he would speedily come to the end of his career.—Bellefonte Gazette.

TOLL ROADS ARE DOOMED

State Highway Commissioner E M. Bigelow recently announced that he world inaugurate the first of the proceedings by the State to secure roads which are included in main highway routes but are owned by turnpike companies. The first action will be brought to condemn the toll road between Chambersburg and the Bedford county line, which crosses portions of Franklin and Fulton counties.

Later on proceedings to condemn turnpikes in the vicinity of Philadelpha and other cities where such roads are on main routes will be undertaken. The actions will be in charge of Attorney General Bell, with whom the commissioner conferred on Tuesday. It is the idea to take over turnpike as needed to improve main highways.

The people living along the old turnpike in Fulton county as well as all others who have occasion to use the road, will, without doubt, be glad to learn that steps are being taken to remove the tollgates, as there have been many complaints in recent years that the road is not kept in the condition that it should be to exact toll.

THE POWER OF WILL

Will Stands at the Crossing of the Ways and is the Arbiter of Human Destiny

(By Rev. J. C. Quinn, LL. D., Ph. D.)

Will stands guard at the crossing of the ways and is "Arbiter" of Human destiny. One need not go far to find the evidence for this momentous proposition. The following Scriptures warrant our statement: When the Prodigal son in the far country came to himself after a season of misfortune, he gathered himself together and made this wise resolution and at once acted upon it: "I will arise and go to my Father," and arriving after some days at home, he received a glad welcome.

One day the Blessed Master was addressing a Jewish audience and said very plainly to them: "Ye will not come with Me, that ye might have life." These Jews closed the gate of life open to them by their persistent unbelief. By many the same will power is exercised along the same line. We conclude, therefore, that will is the "Arbiter" of humany destiny.

In the further elucidations of "The Power of Will" let us consider:

I. The Power of Will as Seen in History.—When we review the history of the World in which we live, we must pass in thought, the great men of the ages who have impressed on the tablets of History and Geography the results of their persistent and tenacious Will power.

The great Empires of Antiquity—Babylon, Persia, Greece and Rome—have one after another passed away under the Masterful will power of their respective Conquerors.

Think also, and often, how the obscure and persecuted "Man of Nazareth" has impressed Himself upon the World through the centuries of the Chritsian era. Contemplate His will power not only in Christianity, but also in philanthropic works for the amelioration of human suffering as well as in literature, science and art.

See also, among others, how Martin Luther, a poor, obscure and despised monk, moved the continent of Europe and started the Reformation of the Sixteenth Century, which has today, become world-wide in its influence.

Whence has come the great Republic of the United States of America? Do we not perceive in its inceptiton, rapid growth,, and vast development of boundless resources the Master will of George Washington?

This brings me to consider:

II. The Power of Will as a Character-Builder.

Passing from the general to the particular we may say, we create our own individual world, we choose our food, our books and our companions. But we do much more than this in the realm of mind. We choose our thoughts, feelings and aspirations. By deciding the kind of thoughts we will entertain, the sort of feelings we will cherish, we at once determine our disposition and character and the whole tone and trend of our lives. As one has well said: "We may nurse morbid feelings or starve them, we may brood over dark memories or banish them. We may enthrone Christian forms of thought and emotions or we may strangle these and hand the kingdom over to moods which are sombre and ideals which are pagan."

It matters not what our innate tendencies are, we can curb them if we will, and no matter how turbulent and adverse our circumstances, we can do as the great, but misguided Napoleon did with circumstances, conquer them. No one has really learned how to live until he can say "I am captain of my soul."

The supreme task of the Soul is to bring the will into complete harmony with the will of God. When we attain this through faith in Jesus Christ and following His precepts, then freedom, joy and peace are ours and life becomes both real and earnest. Emerson says in effect: "The virtue you would like to have, assume it as yours already, appropriate it, enter into the part and live the character. Just as the great actor is absorbed in the character he plays."

No matter how great your weakness, or how much you regret it, assume steadily and persistently its opposite until you acquire the habit of holding that thought or of loving that thing, not in its weakness, but in its wholeness, in its entirety. Hold tenaciously in the mind the idea of an efficient faculty or quality, not of a marred or deficient one.

The way to reach or attain anything worthy of your best efforts is to bend oneself toward it—with all one's might, and we appropriate it just in proportion to the intensity and the persistency of our effort to attain it.

In this connection the judicious editor of Success ably remarks: "It is wonderful what a transformation we can bring about by holding persistently in the mind the image of the thing we would become and struggling hard to attain it. It has a marvellous power to attract what we desire and to make real the picture we see."

In other words, seek what you desire to attain under the guidance of an intelligent and determined will and success in character-building and in other things will ere long be yours.

Remember that will power is the Arbiter of Human Destiny. Keep ever in mind in all your persistent efforts that you can be what you will to be. Therefore, resolve:—

I will not fail!

I will attain success—I will be happy!

I will be healthy and strong and live a useful life!

The best joy of existence lies in the intelligent use of will power.

Failure's sad to witness. I will have none of it!

"Where there is a will there is a way."

Andrew Carnegie is reported to have said, "That it was his strong desire or will persistently and firmly held in one direction that made him succeed."

This, also, has been the experience of the speaker along certain lines of achievement.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox well remarks in one of her poems:

"The human will, that force unseen,
The offspring of a deathless soul,
Can hew the way to any goal,
Though walls of granite intervene."

Therefore, my young friends, students and teacers, take as your motto in "Character-building" from this day on in life: "I will be, what I will to be." You can do it.

EXAMINATIONS FOR TEACHERS

No examination for professional certificates will be conducted until July 30, 31 and August 1, in Huntingdon.

For Provisional Certificates

June 24, beginning at 1 p. m. in McAlevy's Fort, for Jackson, Miller, and Barree districts.

June 27, beginning at 8.30 a. m. in Petersburg, for Petersburg, West, Porter, Alexandria and Morris districts.

July 2, beginning at 8.30 a. m. at Valley, for Hopewell, Lincoln, Penn, and Marklesburg districts.

July 8, in Cassville for Cassville, Todd, Cass, and Union districts.

July 11, beginning at 8.30 a. m. in Warriorsmark, or Franklin, to be detemrined later, for Franklin, Warriorsmark, and Spruce Creek districts.

July 15, beginning at 9 a. m. in Mapleton, for Mapleton, Union, Brady, and Mill Creek districts.

July 18, beginning at 9 a. m. in Mt. Union, for Mt. Union, Shirley, and Shirleysburg districts.

July 22, beginning at 8.30 a. m. in Huntingdon for the county.

This grouping and consolidation is made in compliance with the resolution adopted by the Directors' association in January 1912.

There will be no one-day examination. The work will be written so that all work can be filed. No certificate will be granted to any one who is not 18 years old before or on the day of examination.

By enclosing a one-cent stamp, applicants may secure blank physician's certificates any time after this announcement. Such will be sent to all the local normal schools.

Persons from other jurisdictions must present recommendations from their respective superintendents unless they have been teaching in this county.

Don't ask to break this rule.

Don't ask for a second trial. If you cannot "pass" our examination you are not prepared to teach in our schools.

According to the Code, Sec. 1308 the reward of professional certificates in force prior to May 18, 1911, is left wholly to the discretion of the Superintendent.

We invite directors to attend and inspect the "papers."

AUGHWICK MILLS

Our friends from Shirley stated last week about it taking three pitchers to play them. I believe they forgot the game Aughwick won last year and Shirley used 3 pitchers the last one being a Pittsburg man. I wonder if they know what a straight ball is?

Arthur Chilcote is a frequent visitor to our valley.

What became of the Germany Valley boys? We don't see them in our valley as often as previously. Don't get discouraged.

The Mt. Nebo church will hold a festival Saturday evening June 22nd on the Aughwick ball ground. Everybody invited.

Belled the Boundary.

"Artificial boundaries" are generally invisible. But a highly artificial one forces itself upon the notice of the traveler by rail between the Lake of Lugano and Lake Maggiore. The frontier between Italy and Switzerland is followed for a considerable portion of the journey, and it is marked by a lofty barrier of wire netting hung with bells for the purpose of preventing smugglers from getting into Italy without attracting the attention of armed defenders of Italian revenue. In extreme contrast with this is the natural boundary between Italy and France provided by Mont Blanc, which in spite of its naturalness is so vague that it is still undetermined, though scarcely worth disputing, whether the summit of the mountain is Franco-Italian or all French.—London Chronicle.

Move On Now!

says a policeman to a street crowd, and whacks heads if it don't. "Move on now," says the big, harsh mineral pills to bowel congestion and suffering follows. Dr. King's New Life Pills don't bulldoze the bowels. They gently persuade them to right action, and health follows. 25c at J. M. Minick.

"LIMIT" IN SHORT WEIGHTS

Indianapolis Man Finds Dumbbell That Is Four Ounces Less Than It Is Branded.

Dr. W. F. King, assistant secretary of the state board of health, has found what he terms "the limit" in short weights. He wrote to a sporting goods house a few days ago to buy some dumbbells for his daughter, and in "hefting" a pair found that one was lighter than the other. He called the attention of the salesman to his discovery and the dumbbells were placed on a balance and weighed, and one found to be four ounces short of the branded weight.

"I don't believe the misbranding could be handled under the pure food law," said Dr. King, "but Isidor Wulfson might take the case."

Dr. King recalled that when Ben-Hur was a slave on the Roman galley he represented to the overseer that keeping a galley slave chained to one side of the ship all the time developed him on one side only and that the owner was not able to get full value received from his price for the slave, and that as a result the slaves were shifted regularly from one side of the ship to the other. In this way, Ben-Hur was enabled to maintain rugged health and strength until he escaped.

"Since dumbbells are used for physical development, a pair ought to be of equal weight, in order to balance the development," said Dr. King.—Indianapolis News.

HIPPO ATE A MINCE PIE

But Bill Snyder, the Keeper, Said the Confection Was Wasted on Miss Murphy.

It is throwing money away, according to Bill Snyder, head keeper of the Central park menagerie, to feed a hippo on pies, especially on the mince variety. This observation by the keeper was elicited after he had tossed a beautiful mince pie into the yawning mouth of Miss Murphy, one of the hippos in the menagerie.

The hippo had been promised the pie by a man on the upper West side fully a week ago. He said he wanted "the kids" to have a laugh. When Miss Murphy gulped the pie down yesterday more than a score of persons, as well as "the kids," laughed.

It was a conventional 30 cent pie, but Miss Murphy looked more important than 30 cents when she began to crush the delicacy in her seesawing jaws. According to the man who carried the pie to the menagerie he had soaked it well in brandy. He was accompanied by two lads.

Snyder tickled the hippo's chin with the edge of the pie, and as she opened her mouth, he sent the whole thing in at once, as if it were a straw hat.

"Some bugs in this town!" said the keeper. "A woman came here yesterday and wanted to know if she could get a permit to give the lions catnip." —New York Tribune.

Spice of Life.

One way of ironing out domestic difficulties was originated by the late Vaughan Kester, author of "The Prodigal Judge." He was living at Gunston, an old colonial estate on the Potomac, not far from Mount Vernon, with his wife, an aunt of Paul Wilstach, who made the dramatic version of "Thais," when he drafted the constitution and by-laws of the Mutual Help association, retails the New York Sun, in mentioning the incident.

"Everybody's business but my own," was the motto of the association. Under the head, "Declaration of Purpose," appeared this paragraph:

"The members of this association, recognizing that there are realms of indecision and irresolution difficult for the single mind to grasp, penetrate and fully explore, have formed an association for the specific purpose that the individual members may have the advantage of every other member's opinion on all conceivable questions affecting his or her personal welfare, believing that by so doing they will add the variety which is the spice of life."

Telegram That Saved India.

In connection with the Durbar, a museum of Mogul relics has been arranged, which contains, among other objects, the telegram which illustrates Montgomery's great saying, "The electric telegraph saved India." This is the famous telegram dispatched by Brendish on May 11th, 1857, which gave the news of the rebellion to the north of India, and enabled Lawrence and Edwardes and Nicholson to take steps for the disarmament of regiments on the verge of revolt, and to make those brilliant arrangements for the relief of Delhi by which—and probably by which alone—the mutiny was crushed out, and Delhi once more returned to her British allegiance.

Disgusted Old Columbus.

Columbus deftly stood the egg on end, then waited for the applause.

Frowning grimly, Columbus replaced the egg in his coat pocket and sailed for America.

None but the Best.

Uncle Rasberry walked into a drug store. "Gimme one o' dem plasters foh my back," he said.

"One of the porus plasters?"

JUNIATA COLLEGE GRADUATES CLASS OF 57

The commencement exercises at Juniata College opened on Monday night of last week when the combined musical departments gave a recital. Many visitors are in town from this and other counties for the occasion. On Sunday evening the baccalaureate sermon, the text of which was, "The Mountains Shall Bring Peace," was preached in the Stone church by President I. Harvey Brumbaugh. On Sunday afternoon the graduation exercises of the Sunday school teachers' training class were held. About 14 persons received their diplomas.

College—Francis Holsopple, Florence Foglesanger, Elma Free, Eleanor Starr, Louise Crownover, Cletus Fisher, Chester Wardlow, Foster Horne, Ross Murphy, Jasper Shriner, Harry Rohrer, Henry Gress, Dana Eckbert, Joseph Crowell and Edgar Detwiler.

Normal English—Virginia Bixler, Edna Ober, Elizabeth Ruble, Laura Siegal, Grace Stayer, Mae Rohland, Delia Speck, Olive Shellenberger, Alfred Crotsley, Cliar Swigart, Clewell Miller, Oscar Davis, Adolphus Dively and Rollo Pheasant.

MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER

Mrs. Margaret Elizabeth Sangster died at her home in the Maplewood section of South Orange township on June 4, after a week's illness of acute indigestion. She was a widow. Her son, George M. Sangster; a daughter, Mrs. Henry B. Bostwick, of New Lebanon, N. Y., and two grandchildren, survive her. Mrs. Sangster was a writer whose appeal from the beginning was to women and children. Her first book, "Little Jenny," was written when she was 17 years old and was published by the Presbyterian Board of Education and given to the American Sunday School Union. She followed this with several books which were written for and given to the Sunday School Union. Mrs. Sangster was born in New Rochelle on February 22, 1838. As a girl she was fond of athletic exercises and often excelled boys in them. In her talks to young women she afterward was a strong advocate of outdoor exercise for them. Her early education was in the private schools of New York. In 1858 she married George Sangster. She became one of the popular American poets soon after the close of the Civil War. Thirty years ago her "Elizabeth, Aged Nine," and "Are the Children at Home?" were known the country over. An early book, "Hours With Girls," was republished in England. Her earliest editorial work was in 1871, when she became associate editor of Hearth and Home. Eight years later she was associate editor of the Christian Intelligencer. She was the editor of Harper's Bazar from 1889 to 1899. Since 1894 she had been a staff contributor to the Christian Herald. From 1899 to 1905 she was a staff contributor to the Ladies' Home Journal, and since 1905 she had contributed regularly to the Woman's Home Companion.—Presbyterian Banner.

Ends Hunt for Rich Girl

Often the hunt for a rich wife ends when the man meets a woman that uses Electric Bitters. Her strong nerves tell in a bright brain and even temper. Her peach-bloom complexion and ruby lips result from her pure blood; her bright eyes from restful sleep; her elastic step from firm, free muscles, all telling of the health and strength Electric Bitters give a woman, and the freedom from indigestion, backache, headache, fainting and dizzy spells they promote. Everywhere they are woman's favorite remedy. If weak or ailing try them. 50c at J. M. Minick.

BEYOND THE VEIL

By Gertrude W. Seibert.

These stammering lips, that now
So vainly strive to speak Thy praise,
Beyond the veil
Shall make the heaven of heavens resound
Through endless days.

These yearning eyes, that strain
To catch by faith a glimpse of Thee,
Beyond the veil
Shall see Thee as Thou art through all Eternity.

These trembling hands, these feet,
That seek to serve so earnestly,
Beyond the veil
Shall for Thy Kingdom's glorious work
Empowered be.

And this poor, throbbing heart,
That cannot now unfold its love,
Beyond the veil
Shall bloom and shower its fragrance through
The heaven above.

My soul, that neither seeks,
Nor findeth here its perfect rest,
Beyond the veil
Shall in Thy likeness wake and be Forever blest!

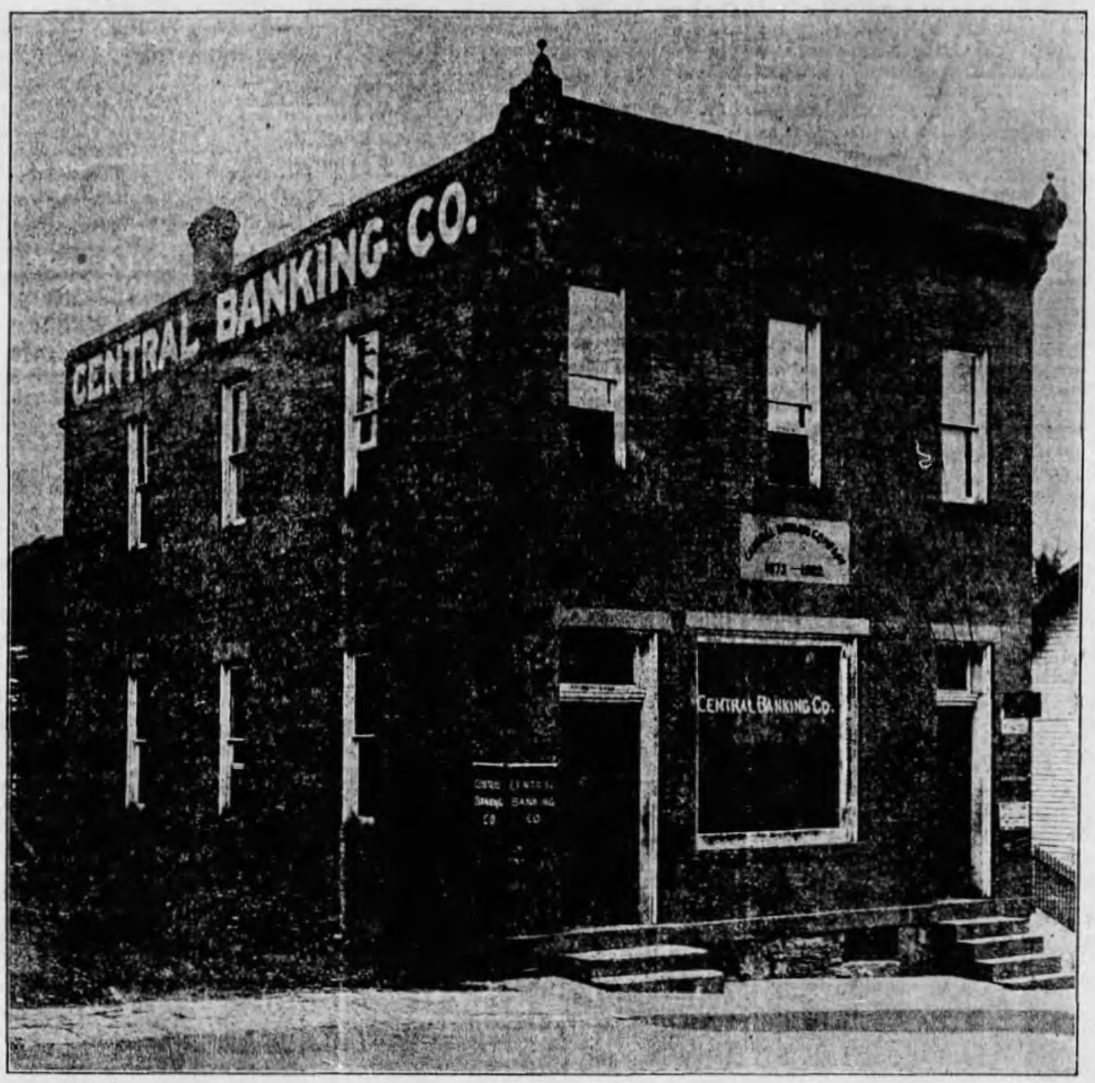
Central National Bank Will Open For Business on Monday Next



The Central Bank Building

The Central National Bank of Mount Union will open its doors for business on Monday next, July 1, 1912. The new establishment will succeed the former banking concern, or the Central Banking Company, and will continue buisness at the old stand or the building situated on Jefferson street, near the Pennsylvania Railroad station. This change to a national bank has been working itself out for several weeks past. Its rapid consummation has been brought about by the extensive interest the people and patrons have taken in the new concern, and the eagerness with which they purchased stock, when it was offered for sale. There will practically be no change in the management of the new bank, other than the addition of several staunch business men in and near town, who have become identified with this new institution. The Central National Bank is the second largest National Bank in Huntingdon county. It is capitalized at $60,000, and from the propitious starting, there is promise of a good, successful business in the future. The opening day on Monday next will be a "red-letter" day in the history of this financial institution. All patrons and friends are cordially invited to attend the opening.

The Central National Bank is the outgrowth of the Central Banking Company. The Central Banking Company was organized on March 13, 1873, with T. H. Adams as president and Edmund S. Doty as cashier. Mr. Doty was succeeded by his brother, L. Banks Doty, who served for five years, or until 1879, W. T. Bell took charge of the cashiership of the institution Oct. 11, 1879, and he has thus remained in this capacity to the present time. The Central Banking Company was formerly located in the brick building situated on the corner of Water and Division streets. In 1902, they erected the present building, and moved from the former quarters into the house occupied at the present time, in the following year or 1903. The first stock-holders of the Central Bank were: C. P. Dull and Daniel M. Dull of McVeytown; A. J. Dull and J. J. Dull of Harrisburg; Edmund S. Doty of Mifflintown; William Fields of Mifflin county; Thos. H. Adams of Mount Union. The recent stockholders in the Central Bank, prior to its changing to a national, were: T. H. Adams, President, W. T. Bell of Mount Union cashier, and A Reed Hayes of Lewistown. These gentlemen are all identified with the new bank, and will continue to lend their influence and efficiency toward the success of the new institution.

The Central Bank has always enjoyed great success. It has passed through the panics of 1873 and 1893, also the slump of 1907, and during these financial disturbances, when many other banking concerns "went to the wall," the Central held up admirably. The success of the institution in the past has been due largely to the keen insight and care of the men at its head. In all their relations with their patrons, they have endeavored to deal fairly and carefully, also to equip themselves to meet all emergencies that might arise.

Among the tellers who have gone out from the Central Bank, and who are making good in the financial world, are: J. Bruce Davis of Reedsville, cashier of the First National Bank of that place; R. J. Faust, Jr. of New York City, who is identified with the Irving National Exchange Bank; Harry A. Bell, who is cashier of the National Iron Bank of Pottstown; Jesse G. Bell, who is cashier of the First National Bank of Freeland, Pa.; W. Bates Bell who is cashier of the Orbisonia Bank at Orbisonia. This corps of men who have come from behind the counters of the Central and gone into the banking world to make a successful mark in the world for themselves, speaks well for the institution where they received their training. It also speaks well for the efficiency of the cashier, Mr. W. T. Bell, under whose direction they learned the first principles of the banking business.

The Central National Bank is constituted as follows: President, T. H. Adams; vice president, A. Reed Hayes; cashier, W. T. Bell; assistant cashier, Herbert N. Bell; teller, Russell S. Bell.

The organizing committee was composed of the following gentlemen: T. H. Adams, A. Reed Hayes, W. T. Bell, R. M. Longacre, and A. S. Welch.

The Board of Directors are as follows: T. H. Adams, A. Reed Hayes, W. T. Bell, R. M. Longacre, A. S. Welch, L. J. Myers, R. P. M. Davis, H. C. Kinsloe, Dr. J. G. Spangler, and H. E. Huston. The men just named are able and successful business men, and will add greatly to the efficiency and stability of the institution with which they have become identified. Messrs. Adams, Bell, Longacre Welch and Myers, are residents of Mount Union. Mr. Hayes resides in Lewistown, and has been connected with the Central bank for many years. Mr. Davis is president and general manager of the Mount Union Refractories Company, and resides in Lock Haven. Dr. Spangler is a resident of Mapleton and Mr. Huston, is one of the most successful merchants of the Broad Top region, residing at Saltillo.

There are, all told, nearly one hundred stock holders in the new bank. These stock holders cover a wide area, and thus distribute the interests of the bank over a great deal of territory. It is to be hoped that the new institution wll continue to enjoy the prosperity and favor of the old, and that from the large number of persons affiliated with it, that prosperity will continue to grow. The persons identified with the new bank are hoping for great results, and from the way things have been going thus far, we do not feel that they will be disappointed in their anticipations.

GENERAL BUSINESS GOOD

General business conditions in the United States are more satisfactory the Clews people declare. In spite of political agitation there is a spirit of hopefulness everywhere, which augurs well for the future. Bank clearings in the United States in May showed an increase of ten per cent. over last year, while for the five months of the current year they showed a gain of nine and seven-tenths per cent. These figures dispel all talk of business curtailment. They are supported by continued good reports of railroad earnings, which for the third week of May showed a gain of more than twelve per cent. over last year. The steel trade continues active, and while there may be a slight slackening in new orders the mills have large enough contracts on hand to keep them well occupied for months to come. All things considered, the outlook financially and commercially is reasonably satisfactory. Some temporary hesitation may be caused by the drawbacks referred to above, also by the approach of summer quiet, but the general tendency of affairs is progressive. Give us good crops and much of the present discontent will disappear.—Williamsport Sun.

THE JULY AMERICAN MAGAZINE

The leading feature in the July American Magazine is a new story by Rudyard Kipling entitled "The Benefactors." It is a story founded on the coal strike in England and is interesting because it presents with great power the reactionary's view of the thing. It is really a warning to labor.

A remarkable article in this issue of the magazine is the story of Carola Woerishoffer by Ida M. Tarbell. Carola Woerishoffer was a rich New York girl who declined to live a life of luxury, and threw herself into certain useful activities with resultant interesting experiences and adventures which Miss Tarbell describes intimately and entertainingly.

Ray Stannard Baker, Senator La Follette, Walter Prichard Eaton and Hugh S. Fullerton contribute other articles. Notable fiction is contributed by Kathleen Norris, Olive Higgens Prouty, Juliet Wilbor Tompkins and H. G. Wells.

Abe Martin, Indiana's funny man, writes a piece about the old-fashioned Fourth of July, and F. P. Dunne writes an amazingly able and moving editorial on the Titanic disaster.

"ARE YE ABLE?"

By Gertrude W. Seibert.

Are ye able to walk in the narrow, strait way,
With no friend by your side, and no arm for your stay?
Can ye bravely go on through the darkening night?
Can ye patiently wait till the Lord sends the Light?

Are ye able to crush your soul's longing for Love,
Will ye seek for no friendship save that from above?
Can ye pass through this world, lone, unnoticed, unknown,
While your faith faintly whispers, "He knoweth His own!"

Where the feet of the Blessed One stood, can ye stand?
Can ye follow His steps to a wilderness land?
Are ye able to cast aside pleasure and fame?
Can ye live but to glorify His precious name?

When "the field is so white," and your heart yearns to go!
Can ye rest then in silence, contented and still,
Till your Lord, the Chief Reaper, revealeth His will?

Are ye able to lay on the Altar's pure flame
That most treasured possession, your priceless good name?
Can ye ask of your Father a blessing for those,
Who see naught in your life but to scorn and oppose?

When the conflict twixt Error and Truth fiercer grows,
Can ye wield the strong "Sword" against unnumbered foes?
Can ye lift up the "Standard" e'en higher and higher,
While His praises ye sing in the midst of the fire!

When ye see the Lord's cause going down to defeat,
Will your courage endure in the seven-fold heat?
Will your faith keep you steadfast, though heart and flesh fail,
As the New Creature passes beneath the last "Veil!"

* * * * *

Ah, if thus ye can drink of the Cup He shall pour,
And if never the Banner of Truth ye would lower,
His Beloved ye are, and His crown ye shall wear,

LETTER FROM D. P. KEEFER

Orbisonia, Pa., June 20, 1912.
Editor Times:

I thought I would write you a few lines for the Times to let you know that I am a stranger in your county after an absence of 62 years, the first time in 1850. I spent the first 20 years of my boy hood days in Huntingdon county. As in former articles of the Times some will remember I was in this county one week in 1865 at the end of Civil War, I have to make new acquaintances as at present very few I once kenw are living. I have been to visit all the cemetries about Orbisonia today and spent two hours very pleasantly reading the names on marker and monuments. Many names I once knew in early days also the name of one of my uncles, namely Peter Ripple who died July 24th 1886, aged 77 years 11 months; also his wife, aunt Catharine (Long) Ripple. Also a son Mrs. Louis Ruby and two children of Uncle Peter's, John L. Ripple who died in 1886. He was a soldier in the civil war from 1861 to 1865, Co. E, 39 Regiment Illinois vols. He has a large tomb stone to mark his resting place. He was a cousin of the writer. I noticed at the foot of uncle Peter Ripple's grave is a flourishing spruce pine tree of about 7 inches to mark his last resting place. I found also many names I once knew. In this cemetery rest three old veterans of the Mexican War, and fifty-nine soldiers of the civil war are resting for the last roll call up yonder. Forty-six years are in the past since the close of the war. The old soldiers are thinning out of the ranks and probably 20 years from now very few will be left to tell the story. I also visited the Barton cemetery at Shirley, Saltillo cemetery and Germany Valley cemetery. Those three last named I will give a sketch of for next week's paper, on my return from York.

After leaving Mount Union on June 7, I went to Saltillo, spent one week very pleasantly among relatives, found all as well as could be expected. My sister had been on the sick list for some time but was recovering slowly. She is now past her 78th mile stone on life's journey. Last Friday at 9 a. m. took the cars to visit old Shirley and spent 5 days there. I found everything strange and very few old land marks left. I visited the county home and Mrs. Wilson the lady of the house was very kind to entertain me and show me through. There are thirty-three inmates at the home. She showed me through the Ladies' rooms and I tried to have a cheering word for all. Many of them were up in years. I found one 92 years old. As I was past my 82nd year it did me good to visit them. I found only 3 persons I once knew, David Myers, Peter Burket and John Jacobs. The latter was very poorly. He seems to have no recollection, no mind of his own. He is 80 years old. I found Daniel Myers over 81 very active for his age. He showed me over the town and pointed out the changes as he had a good memory of the many changes in the last sixty-five years. I also made many new friends in Shirleysburg. Brother George Swayne was very kind to me and took me out to the Stone Church on Monday to visit the cemetery for which I feel thankful.

Next week I will give the readers more about the cemeteries in Shirley, Saltillo and Germany Valley, also other news of interest.

50,000 AUTO LICENSES

Harrisburg, June 21.—The state's income from automobile licenses and the registration of chauffeurs and motor-cycles went over the $500,000 mark today and at the same time the automobile division at the state highway department sold tag No. 50,000.

The revenue from the automobile and motorcycle business this year smashes all records and it is a matter of regret that the half million dollars can not be made available for improvement or maintenance of state highways as the laws contemplate, but which owing to the construction placed upon them by the fiscal authorities can not be used for the purposes without specific appropriation for the next legislature.

The income from the same source for the last three years approximates more than a million dollars so that if the next general assembly chooses to go back it will have something like $1,500,000 to appropriate to highways.

"BE THOU FAITHFUL UNTO DEATH."

By Gertrude W. Seibert.

Faithful when with tears thine eyes are dim,
Faithful when Joy's cup o'erflows its brim;
Faithful when God seems to veil His face,
Faithful when He crowns Thy work with grace.
Faithful, though thy loved ones turn aside,
Lips that praised thee once, in harshness chide;
Faithful, though success enwreathe thy brow,
Faithful, should the world before thee bow.
Faithful till hath fled life's fleeting breath,
Eager hands lie folded still in death.

"Faithful unto death!" Lord, day by day,
Help me thus to keep the narrow way!
Strengthen me to bear the scorn and shame,—
Portion of all those who take Thy name.
"Faithful unto death!" When all is done,
Cross is changed to Crown, the victory won,
Let me hear Thee say, O, blessed Lord,
"Child, come enter into thy reward!
Faithful thou hast been, come share with Me
Glory, Honour, Immortality!"

TWO INTERESTING LETTERS

The following letter was written some time ago to Mr. Jerry Shope of Mount Union, from his friend Wm. M. Mathes of Ashland, Oregon:

Nov. 27, 1912.

Mr. Jerry Shope,
Mount Union, Pa.

Esteemed Friend:—

Yours of the 21st received, and I am more than pleased to get so much good news from my former old home. I think I told you in my last letter that I get no news from Pennsylvania since Sadie Mathes got married, and I know nothing of them, nor any of my relatives. Miss Ada Gifford of Shirleysburg did write a year ago, but nothing since that. All the Giffords that knew me are dead, and I am now writing to some of the distant relatives in the Middle States to see if anyone is still living whom I once knew. But I have not heard from any of them yet. Well, you first speak of work, making wheelbarrows for past time and hunting. I do some work every day for exercise. The boys, that is my boys, have large lots and there is alfalfa to mow four times during the summer, then potato digging and wood to get for the summer, etc. I cut my own wood on my mountain land. I have 200 acres of timber and I cut it in 4-foot lengths, cord wood. I have hauled it home and put it into the basement and I saw it with a bucksaw three times through. It gives me lots of exercise for the winter to cut sixor eight cords of wood. We have been having fine weather here in the Valley, but a great deal of rain in the mountain ranges. You speak of hunting; well I must tell you of my hunting a few weeks ago. My youngest son and I got up three horses and packed two of them with provisions and bedding and then started on a two weeks' hunt. It is 16 miles out on the coast range to where there is good hunting. But it rained on us nearly all the time. Nevertheless, George killed three deer, two bucks and one female, all fine and fat. I didn't kill any. It was too dark and cloudy for my eyes in the yew timber. Then we returned to our home. I had to walk 16 miles and I made it in almost a half day and my legs were not sore, even the next morning. John shot and wounded a bear, but did not get it. We do not have any wild turkeys on the coast, but pheasants of both kinds, China and the same as you have in Pennsylvania, also squirrels are plenty, and some young rabbits as big as three of yours, and quails, two different kinds. Valley quails are a beautiful bird. Have a top-knot on their head. The mountain quail is as large as your pheasant. Well, I have been bothered so often since I commenced this letter. It is poorly written and composed, but perhaps you can get together and read it. Tomorrow is Thanksgiving Day and my folks have what they call a big dinner—two turkeys and two chickens roasted as well as other things in proportion. So I had to go to the grocery oftener than I can tell you correctly. It is only across the street, but it bothered me and interfered with my writing this letter. You wanted to know how the election suited me. It is just the best thing that has been done for America in many years. I was truly glad to see a change in our presidents. I did not finish my statement about Thanksgiving. There are four of our family, three of them have families of their own—five or six children, so you see it takes some providing for all, and one or two visitors. Well, I have just looked over your interesting letter to see if there was anything to be answered. You speak of times being quite flourishing and prosperity in different branches of business. It is not so here—nothing going on and money is very scarce. I will close for this time with the promise to do better next time. You speak of not getting any more feeble. I am glad to hear that. I am better than when I was back there two and one-half years ago. Give my regards to all my friends. WM. M. MATHES.

Letter from D. P. Keefer

Mountain Home, Idaho,
Jan. 30, 1913.

Dear Editors:—

After visiting your town last summer, where I was the guest in your home and where we met face to face for the first time, I wish to acknowledge the kindness that you showed me while in your midst. I have been a reader of the Times since 1890. I wish to thank you too for the copy of your History of Mount Union, Shirleysburg and Shirley Township, a book of 752 pages, which you presented to me at the time of my leaving town. At my leisure hours this winter I find your book very interesting to an old resident of your county in the thirties and forties. There are many names mentioned in it of persons that I know. The letters of C. B. Smelker on pages 94 and 97 are interesting. The names of all in Shirley Township and Germany Valley are familiar to the writer, as at that time I was a resident of that section. I can remember nearly all those names of the earlier days. Also on page 27 I find

The Laymen's Missionary Convention in Altoona

One of the greatest religious assemblies we have ever attended was gathered in Altoona on Monday last. The sessions of the convention of the Laymen's Missionary Movement opened on Sunday and did not close until Tuesday. Monday afternoon and evening, however, were the sessions we attended. The evening session on Monday was the convention supper, held in the paint shops of the P. R. R., and at which there were probably 3000 men in attendance.

The afternoon session on Monday was held in the Second Presbyterian church. There were a number of strong addresses by such prominent men in the movement as Rev. I. B. Wolf, D. D., of Baltimore, Rev. C J. Musser, D. D., of Philadelphia, Rev. Fred B. Fisher, Ph. D., of New York, and J. Campbell White also of New York. Rev. Fisher talked on "How to conduct an every member canvas", and Mr. White talked on "Solving the problem of Church and Missionary Finance". These addresses were all splendid, and we regret that lack of space forbids us to print some of the excellent things they said.

In the evening, at the dinner, there were three addresses, the first by Mornay Williams of New York, subject "Sowing and Reaping"; Missionary prospect and retrospect. In this address Mr. Williams pointed out the founders of missionary work, and the long years of hardship and disappointment, before any evident results were seen. He noted the vast progress of missionary enterprise, and emphasized as laymen, that it is necessary that we keep up the missionary zeal, and not let the work of our forefathers become lax or ineffective. Geo. Innes of Philadelphia, spoke on: "What would you be worth if you lost all your money?" Mr. Innes was a very fluent speaker, and did not hesitate to say that we are by no means giving enough to the Lord, for after all everything belongs to Him, and we are the stewards of His possessions. That man is poor who cheats God, and never gives anything towards the spreading of His Gospel. Mr. Innes was formerly a prominent business man, who relinquished the grind of the mercantile life and enlisted in the work of saving souls. He says that now he would not care by any means to return to the former occupation, for the greatest business enterprise after all is to be incorporated in the business of the Lord.

The last speaker in the evening was J. Campbell White of New York. The subject of his address was the "Decisive Decade of History." Mr. White gave a masterful discussion, and told one great truth after another. It is too true that the churches of the world are giving on an average of 30 cents a week per capita to the Lord. This would scarcely be the cigar bill of the ordinary smoker for a single day. The matter of systematic giving to God, of money, for both missionary and current needs was emphasized strongly and if all would give in proper proportion, then there would be enough funds to evangelize the world in this generation, without any doubt. We regret that we cannot print this address of Mr. White's in full, for it is something that all our readers should know about. The sessions, we attended were heartily listened to and we feel sure that they went home. The audiences were held spellbound, for the truth was before them, and the truth cannot be evaded. Instances were cited where rich men in the country to-day are supporting missionaries in the field, and where they are giving a certain amount of their incomes to the Lord's work. We do not hear of these things very often, but we are often too ready to denounce the man with his money, and think that he gets it illegally, and spends it too lavishly. Our country is on a move toward righteousness, and despite the evil in many high places the Lord's work is progressing. Christ is going to win, said Mr. White, and the great question is whether we are going to be the victors with him or not.

It is gratifying to know that Mount Union was well represented at this convention supper. There were 14 present from here, namely, Clay Rorer, John Isenberg, C. B. Ewing, Alton Fields, R. W. Hill, Rev. C. W. Todd, Dr. W. J. Campbell, Chas. I. Fuller, T. A. Appleby, J. Donald Appleby, Dr. Herkness, Rev. Mumford, H. D. Stake, and Chas. H. Welch. There were 12 from the Presbyterian church, and one from each of the Methodist and Lutheran.

The laymen's movement should interest every man who loves his country and his God. The preachers cannot save the world alone, but it must needs have the testimony and the co-operation of the laymen as well.

NO NEED TO STOP WORK

When the doctor orders you to stop work it staggers you. I can't, you say. You know you are weak, run down and failing in health day by day, but you must work as long as you can stand. What you need is Electric Bitters to give tone, strength and vigor to your system, to prevent breakdown and build you up. Don't be weak, sickly or ailing when Electric Bitters will benefit you from the first dose. Thousands bless them for their glorious health and strength. Try them. GEORGE WASHINGTON

An Unfamiliar but Authentic Portrait of Washington.

Thank God! the people's choice was just,
The one man equal to his trust,
Wise beyond lore, and without weakness good,
Calm in the strength of flawless rectitude!

His rule of order, justice, peace,
Made possible the world's release;
Taught prince and serf that power is but a trust,
And rule alone which serves the ruled is just.

—Whittier.

Washington the Truly Great Man

You must excuse me from uniting with you to honor the memory of your illustrious countryman, since I could not do so with sincerity, for Washington scorned a crown, and did more to bring royalty into contempt than all men who have ever lived.—Emperor Francis I. of Austria.

Until time shall be no more will a test of the progress which our race has made in wisdom and virtue be derived from the veneration paid to the immortal name of Washington.—Lord Brougham.

Again is here the anniversary of the birth of George Washington—a legal holiday from Porto Rico to the Philippines, and a notable day to the 160,000,000 who are carrying the English language around the globe, as well as to all civilized peoples.

Washington's place in history has long been fixed. If he is not the greatest man of all time it is not possible to name a greater. This is the judgment of civilization and has stood unchanged during the years since his death.

Nevertheless, history has done Washington a great wrong. Unable to find in him the imperfections of humanity, it cast aside his humanity and re-created him as an impersonal superman, as far removed from flesh and blood as are his marble statues.

This deification of Washington is a thing that we American must undo. Weighed in the balance as flesh and blood, he loses not one jot or tittle, but rather gains in greatness, while we gain a human Father of this Country. For George Washington, in spite of history, was as human as any son of Adam.

The proof that Washington was very human—a man of full blood and hot temper, sensitive, modest and doubtful of his capacity, fond of the good things of life as he saw them and reluctant to give them up even at the call of duty—is ready for the asking. It is in the writings of Washington himself—not so much in those state documents in which he was more or less on parade—as in the thousands of intimate pages of diaries and letters. Let the student once forget Washington the demigod, and Washington the man springs to life from these writings. And there is abundant corroboration—if it were needed—in the writings of his contemporaries.

Delving into Washington's papers in search of the real man, we come upon all sorts of little things that show him to have been very much like the rest of us in many ways. We have space for but these:

The superciliousness of the British officer rasped the Colonial Washington to the quick. After the Great Meadows campaign he declined a nondescript command in these words: "If you think me capable of holding a commission that has neither rank nor emolument annexed to it you must entertain a very contemptible opinion of my weakness, and believe me to be more empty than the commission itself."

Washington liked good wine and his Madeira was famous. We find him aghast over the fact that fifty-six bottles of it had been served to casual visitors at Mount Vernon during his absence and writing to have it stopped at once. He says claret is good enough for people "who may incline to make a convenience of the house in traveling, or who may be induced to visit it from motives of curiosity."

Washington's dislike for slavery and his humanity to his slaves are beyond question. Nevertheless we find him writing: "And what sort of sickness is Patty Davis'? A more lazy, deceitful, and impudent hussy is not to be found in the United States."

When Washington was elected president he wrote to Knox: "In confidence, I tell you * * * that my movement to the chair of government will be accompanied by feelings not unlike those of a culprit who is going to the place of his execution."

Washington kept his hot temper under iron control. He abhorred profanity. And here are two touches of nature that make us all akin: At Monmouth, finding the traitor Lee in retreat, he galloped up to him at full speed and swore at him "until the leaves shook on the trees * * * like an angel from heaven." In a cabinet meeting some one handed him a cartoon representing him as being publicly executed by the guillotine. Jefferson thus writes of the scene:

"The president was much inflamed, got into one of those passions when he cannot command himself, ran on to the personal abuse which had been bestowed on him, defied any man on earth to produce one single act of his since he had been in the government which was not done on the purest motives; that he had never repented but once having slipped the moment of resigning his office, and that was every moment since; that by God he would rather be in his grave than in his present situation."

Washington was no freak of genius, springing to life full-armed for the work to which he was called. He was a consistent continuance of the family pattern. He "increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man." He grew, just as we all grow.

The Washington who was so embarrassed by the thanks of the Virginia house of Burgesses that he could not speak, and thus called forth Speaker Robinson's immortal "Sit down, Mr. Washington; your modesty is equal to your valor, and that surpasses the power of any language that I possess," was a very different Washington from the Washington who awed the great of all the world.

Had Washington died before he became commander-in-chief he would be remembered merely as a gallant Colonial soldier and rich planter; if just after the surrender of Yorktown, as one of the great generals of the world; if after the Federal convention, as a political leader and great general. It requires his presidency to establish his statesmanship. And finally it took his retirement to private life to give the last touch to his patriotism and proclaim him

"First in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen."

Washington's "Charmed Life."

The Indians said Washington bore a charmed life after he got four bullets through his coat and had two horses shot under him in a movement led by General Braddock against Fort Duquesne.

Showed His Wisdom Early.

George Washington was just twenty-one years old when Governor Dinwiddie sent sim on a perilous journey to Ohio to find out the strength of the French, which he accomplished handily.

THE NEW PRESIDENT

THE TIME, MY SOUL, IS SHORT!

By Gertrude W. Seibert.

No time to linger by the way,
No time for ease, no time for play;
No time for earthly loves or joys,
No time for worldly cares or toys,
The time, my soul, is short!

No time to murmur or complain,
No time to heed the heart's dull pain;
No time for tears or mournful song,
No time to ask, How far? How long?—
The time, my soul, is short!

Ah, yes! 'tis short,—just time enough
To run thy course, so steep and rough,
Just time to reap "the fields," so white,
Before the coming of "the night,"
Just time, my soul, just time!

Just time to make thy heart more pure,
Just time to make thy "calling" sure,
Just time to enter through "the door,"
To reign with Christ for evermore,—
Just time, my soul, just time!

HARRIS & EWING WASHINGTON, D. C. ©

WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT.

Review of Taft's Administration

THE four years of the Presidency of William H. Taft have passed into history. It has been an administration concerning which there are wide divergences of opinion. Its several distinguishing features, like those of any administration, are criticized and condemned, on the one hand, and approved and applauded, on the other. Time will be required to convince the future whether he has been right or wrong, but there can be scarcely any doubt that it will pronounce his policies to have been right. Some of them should be, and, it is hoped, will be made the permanent policies of the country.

In one thing concerning Mr. Taft there is general, or, it may be said, universal argument. His sincerity, integrity of purpose and devotion to duty have not been doubted. He has discharged his obligations to the people with fidelity and as he believed himself to be called upon to do by his oath of office and the laws which he had to administer. Even political enemies will not deny him the credit he is so clearly entitled to in these respects.

A matter that had more effect upon the fortunes of his administration than any other was the change of attitude towards him assumed by his predecessor, Colonel Roosevelt. Had the latter been controlled by disinterested motives and refrained from permitting his own ambition to seek to replace Taft and to divide the party which elected both of them, the change in the Presidency which occurred last Tuesday would not have taken place, but, instead, the second administration of Taft would have been inaugurated. To Colonel Roosevelt we owe the fact that we have a Democratic President.

One of the policies of Mr. Taft which was offensive to his predecessor was his too vigorous prosecution of the trusts. Colonel Roosevelt had been something of a "trust buster" himself, and was proud and boastful of his record in that respect, but it was only a part of the trusts that he wanted to "bust". He had set aside a few which he called "good trusts" and which were not to be disturbed, but were really to be aided in making themselves stronger and in fastening themselves more firmly upon a patient and suffering public.

Among these were the steel trust and the harvester trust, Morgan-Perkins combinations, which Mr. Taft proceeded to prosecute for the same violations of law for which Colonel Roosevelt had prosecuted other trusts. This was not according to the Colonel's contemplated program, nor was it according to the Morgan-Perkins program, and it gave mortal offense to the whole outfit, which expected to go on with the breaking of the anti-trust law without interference by the government. It expected an immunity from prosecution, which had not been given to others. But this it did not receive at Mr. Taft's hands.

His impartiality in proceedings has been the evidence of his entire integrity in the matter. There has been no favortism, so setting apart of some trusts as "good trusts" and others as "bad trusts", when all were equally guilty. He has made no invidious discriminations, but has brought the whole trust brood into court and made them answer for their crimes.

He found some prosecutions pending when he came into office, the most important of which were those against the oil trust and the tobacco trust. These were carried to successful conclusions, and, although the results were not all that had been hoped for nor entirely satisfactory to the country, they established the efficiency of the anti-trust law and indicated how it might be effectively enforced. Since this was accomplished, some trusts have acknowledged the illegality of their organization and their acts and have voluntarily dissolved; others have been convicted and their dissolution decreed by the courts, and in several instances the trust officials have been found guilty under criminal clause of the law and sentenced to fines and imprisonment In no instance thus far disposed of has the government failed to establish its case. New prosecutions were brought until almost the last day of his term.

Mr. Taft, as President, firmly established his reputation and character as a man of peace. The treaties negotiated by him with foreign countries to bring arbitration of international disagreements went further than any similar measures had ever done. In fact, the objection made to them was that they went too far and provided for the arbitration of disputes which no nation ought to be willing to submit to such a method of settlement. It was upon this ground that the treaties were rejected by the United States Senate. In recognition of his many and earnest efforts in behalf of peace, the medal of the Institute of Social Science has been bestowed upon him, an honor richly merited.

He sought to render his country a service by the reciprocity treaty with Canada. Although there was opposition to the freedom of commercial intercourse for which it provided, the country sustained him in it and the Senate ratified it. He hoped that, if it went into effect, it might result in closer political relations between the two countries. The Canadians alleged that this was his purpose, and, fearing what might be the ultimate consequences, defeated it by their votes at an election.

The Democratic program of tariff for revenue only, embodied in the bills passed at the last regular session of Congress, was prevented from being put into effect by Mr. Taft's veto. The grounds upon which he did this were satisfactory and convincing. Whatever reason there may have been for a revision of the tariff, and a reduction of it, the measure presented to him by the Democrats were too nearly actual free trade to receive his approval. As a Republican President he could have pursued no other course.

Under his careful administration and attention the Panama canal has approached completion. It will be a monument to the ability and integriiy of Mr. Taft and of all whom he entrusted with the work of constructing it. It is an honor to them and to the country and will be a perpetual testimonial to the fact that it is possible for a nation to perform a great public undertaking better, more economically and as honestly as it can be done by private enterprise.

The affairs of Alaska have been wisely conducted, and, under the policy instituted, it will develop into a great territory, producing inestimable volumes of mineral wealth. Conservation of the national resources of the country have been guarded and protected to keep them out of the hands of exploiters and monopolists and preserve them for this and future generations. Mr. Taft has been a prudent and patriotic President and as such he will go down into history, his work receiving higher appreciation than it has in his own day.

MARCH ARGUMENT COURT

The regular March Argument court convened on Monday, March 3, at 10 o'clock a. m., with President Judge J. M. Woods and Associate Judge Harris Richardson, on the bench. Judge Lightner was too ill to be present, he being still confined to his bed and in a serious condition.

The following routine work was disposed of:

R. A. Orbison appointed auditor to make distribution of balance in the hands of Mary Miller, administratrix of the estate of Daniel McElwain, late of Oneida township, deceased.

Upon two petitions presented rules were granted upon the Huntingdon Water Supply company to show cause why the water rates charged to the petitioners should not be reduced as prayed for, returnable to next argument court.

H. L. Henderson, Esq., appointed master to take testimony and report in Mary E. Mertiff vs. Percy Mertiff, libel in divorce.

Report of Charles C. Brewster, auditor appointed to make distribution of balance in the hands of Amanda Zeigler, executrix of Mrs. Ellen V. Doyle, late of the borough of Huntingdon, deceased, confirmed ni si.

Subpoena in divorce awarded in Mary Amanda Morgan vs. William Morgan, returnable to 1st Monday of April, next.

In the assigned estate of Jackson L. Grove, the sale of two properties was confirmed and the sale of the remainder of the properties continued until May term.

Rule granted on John H. Westbrook and David H. Myers to appear and show cause why sale of certain real estate should not be opened and a re-sale of the property ordered by the court, returnable to next argument court.

W. Bruce Summers, executor of the estate of Martin L. Summers, directed to sell the real estate for the payment of legacies, at public sale.

W. M. Henderson, executor of John Anderson, late of Spruce Creek township, deceased, discharged from further duties as executor.

J. M. Steese, Esq., administrator of the estate of Sadie Warsing, authorized to sell real estate for the payment of debts.

This being the regular license court the applications for license to sell spirituous and vinous liquors were taken up when court convened at 1:30 p. m.

The first case heard was that of James McIntyre, for the Mountain House at Robertsdale. W. W. Chisholm, attorney for the applicant, called Mr. McIntyre as a witness. He testified to the prevalence of drinking at Robertsdale; that beer and whiskey were shipped in there in large quantities; that drinking was not only indulged in freely on weekdays, but on Sunday as well. On cross examination, he could not say that a licensed hotel in the place would prevent this promiscuous drinking, but that it could not make it worse, and that he would not sell to persons of known intemperate habits, neither would he sell on Sunday.

O. W. Moore was the next witness called. He also testified to bad conditions existing at Robertsdale on account of the drinking constantly going on. Could not say that a licensed hotel would stop drinking, or shipping in of the intoxicants. On cross examination, he testified that the conditions are much better since the state constabulary had been stationed there.

John Creager was the next witness called. He testified to the great prevalence of drinking, and that he thought that conditions would be better with a licensed hotel. He said intoxicants could be bought at any time in the village, and further that he had purchased the same himself. On cross examination, Mr. Woods put the question, "Where did you get the liquor?" Witness was not able to give the name. At this point Judge Woods said to the witness that he give the name of the party who sold to him to the district attorney, and the offender would be brought before the court for trial. Witness still insisted that he could not name the offender. District Attorney Brewster suggested that the witness point out the house where the liquor was obtained to the constable at Robertsdale, and in this way the offender could be identified.

Clay Cornelius was called and testified to practically the same as the former witness. When asked by Mr. Woods where he had purchased liquor in Robertsdale, he too, could not give any name. The court promptly directed him also to furnish the district attorney with the name of the offender.

Mr. Koch, the railroad agent at Robertsdale, was called and gave the various amounts of beer, whiskey and wine that had been shipped into Robertsdale in the last two months: By freight, 2671 cases, 980 ⅛ barrels, 30 ¼ barrels, 6 ½ barrels of beer; 7 barrels and 5 kegs of wine; 3 barrels and 3 kegs of whiskey; 94 packages weighing as much as 500 to the package.

But one witness was called for the remonstrants, Rev. McElnay. He testified that as a minister in charge of the Methodist congregation, he knew of the conditions at Robertsdale, and that he believed as the remonstrants set forth, that a license at this place is not necessary.

At the conclusion of the testimony J. R. Simpson, Esq., spoke in behalf of the remonstrants and briefly called the attention of the court to the law and the discretion vested in the court, and that further, under the lease as it was drawn, he did not see how the court could grant this license. He was followed by James S. Woods, Esq., who reviewed the testimony of the applicant's own witnesses to show that this license should not be granted. He attacked the lease on the ground that it contained clauses that under the law would not permit of the granting of a license in this place. The lease called for the reservation of certain rooms in the hotel building for the use of the company owning the hotel. It also provided for a rental of $100 a month, in case license was granted, but $25 per month if no license were granted.

On Tuesday the court refused the license.

The other applicants were represented by S. I. Spyker, Esq., the remonstrants by R. A. Orbison, Esq. Mr. Orbison went over each list of remonstrants showing the amount of real property represented by the remonstrants and the signers of the application respectively, then argued the law side of the case, as he explained, for the benefit of Judge Richardson; that under the law and in face of the specific remonstrances, no licenses should be granted.

No remonstrance was presented against Schaffner Brothers, Orbisonia.

Mr. Spyker closed the argument and took occasion to say that to his mind the whole proceeding was a farce, for the reason that the court knew the conditions as they exist and it is a matter of discretion on the part of the court as to whether they will or will not grant licenses.

The following cases were argued and decisions reserved:

John Itinger et al. vs. George P. Suppes, equity; Commonwealth vs. Frank Renello, No. 9, September sessions, motion and reasons for a new trial; R. J. Mattern vs. J. L. Isenberg, rule to show cause; P. Brown's executors vs. John Brown's extx., motion and reasons for a new trial; in the Orphans' Court, exceptions to distribution under partition proceedings in the estate of David Long, deceased. Exceptions to set aside sale of real estate of R. W. Hudson, deceased, by Paul W. Rupert, executor.

RAILROAD GLEANINGS

The Pennsylvania Railroad company has just placed orders for 2,305 railway freight cars. Of these cars, 1,000 refrigerator and 500 steel and wood gondolas will be built by the American Car & Foundry company at Berwick, Pa., and 805 steel and wood gondolas by the Standard Steel Car company at Butler, Pa.

All of the above are for replacements on the Pennsylvania lines east of Pittsburgh. The new cars will be of 100,000 pounds capacity, taking the place of cars of 60,000 pounds average capacity. This equipment will thus represent a net increase in carrying capacity of 46,100 tons.

The gondola cars will cost approximately $1,215 each, and the refrigerator cars will cost $2,010 each, or about $200 more than similar cars cost six months ago. Each of the gondola and refrigerator cars requires about 40,000 pounds of steel. The execution of this order, therefore, will require at least 46,000 tons of steel, exactly the amount of net increase in Pennsylvania railroad carrying capacity. The total cost to the Railroad company for these replacements will amount to approximately $3,595,575.

The foregoing are in addition to the 10,000 new cars ordered a few days ago. Of these, the Pressed Steel Car company will build 2,000 at McKee's Rocks, Pa., and 500 at Hegewisch, Ill.; the Standard Steel Car company will build 1,500 at Butler, Pa.; the Cambria Steel company 4,500 at Johnstown, Pa., and the Ralston Steel Car & Foundry company 500 at Columbus, Ohio. In addition, the American Car & Foundry company will build 1,000 cars at their plants.

The execution of the above orders, amounting to a total of 12,305, will require 286,100 tons of steel, and a total outlay on the part of the railroad company of $17,036,575.

Copies are being sent out by the Penn State Civic league of which R. E. Atkinson is president and C. S. Adams secretary.

The act is expected to fill "a long felt want" that has existed ever since the railroads ceased issuing passes for the transportation of voters to their homes. One of the results of this policy was the spending of considerable sums of money by political organizations and candidates to get voters home. In some cases the voters themselves put up the cash. There has been a considerable falling off in the college students vote in recent years, many seekers after knowledge preferring to lose their votes rather than to pay their railroad fares.

SURPRISE PARTY

A very pleasant party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Montague of Decorum, Wednesday evening, February 26th, in honor of their daughter, Miss Ethel's, sixteenth birthday. The arrangements were so carefully planned and executed that the affair was a complete surprise to the young lady. The evening was spent with music and games until about ten-thirty when the guests were invited to the dining room to partake of the good things there awaiting them, the special feature being a large cake bearing sixteen lighted candles emblematic of the occasion. The color scheme throughout was pink and white which lent a pretty touch to everything. Miss Ethel was the recipient of many handsome and useful presents. Those present were: Misses Maude and Alda Peterson, Edith Wiley, Sarah Brodbeck, Priscilla and Edith Appleby, Goldie Bowman, Dorothy Miller, Clementine Peterson, Fay and Emma Kelly, Esther and Alice Welch, Mamie Comerer and Irene Kope, Messrs. Clarence Peterson, Homer Gill, Dallas and Foster McGowan, Raymond Rosenberry, LaVan and Harry Montague, Roy Fraker, Harvey Comerer, Stull and Kalb Baldwin, Donald Kope and Julian McGehee.

Alexander Parsons

Mrs. Rosa Love

In Memoriam

The following lines have been sent to us with photos, in memory of Alexander Parsons late of Tell township and his daughter, Mrs Rosa Love, late of Germany Valley. The lines have been submitted by Ida Pearl Sweigart, daughter and sister of the deceased, respectively. Eds.]

Dear Rosa, how we miss you,
And our eyes are dim with tears,
When the vision comes before us,
Of the onward rushing years.

Of the years we shall not see thee,
Never more your laughter hear,
Of the comfort that you gave us,
With your young life's brightening cheer.

When we see your grave,—our dear one,
Covered o'er with flowers or snow:
We shall kneel and whisper to you,
How we love you here below.

But we know that God in heaven
Calls the first in His great love,
To the brightest of Earth's treasures
To their great reward above.

Our Father's place is vacant,
A voice we loved is stilled,
An emptiness is in our lives
Which never can be filled,
And we kneel in week submission,
To the great, the Holy One;
Not our will, on Heavenly Father
But thy blessed will, be done.

"HOW LONG, OH LORD, HOW LONG?"

By Gertrude W. Seibert.

How long, oh Lord, how long
Shall weakness serve the strong?
How long shall Might make Right,
And darkness hate the light?

How long, oh Lord, how long,
Till Truth shall crush the wrong,
Till darkness turn to day,
And sorrow flee away?

How long till wars shall cease,
This turmoil end in peace?
How long the sin-cursed Earth
Await her second birth?

How long, Lord, must I feel
The proud oppressor's heel,—
I'm weary of the night,
I long for morning light!

I long to see Thy face,
I long for Thine embrace,—
How long, Lord, till I come
To my long-promised home?

* * * * *

Not long, my child, not long,
Be brave, be true, be strong!
The Day-star doth appear,
The Kingdom draweth near!

Look up, my child, look up,
The last drop's in Thy Cup!
Trust where thou canst not see,—
I soon will call for Thee!

Death of Mrs. Abigail McMullen

Abigail McMullen, wife of Wm. F. McMullen, died at her home near Salem on February 22nd 1913. Funeral Services were conducted by Rev. Groh, after which her remains were laid to rest in the French cemetery.

We are sorry for her departure but we are glad to know that she has passed to a bright and glorious home.

She was 69 years, 5 months and 7 days old, and is survived by her husband, 1 son and 1 daughter.

Mrs. McMullen lived her years as a serviceable women. She was kind, and would lend a helping hand to any one who needed help. She was always ready to do for any body the best she knew how.

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving remembrance of our dear husband and father, Jacob W. Love, who departed this life February 27, 1912. Aged 70 years. Gone but not forgotten.

He has crossed the river and entered the gate,
While we are left here to watch and wait;
He is free from sorrow and wears the crown,
We groan 'neath the cross, his is laid down.

Our pathway is lonely, we miss him, Oh, yes,
More gladly, eagerly, onward we press,
To meet him and loved ones in that happy land,
Crowned victors with them, an unbroken band.

Weep not for me my friends so kind,
That I the kingdom first should find;
Weep not for me my friends so dear,
I am not dead, but sleeping here.

For beyond this world of changes,
Far beyond this world of care,
We shall meet our dearest loved ones
In the Heavenly mansion fair.

FOURTH NUMBER OF THE ALUMNI COURSE OF ENTERTAINMENTS

Wednesday Evening, March 19th

THE WATERMAN CONCERT COMPANY.

The Waterman Concert Company comprises three members, Miss Emily Waterman, reader; Miss Lillian Whitman, pianist, and Mr. William T. Shafer, soloist.

Miss Waterman has done Lyceum work for several years and has appeared in many parts of the country. During the season of 1911 and 1912 she appeared as the reader with the Four Artists, which was one of the best and highest priced companies under Redpath management.

She was so successful with this company that it was early decided that another year she should be the star of her own company. The trio herewith described is the result of this decision. Her work is not only pleasing to the average auditor seeking for amusement only, but, as some one has truly said, appeals to the discriminating taste of ladies and gentlemen who are devotees of the arts and who regard the average reciter in the light of something to be avoided.

Miss Lillian Whitman, who received her musical education at the famous Oberlin Conservatory, will render piano solos and play the accompaniments in the Waterman Company.

During the season of 1910 and 1911 Miss Whitman played with the Bartolotta Concert Company on some of its most important dates. Signor Bartolotta, the noted Italian tenor, now of Detroit, and Mr. and Mrs. Gaylord Yost of the same company, now of the Indianapolis Conservatory of Music, and all of whom are very particular as to the playing of their accompaniments, were greatly pleased with Miss Whitman's work.

LILLIAN WHITMAN, EMILY WATERMAN AND WILLIAM T. SHAFER.

Mr. William T. Shafer is the vocal soloist of the Waterman Company and will sing several tenor selections during each evening's program.

Mr. Alfred Williams, musical director of the Redpath Bureau and who has appeared as soloist with the Theodore Thomas Orchestra, says of Mr. Shafer that he has a most unusual voice, sympathetic in quality, and that he is a dignified singer—in fact, a born artist. He further pronounces Mr. Shafer's voice unlike any other singer he has ever heard.

DEATH OF FRED HARRIS

Mr. Fred Harris, a respected citizen of Rockhill borough, died Thursday morning, February 28, from the effects of a stroke that he had suffered a few days previous to his death.

Mr. Harris was a miner by occupation but has been unable to work at his trade for several years on account of delicate health. He was a Christian gentleman, a good citizen a kind husband and father, and will be sadly missed in the home circle as well as by his many friends. He leaves to survive him his wife and several grown up children besides many other close relatives. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon in the M. E. church by the pastor Rev. R. J. Knox. Interment in Orbisonia cemetery.

VOL. XXXX MOUNT UNION, HUNTINGDON COUNTY PA., MARCH 28 1913 NO 47

Hon. B. K. Focht, Who Closed a Remarkable Administration in Congress on March 4th

A Man Who Did Things. A Friend of the Rich and the Poor Alike

The ending of the Sixty-second Congress at noon on March 4th, 1913, saw the retirement of our Republican Congressman to be succeeded by a Democrat. This is one of the fruits of the ill-starred campaign of 1912, and it is brought right home to us. The people of the 17th Congressional District are not Democrats by a large majority, yet for two years because they were divided on other issues, we will be represented by a Democrat who will not reflect the Republican sentiment of our people, either regular Republicans or Progressives, but he will necessarily complacently take his orders from a majority of the Democratic caucus which is dominated from first to last by Southern Democrats of the free trade type. Furthermore, this district was for the return of Focht, and when the public state of mind was normal at the time of the primary election, and all had an opportunity of expressing their preference, Focht was then morally elected, for he received within several hundred votes of as many as the total vote of the two Republicans and the Democrat who was later elected by a minority of the electors. Probably no more deservedly popular candidate ever ran for an office than is Focht, and yet he was defeated.

But his defeat was not intentional for thousands of good men in their eagerness to vote for Roosevelt overlooked the fact that Focht's name appeared where it was placed by an overwhelming popular vote, on the Republican ticket, and not on the Washington ticket, which was made up a short time before election by seven men who met at Harrisburg, hence chagrin and regret are everywhere expressed that a man who held and now holds the hearts of the people must go into retirement after such a short though brilliant career in Congress.

It is a most notable fact that so popular and beloved is Focht among the masses that out of fifty newspapers printed in the district not more than three or four could be found which had the disposition or temerity to assail or besmirch him, and those papers which did are conducted by men who are now applicants for postoffices at the hands of the Democratic incumbent, or are sore over past disappointments.

This paper has been for Focht from the start. We have known him long and have observed his aggressiveness as a battler for the people. He stood straight up and fought all along the line as a Representative at Harrisburg, and when he headed for Congress we believed he would do the same thing there, and he has fulfilled our prophecy.

At Harrisburg he was in the contest for the farmers on the equalization of taxation measures, the protection of the dairy interests, good roads, free school books for all children, laws protecting the miners, railroaders and workmen, firemen's relief, dental and medical laws, election of United States Senators by popular vote, bridges for the Juniata and other public streams at the State's expense, helped form the agricultural department, and was for every piece of constructive legislation considered in that body. He retired with an enviable record to be advanced to Congressional honors.

Focht's father was born and raised in Huntingdon county, and was a preacher and powerful champion of the Union during the war time, his death resulting from exposure in helping check the raids of the invading confederates into lower Pennsylvania. It has therefore been but natural for us to have followed the career of his son with more than common interest. Realizing how hard it is for a new member to receive recognition in Congress we did not hope for any early prominence, but we were mistaken in our fears with respect to Focht, for with that characteristic snap and mental force we soon found our member doing things for the people and becoming conspicuous on the floor as a debater. No one need ask, What has Focht done? He has done just about any and everything anybody ever asked him to do. Whenever any man, woman or child wrote him about anything under the sun he was prompt in supplying the want. Responses always came quickly and satisfactorily. A perfect demon for work, for six years he daily handled from fifty to one hundred letters from his constituents, and did it all with completeness although many of them were long and referred to old and complicated pension cases. This was exclusive of his departmental and work on the floor of the House and in Committee. When Focht went home from Washington the other day he took with him forty mail sacks containing files of letters and documents he handled while in Washington. He is the limit as a worker and stands with an unbeaten record for the dispatch of the business of the people.

Whenever a school boy or girl over the district wanted some points to help in a debate or discussion and they wrote to our Congressman he always furnished what was desired and did it with the same care he went about getting a one hundred thousand dollar Federal building for Huntingdon, and one for one hundred thousand for Chambersburg, and one for eighty thousand for Lewistown. Hundreds of special pensions for old soldiers, their widows and crippled children which had previously been time and again turned down, Focht put through. When the soldiers and citizens of Orbisonia wanted cannon for their cemetery, and we wanted cannon here, and Lewistown and other places wanted them Focht procured them; with unheard-of energy and interest in the people he dug up car loads of seed and books for the farmers and others; many streams in the district were stocked with fish from the government hatcheries; one hundred and more free rural deliveries in the district stand to his credit; the Parcels Post was largely aided by his efforts on the floor of Congress; he helped better the condition of the postal clerks; he stood like a rock and voted for the Workmen's Compensation bill, and fifty other measures for the benefit of the mechanic and laboring man; never have the farmers had a champion who stood more boldly, ably and fearlessly in debate for their cause than Focht, being one of their leaders in the fight against Reciprocity; within a month, standing against the powerful liquor lobby in Washington, he voted for the Works bill, and when the Webb-Kenyon bill was under consideration and the same liquor lobby was active, he displayed his colors when he not only voted for the bill originally but cast his vote to pass it over the President's veto. Even after his defeat Focht stood for these things for he is a man of principle who never wavers or shirks or runs away from the discharge of a moral duty. Right here will some of his detractors during the late campaign pause for an instant and reflect over the injustice that has been committed.

Did any patriotic society, or veteran organization, or fraternal society of any kind, or farmers' organization ever call upon him to come and speak no matter how far away from Washington that he did not respond and come without thought of accepting even expenses? Although many times difficult to get away from Washington he was always on hand when called.

What has he done? What has he not done for the people? With his wide knowledge of men and affairs and continued service in Washington what would there be that he could not do for the people?

No man was ever defeated whose defeat was less merited and less intended. No man's defeat was ever a greater disappointment and regret to the majority of a great people. Following such service as Focht rendered, and the vote the people gave him at the primary, the measure of his own disappointment can readily be conjectured, and yet he accepted the result as the fortune of circumstances and in a manly way without whimpering or complaining announced that he bore no ill will or malice toward anyone.

This is a Republican district and a Republican should represent it, and we have no hesitation in expressing the belief that as speedily as possible a fair-minded and justice loving people will correct this wrong and vindicate Focht by sending him back to Congress where he so well fits and where his former constituents would be proud to see him and where his country needs him. He is close to the people because he loves to fight straight and clean for them; he never side-steps or trims but meets every issue in the open square-toed and in the middle of the stage. He is intensely human and benevolent, and generous to the core. A great man of the people, from them and one of them; with his ability, dignity and address we have worthy Congressional timber and the people want him back in the harness.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving remembrance of our dear mother, Mrs. T. H. Morgan, who departed this life February 16, 1913.

We loved her, yes, we loved her,
But angels loved her more;
Till gladly they did welcome her,
To yonder shining shore.

We loved her, yes, no tongue can tell,
How much we loved her and so well,
God loved her too and thought it best
To call her home to be at rest.

Sleep, dear Mother, sleep,
No suffering, no pain;
Why should we mourn and weep,
We soon shall meet again.

We miss you when the morning dawns,
We miss you when the night returns,
We miss you here, we miss you there,
Dear Mother, we miss you everywhere.

Far beyond this world of changes,
Far beyond this world of care,
We shall meet our dearest loved one
In the Heavenly Mansion fair.

Daughter, Mrs. J. C. Gifford.

FRONT LINE BANNERS

The Huntingdon County Sunday School association is now awarding beautiful numbered banners to the Sunday schools that meet the following Front Line requirements:

1. School open all year.
2. Cradle Roll and Home Departments.
3. One or more registered Secondary and O. A. B. classes.
4. Graded instruction.
5. A qualified Teacher Training class.
6. Systematic Missionary and Temperance instruction.
7. Definite decisions for Christ urged.
8. Offerings for Denominational and Interdenominational county Sunday school work.
9. Statistics sent to the County Association and school represented at annual or county or district convention.
10. Monthly workers' meetings.

This standard has been set by the State Association, and the following schools have attained it in the order named:

1. Huntingdon—Lutheran. Superintendent, H. W. Wagner.
2. Huntingdon—Presbyterian. Superintendent, Chas. L. Reed.
3. Huntingdon—Brethren. Superintendent, Emmert Swigart.
4. Entriken—Reformed. Superintendent, W. H. Shultz.
5. Russelville—Reformed. Superintendent, Geo. W. Baker.
6. Saltillo—Baptist. Superintendent, S. W. Kimmel.

From now on this list will be augmented each month by the schools that attain Front Line. Watch for the list. It represents the vitally active spots in Huntingdon county Sunday school work.

NO NEED TO STOP WORK

When the doctor orders you to stop work it staggers you. I can't, you say. You know you are weak, run down and failing in health day by day, but you must work as long as you can stand. What you need is Electric Bitters to give tone, strength and vigor to your system, to prevent breakdown and build you up. Don't be weak, sickly or ailing when Electric Bitters will benefit you from the first dose. Thousands bless them for their glorious health and strength. Try them. Every bottle is guaranteed to satisfy. Only 50c. at J. M. Minck's, Druggist, Mount Union, Pa. Advertisement.

JACK'S SPRING AS IT LOOKS TO-DAY

Last Saturday, in company with some friends, the Editor took a tramp to Jack's Spring. The hike up the mountain and down the ravine was good exercise, the scenery was picturesque and the day—a real spring one. All the participants enjoyed the hike.

"WHAT SHALL I RENDER UNTO THE LORD?"

(Psa. 116:12-14.)

By Gertrude W. Seibert.

What shall I render, Lord, to Thee,
For all Thy benefits toward me?
For life and every earthly good,
For raiment, shelter, daily food;
For light and truth, for peace and love,
For heavenly wisdom from above?—
How great Thy bounties unto me!
What have I that is not from Thee?

For all these benefits toward me,
What shall I render, Lord, to Thee?
The Cup Thy hand of love hath poured,
I'll humbly take, most gracious Lord,
And call upon Thy holy name
To help me Thy great Plan proclaim;
I'll spend my days in ceaseless praise,
And tell abroad Thy wondrous ways!

"Salvation's Cup,"—of suffering, too,—
Of suffering with God's chosen few,
Dear Lord, I'll drink of this, Thy Cup,
And smiling through my tears, look up,—
A mingled Cup of grief and joy,
Of blessedness without alloy,
Of love and fellowship divine,
A foretaste of the Kingdom-wine.

That all, dear Lord, may know and see
Thy countless benefits toward me,
Before Thy congregation, now,
I'll pay my consecration Vow;
And in Thy strength, supplied each day,
I'll strive to walk the narrow way
That leads to rest and God and Thee,
And blissful immortality!

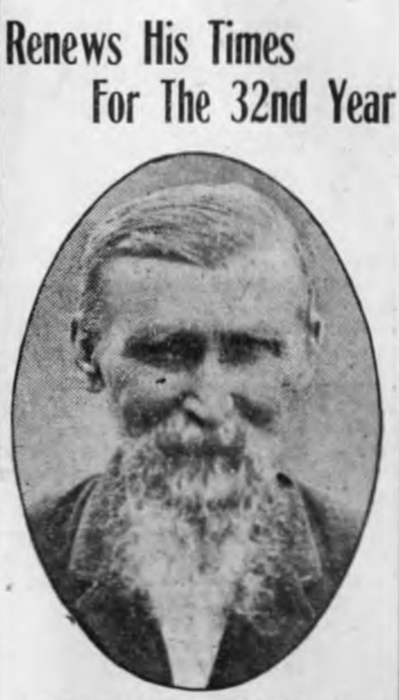
Chas. E. Hart is Found Dead in Bed

The community was startled on Tuesday morning of this week to learn that Chas. E. Hart, one of our older and best citizens, was found dead in bed. Mr. Hart had been suffering a great deal of late from rheumatism, and it is thought that such, attacking the heart, was the cause of his death. Mrs. Hart had talked to him about 7 o'clock the morning he died and he seemed to be feeling pretty good. When she left the room, he said he would sleep for a little while longer. The next time Mrs. Hart entered the room she found her husband dead.

Chas. E. Hart was born in McVeytown, Pa., Aug. 27, 1862. He spent his early life there, being a son of Wm. Hart. He learned the printing trade and at one time he worked in the Journal office of that town. His education was received in the public schools of McVeytown where he graduated. Mr. Hart came to Mount Union in 1881, and from that time until his death Mount Union was his home. He learned telegraphy, and in 1882, entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad as an operator. He was an expert operator, and was with the Railroad Company all these years, except four years as Postmaster of Mt. Union, from 1893 to 1897, or during Cleveland's second term. Mr. Hart was a member of the Odd Fellows, also of the Presbyterian church. He was married to Miss Jennie A. Cowden, and is survived by his wife, and three children: Edna, Mrs. Stewart Moore, of Woodlawn; Alma, Mrs. Wm. Keane, of Harrisburg; Eugene, of Mount Union; one child is deceased. He is also survived by an aged mother. Mr. Hart was a staunch Democrat in politics. He was a good citizen. He had many warm friends. In the four years he was Postmaster, he conducted the office with much credit. The TIMES expresses sympathy to the bereaved family in their sad and sudden affliction.

The funeral will be held on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the home. Interment in the Odd Fellows' cemetery.

Renews His Times For The 32nd Year



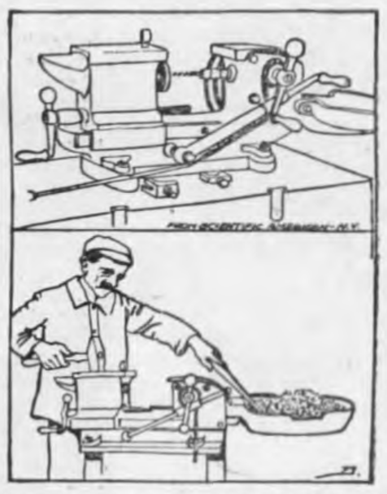
Augustus Harvey of Shirleysburg, called on Friday last and paid up his subscription for another year. Mr. Harvey said that it is the 32nd year he has taken and read the TIMES, and he is satisfied that it was never better printed or edited than it is to-day. At that time he was on his way to Irvona, Clearfield county, to spend Easter with his son, O. M. Harvey, who for a number of years has been an operator there for the P. R. R.

DEVICE WITH MANY USES.

Apparatus That Combines a Variety of Working Tools.

A French inventor named Sellier has devised an apparatus which he calls the Universal, because it constitutes a whole workshop in itself. Although it occupies little space and weighs only 132 pounds, it comprises a forge, an anvil, a boring machine, a vise, a work bench, a grindstone and a punch.

The steel anvil, which can be moved along the cast iron base of the machine by turning a screw, forms one jaw of the vise. The other jaw is a fixed steel block attached to one end of the base and provided with a tool head and screw clamp for the attachment of drills and other tools. This end of the machine also carries a dust proof tool box and a grindstone. At the other end is the forge, which is simply an iron pan connected with a blower, placed under the grindstone. The forge can be removed when it is not needed. Power is furnished by a treadle or otherwise. The transmission is devised to give either a low speed for boring, etc., or a high speed for grinding.



MACHINE SET UP FOR BORING AND AS ANVIL AND FORGE.

Latest Goiter Theory.

Another medical problem possibly has been solved. The swelling of the thyroid gland, which lies in the front of the neck, commonly known as goiter, is known to originate in drinking water, and it also is known that certain wells and certain streams bring on the disease. For this there has never been a satisfactory solution. The latest theory emanating from Dr. M. Wilms of the University of Basel is interesting. He noted that these goiter districts always were characterized by the same geological conditions. The water invariably comes from soil that has been sea bottom at some remote period in the world's history, never from granite or chalk deposits or from ancient lakes. Wilms' theory is that some subtle poison is generated by the decay of fossilated plants and animals of a remote geologic age. This is borne out by the properties of the water, which is dangerous up to 75 degrees C. and altogether harmless when heated above 80 degrees C., which is a common attribute of organic poisons.

Solids In Human Breath.

It has hitherto been assumed by physiologists and hygienists that the exhalations from the lungs were composed entirely of oxygen, nitrogen, carbon dioxide, water vapor and other gases and vapors without any admixture of solid matter. According to a recent note in Cosmos, Dr. Courtada has examined with the ultramicroscope the moisture of the breath, condensed without contamination with atmospheric air and has found therein a multitude of solid particles of various shapes and sizes, some motionless, others moving and presenting the appearance of cocci (globular bacteria) and bacilli (rod like bacteria). Epithelial cells were also found. A few drops of this moisture evaporated to dryness on a glass plate left a dusty deposit nearly as dense as the deposit left by an equal quantity of potable water. No bacterial culture could be obtained, however, although four different culture mediums were tried.

Artificial Sponge.

Artificial sponge, as made by a German process, is chiefly a result of the action of zinc chloride on pure cellulose. The pasty viscous mass produced by this action is mixed with coarsely ground rock salt, and then, in a press mold armed with pins, it is pierced with a multitude of little canals, imitating the pores of a natural sponge. After the necessary porosity is obtained the material is given a prolonged washing in dilute alcohol to remove the excess of salts. The artificial sponge has the same action as the natural in absorbing and retaining water.

Stairway of Carborundum.

A flight of stairs has been erected in Paris over which 14,000,000 persons have shuffled without so much as scratching the surface. These steps are almost as imperishable as if they had been built of huge diamonds, for in the concrete of which they are constructed a generous proportion of carborundum has been introduced, and since carborundum is almost as hard as the diamond it has given the concrete a wearing quality which no marble or granite could possibly approach.

Real Sanitary Milk Can.

The sanitary inspector of Saloniki, Turkey, has introduced a milk can which is fitted with valves allowing liquid to be poured out, but not in, after the can has been officially inspected and sealed. This is to prevent adulteration and fraud.

S. H. Price and daughter, Marie, of Mt. Union visited his parents, W. A. Price and wife, and other friends of town and returned home on Wednesday of last week.

"Whip-po-Will." We are glad to know the time of year has come, and that he has ventured to make his return and to pour forth his evening song which hasn't much melody or variation in it, but we suppose it is the best he can do. All on account of having such a big mouth.

Nevin Montgomery of Shade Gap left home Monday of last week to attend college at Grove City, Pa. We will all miss Mr. Montgomery as he is a good social and well respected young man. We wish him the greatest success.

Pride Sole of Pittsburgh, who recently was married to Miss Cora Miller of Dublin township, has purchased the William Miller farm situated in said township and expects to begin farming this spring. We welcome Mr. and Mrs. Sole to our midst and hope they will have success in their new undertaking

The M. E. preachers are like wild geese, they are on the move. The Rev. Samuel J. Pittinger, former minister here some years ago, and his family passed through here last week on their way o his new charge. They were the guests of Brother E. E. Kell, and family over night, then resumed their journey to Concord to their new home. We hope their lines have fallen in pleasant places and their labors may be owned and blessed by God.

Rev. G. W. McIlnay and family of Dudley are moving from there to New Bloomfield, Perry county, Pa. Mrs. McIlnay came to Shade Gap by railroad and her sister, Miss Cora Doran, took her to Burnt Cabins to her parental home. We suppose that brother George drove over the mountains via Robertsdale and New Grenada and met his family at Burnt Cabins. We would have liked to have met the Rev. and had a good hearty handshake and congratulated him. We imagine as he drove through Robertsdale the meditations of his heart were something in this fashion: "Thank God and Hon. Judge Woods, the liquor license was not granted." May God bless him and family in their new home and charge.

A. M. Gamble of town, who has been working at the brick works for quite a while, returned home Friday evening and spent Saturday and Sunday here and returned to Mt. Union to resume his work again Monday morning.

Wonderful! Wonderful! The deaths, suffering, sorrow, bereavements of loved ones, anxious friends awaiting news that their absent loved ones are still living, and the awful destruction of home and property. Why does this calamity come on us as nation? Do we think, is it to be compared to the one recorded in the 18th and 19th chapters of Genesis? Can you read of the account of the storm and deaths and suffering and sorrow without shedding a tear of sympathy?

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Sollers and daughter of Saltillo were guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Cree Friday night of last week, Mr. Sollers being a brother of Mrs. Cree. They started to go to Mrs. Sollers' parental home, her parents being Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Zimmerman, who live at Lemaster station, Franklin county.

Mrs. W. C. Price and son, Ira, went to Mt. Union Saturday morning. They intend to visit their many friends over Sunday and part of this week.

Mr. Wm. Piper of Water Street, an old friend and acquaintance, called on Saturday evening to see us. We were glad to meet him once more and talk over the happenings of the past and present. We had quite an enjoyable time.

Reception in M. E. church on Saturday evening at 8 p. m. Let all turn out and meet Rev. C. F. Himes. Also preaching Sabbath evening at 7:30 p. m. All welcome.

Miss Jessie Price of Mt. Union came to town Saturday evening and is the guest of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Myers, for an indefinite time.

Rev. J. W. Chambers, our former pastor, accompanied by his wife stopped in town with W. A. Price's family, also attended Epworth League and gave a very interesting address Sunday evening. They are on their way to Pine Grove Mills, where Rev. was appointed pastor for this conference year. We are sorry to see Mr. and Mrs. Chambers leave us, but hope they will like their new home and have a successful year.

A. A. Minnick of Ashville, N. C., is visiting William McGowan of town and expects to visit other friends and acquaintances while here. We are very glad to see Mr. Minnick back again and hope he will enjoy his visit while here.

SHIRLEYSBURG ITEMS

Vacation days are near. Just a few days more until school closes.

GETHSEMANE.

By Gertrude W. Seibert.

Gethsemane! The Garden's lonely shade the world's Redeemer sought that night. He went alone to pray
For grace and strength to drink the last drop in His Cup.
Great souls crave solitude in sorrow's hour. Not e'en
His well-beloved three might share the sacredness
Of that deep woe,—He bade them tarry, while He went
A little farther on, and fell upon His face.

* * * * *

Gethsemane! A solitary place, apart,
No mortal feet may press in sympathy that dark,
Encrimsoned earth. No human hand the fevered brow
May cool, no other heart can share its agony,
No voice but God's may break the solemn silence there,—
A place where every soul must drink alone the Cup
The Father's hand hath poured, and given to His child.

Gethsemane! A desert place, alone, apart?
Ah, no! The anguished heart doth never cry in vain
To Him who marks the smallest sparrow when it falls,
For He shall send His Angel with the message, "Fear
Thou not, for I am with thee! I will ne'er forsake,
Nor let thee fail! My right hand shall uphold, My love,
My power shall keep thee, even to the bitter end!"

February 8, 1913.

SPECIAL COURT

On Tuesday, March 25th, Judge Woods came to town to hold a session of court relative to habeas corpus proceedings in the case of the Commonwealth against Mrs. Caruso, the Italian woman who a short time ago is charged with shooting and fatally wounding an Italian known as "Big Mike," at her residence in Mapleton. Mrs. Caruso, with her ten months old babe, has been confined in the Huntingdon jail since the shooting above referred to.

C. C. Brewster, Esq., representing the Commonwealth called the following witnesses: Dr. Fred Simpson, of Mapleton was first called and testified that he had been summoned soon after the shooting to attend "Mike"; that he found him suffering from three gun-shot wounds, one in the neck, two in the body; that after caring for the wounded man, he directed that he be sent to the J. C. Blair Memorial hospital, which was done, he accompanying the victim of the shooting to Huntingdon. Dr. Chisholm and Dr. Schum were next called and testified as to the condition of the man upon his arrival at the hospital and as to what they found upon a post mortem.

It was the opinion of these two physicians that the bullet wound of the liver had caused death.

H. B. Rohrer, constable at Mapleton, was called and testified that he had been notified of the shooting and had gone to the scene at once, and found the wounded man at the Caruso house. He asked for the gun but it was at first refused. Upon a second request the gun was handed to him. Two empty shells were found on the floor and later a third shell was found by Caruso when he emptied the ash pan. After Mike had been taken away, the constable remained and guarded the Caruso house until morning when Mrs. Caruso was brought to Huntingdon, before Squire Black and later taken to jail.

Two Italians, who are boarders at the Caruso house, testified that they were present at the house at the time of the shooting. Mike came to the house to pay a board bill, as he had also been a boarder at the Caruso house, early in the evening. He returned late in the evening again to make complaint that another boarder, a friend of his, had been overcharged on a board bill. This time Mike was refused admission, and to'd by Caruso that they would talk this over the next day. He refused to leave and intimated that he would get even with Caruso before morning. Later when the door was opened, one of the boarders began to expostulate with Mike, and while this argument was going on, Mrs. Caruso coming close to the door, shot Mike three times.

After hearing the testimony, the court decided to release Mrs. Caruso on $2,500 bail. As this amount of bail could not be secured, Mrs. Caruso was remanded to jail to await trial at the May term of court.

The following routine matters were disposed of:

Wm. H. Trude, guardian of Geo. W. Kyper, discharged.

Return of private sale by M. W. Isenberg, assignee of Jackson L. Grove, of tract of land in Shirley township.

Jas. S. Woods, Esq., appointed master to take testimony and suggest decree in Elizabeth Stuck vs. Charles L. Stuck, subpoena in divorce.

Report of Jas. S. Woods, Esq., auditor appointed to make distribution of the balance in the hands of J. E. Smucker, trustee of Ella D. Carter, under will of Mary B. Patton, deceased, confirmed ni si.

J. S. Davison and Samuel Ayers appointed appraisers to appraise and set aside to Mrs. Elnora Hunter, widow of William P. Hunter, deceased, property to value of $300.

Subpoena in divorce awarded in Albert Banks vs. Margaret Banks, returnable to first Monday in May, 1913.

FINDING A PAWN TICKET.

Sometimes It May Be Just Walking Into a Trap.

"While walking through one of the prominent streets the other day," said an innocent looking individual, "I espied an important looking piece of paper on the sidewalk and, picking it up, found it to be a pawn ticket for a diamond scarfpin which some careless person had apparently dropped.

"According to the ticket, the pin had been pledged several weeks before for $15. 'How am I to find the owner?' thought I. 'Shall I take it to the pawnbroker? Perhaps if I do the owner will never see it anyway. The pin must surely be a good one and doubtless worth three times the amount for which it was pledged. Why not appropriate it to my own use?'

"The name on the ticket was Brown, and my conscience was relieved when I found several hundred of that name in the directory. I soon made up my mind and started for the broker's office. I asked to see the pin before redeeming it, stating that I had bought the ticket, and upon the payment of 25 cents was allowed to examine it.

"It looked all right to me, although I am not a qualified judge of diamonds, so I paid the principal of $15 and the interest of $1.80 and the pin became mine.

"The next day I showed it to an expert, who declared it to be worth far less than the amount I had paid for it.

"'It is a trick of some people,' he said, 'to defraud unwary persons like yourself. The scheme consists of issuing tickets for spurious pieces of jewelry for amounts many times in excess of their value and dropping them on the sidewalk in different parts of town where unsuspecting persons might find them and redeem them, as you did, thus yielding a handsome profit to the perpetrators.'"—Philadelphia Record.

PORK DISHES.

Pork is not an aristocratic meat, although it is the basis of an enormous industry. Ham and bacon are not without honor, but there are few cook books that mention the cooking of fresh pork, and rarely the preparation of salt pork, which is mainly used with baked beans. Cold roast pork is as appetizing as any meat, and makes a most acceptable salad combined with celery, as one does in preparing chicken salad.

It is only those who are privileged to raise and fatten their own pork who fully enjoy it. Country life and country occupations furnish the right conditions for eating pork. Since the rise in the price of pork it has been regarded with greater esteem.

The most important thing to be remembered in the cooking of pork is that it should be thoroughly done, never served rare.

Chopped salt pork, a cupful, added to a homely fruit cake using dried apple and molasses, makes a cake fit for any epicure.

Spare ribs with sour kraut is another homely but well-liked dish of our grandmother's.

Bacon wrapped around an oyster and skewered with a toothpick, then boiled or baked in a hot oven is another ladylike dainty.

A stuffed sparerib may be new to some. Try, if possible, to buy one that has a little meat left on the bones; fill with a stuffing well seasoned with onion or sage and put on top another sparerib. Place in a pan with a half cup of boiling water and roast an hour, basting often. The potatoes may be peeled and baked around the sparerib.

Pork in Paper Bag.—Cut up cold roast meat in slices, add a finely-chopped onion, a little tomato catsup and a bay leaf, salt and pepper. Put into a buttered bag and bake on the rack in a hot oven for ten minutes.

Serve in the bag so that the dish may be piping hot.

Pork chops to be juicy and at the same time well cooked, should be put to cook in a very little water, letting it all boil away, then season and brown as usual.

DINNER IN A PAPER BAG.

For the roast, choose a rolled one, season well and rub thickly with salt, slip into a bag which is large enough for the roast; grease the bag with suet, as butter burns more quickly. A three-pound roast will take about forty-five minutes to roast. Slide the roast out on a heated platter, break the bag gently to allow the gravy to escape. Reheat the gravy and brown with flour. The one drawback in paper bag cookery is that the gravy is never the rich brown of ordinary roasts. The flour to be added may be browned to overcome this defect, or "kitchen bouquet" may be added for coloring.

A fowl roasted in a bag with a bunch of celery or an onion for stuffing is not a dish to be lightly esteemed.

Grease a bag and partly fill with small, even-sized onions, add a little water and cook until tender, the time depending upon the size of the onions. Remove the bag, puncture the bottom to let the liquor escape, season with butter and cream or with a white sauce, as one likes.

Potato straws are very attractive and quickly cooked. Peel the potatoes and slice on a vegetable cutter into straws, parboil for five minutes, drain, add butter, pepper and salt and put into a greased bag and bake for fifteen or twenty minutes. Serve around the roast as a garnish. Sweet potatoes are nice prepared in this way and sugar and butter added to them when put into the bag.

Pies and baked puddings are much improved in texture if baked in bags.

Cake to be used for puddings, that is a little stale, may be freshened nicely by putting for a few minutes into a bag and laying on the oven rack.

For a small company chops are very nice cooked in the individual size and served piping hot in the bag to each guest. When our hotels and restaurants take up paper bag cookery in earnest we will not be served with cold chops or steaks.

TRICKED PAULINE.

Napoleon's Pert and Pretty Sister's Pride Was Humbled.

TWICE SHE MET HER MATCH.

The Empress Josephine Once Gave Her, So to Speak, a Dressing Down, and the Fashionable Mme. De Coutades Figuratively Boxed Her Ears.

Napoleon was anxious to have General Marmot marry his sister Pauline, but the wily old soldier refused to make the flirt his bride. Then Napoleon turned to General Leclerc, who really loved Pauline, and they were wedded. Leclerc was then sent as head of the French expedition to Haiti, Pauline going along under protest. Leclerc died of fever in Haiti, and Pauline returned to France with his body.

After a time Pauline, whom Lyndon Orr in Munsey's describes as a "feather headed, languishing, beautiful, distracting morsel of frivolity," resumed her heartbreaking tactics.

"Presently it became noised about," writes Mr. Orr, "that Prince Camillo Borghese was flirting desperately with Pauline. The prince was an excellent specimen of the fashionable Italian. He was immensely rich. His palace at Rome was filled with artistic treasure. He was the owner, moreover, of the famous Borghese jewels, the finest collection of diamonds in the world.

"Napoleon rather sternly insisted upon her marrying Borghese. Fortunately the prince was very willing to be connected with Napoleon, while Pauline was delighted at the idea of having diamonds that would eclipse all the gems which Josephine possessed, for, like all the Bonapartes, she detested her brother's wife. So she would be married and show her diamonds to Josephine. It was a bit of feminine malice she could not resist.

"The marriage took place very quietly at Joseph Bonaparte's house because of the absence of Napoleon, but the newly made princess was invited to visit Josephine at the palace of St. Cloud. Here was to be the triumph of her life. She spent many days in planning a toilet that should be absolutely crushing to Josephine. Whatever she wore must be a background for the famous diamonds. Finally she decided on green velvet.

"When the day came Pauline stood before a mirror and gazed at herself, with diamonds glistening in her hair, shimmering around her neck and fastened so thickly on her green velvet gown as to remind one of a moving jewel casket. She actually shed tears of joy. Then she entered her carriage and drove out to St. Cloud.

"But Josephine, though no longer young, was a woman of great subtlety as well as charm. Stories had been told to her of the green velvet, and therefore she had had her drawing room redecorated in the most uncompromising blue. It killed the green velvet completely. As for the diamonds, she met that maneuver by wearing not a single gem of any kind. Her dress was an Indian muslin with a broad hem of gold.

"Her exquisite simplicity, coupled with her dignity of bearing, made the Princess Pauline, with her shower of diamonds and her green velvet displayed against the blue, seem absolutely vulgar. Josephine was most generous in her admiration of the Borghese gems, and she kissed Pauline on departing. The victory was hers.

"There is another story of a defeat which Pauline met from another lady, one Mme. de Coutades. This was at a magnificent ball given to the most fashionable world of Paris. Pauline decided upon going and intended, in her own phrase, to blot out every woman there. She kept the secret of her toilet, and she entered the ballroom at the psychological moment, when all the guests had assembled.

"She appeared, and at sight of her the music stopped, silence fell upon the assemblage, and a sort of quiver went through every one. Her costume was of the finest muslin bordered with golden palm leaves. Four bands spotted like a leopard's skin, were wound about her head, while these in turn were supported by little clusters of golden grapes. She had copied the headdress of a Bacchante in the Louvre. All over her person were cameos, and just beneath her breasts she wore a golden band held in place by an engraved gem. Her beautiful wrists, arms and hands were bare. She had, in fact, blotted out her rivals.

"Nevertheless Mme. de Coutades took her revenge. She went up to Pauline, who was lying on a divan to set off her loveliness, and began gazing at the princess through a double eyeglass. Pauline felt flattered for a moment and then became uneasy. The lady who was looking at her said to a companion in a tone of regret:

"'What a pity! She really would be lovely if it weren't for that!'

"'For what?' returned her escort.

"'Why, are you blind? It's so remarkable that you surely must see it.'

"Pauline was beginning to lose her self composure. She flushed and looked wildly about, wondering what she meant. Then she heard Mme. de Coutades say:

"'Why, her ears! If I had such ears as those I would cut them off!'

"Pauline gave one great gasp and fainted dead away. As a matter of fact, her ears were not so bad. They were simply very flat and colorless, forming a contrast with the rosy tints of her face. But from that moment no one could see anything but these ears, and thereafter the princess wore her hair low enough to cover them."

Funeral of R. S. Seibert Largest in Town's History

The funeral of Robert S. Seibert, president of the East Broad Top railroad was held here last Thursday afternoon from the Presbyterian church. The funeral party was brought here in a private car from Philadelphia attached to train No. 15, reaching this place at 1:35 o'clock. Immediately they were conveyed to the church, where even by that time, an immense crowd of people had assembled to pay their last respects to Mr. Seibert. The employes, more than one hundred, were present in a body, marching in charge of Mr. Fisher Moore. When friends and all had arrived, the seating capacity of the Presbyterian church was taxed to its utmost, and we believe that more than a thousand people were present at the obsequies.

The services was in charge of Rev. Chester W. Todd, pastor of the Presbyterian church. There were several selections rendered by Mrs. Detwiler and Miss Noble, of Brooklyn. The scripture was read by Rev. Todd. Prayer was offered by Rev. George S. Womer, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church of Mount Union. The address was given by Rev. C. J. Woodworth of New York City. His address was very good, and contained some interesting points regarding Mr. Seibert's life. The choir sang a selection, and at the close while friends viewed the remains and took leave as well as when they entered, the organ pealed forth appropriately and softly. The flowers were magnificent, and we were pleased to notice that the piece which came from the Mount Union friends of the deceased was one of the most conspicuous of the floral tributes.

The interment was made in the family plot in the Odd Fellows' cemetery. Mr. W. P. Dunmire, one of the local undertakers, directed the funeral, and did great credit to himself and all interested. The large concourse of people who were present was indicative of the great esteem and wonderful popularity of the deceased. It was one of the largest, perhaps the largest funeral ever held in Mount Union.

Relatives Present

Relatives of Mr. Seibert's present were: Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Sampson, of Montrose, Colorado; Mr. and Mrs. Banks Wolfgang, of Blair's Mills, Pa.; Mrs. Martha Wharton and daughter, Miss May, from Altoona.

Relatives of Mrs. Seibert's present were: W. Irwin Woodcock, Esq., and wife, of Hollidaysburg; W. Lee Woodcock, Esq., and wife, of Altoona; Dr. Lee B. Woodcock, Scranton, Pa.; Rev. Jay A. Woodcock, Birmingham, Pa.; C. E. Etnier, York, Pa.; L. Scott Etnier, Orbisonia, Pa.; Mrs. John S. Etnier, Mill Creek, Pa.; Mrs. Fanny Etnier, Huntingdon, Pa.

Among others present were: Mr. and Mrs. Somerville, Robertsdale, Pa.; Mr. Edward Roberts, Philadelphia, Pa.; Mr. Chas. H. Jones, New York City. Many representatives of the International Bible Students Association of Brooklyn, N. Y., of which Mrs. Seibert is an active member, from Altoona, Lewistown, Saxton, Saltillo, Alexandria, McVeytown and Brooklyn. John Dorris, Esq., and wife, of Huntingdon; S. J. Livingston, treasurer E. B. T. R. R., Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. James Marstellar, Orbisonia; C. J. Woodworth, V. D. M., of New York; Mrs. Elizabeth Detwiler and Miss Virginia Noble, of Brooklyn; Mr. C. R. Preston, Supt. Middle division P. R. R., and Mr. Geo. W. Creighton, general Supt. P. R. R., of Altoona; J. W. Kauffman, train dispatcher, of Huntingdon.

Honorary Pall Bearers

A Biographical Sketch

Robert S. Seibert, president of the East Broad Top railroad, was the first ticket agent for that company at Mount Union, in 1874. He was born May 9, 1856, in Tuscarora Valley, about two miles from Blair's Mills. His early life was spent at home on the farm, until April 1, 1864, when the family moved to Mount Union. Mr. Seibert attended the public schools of Tuscarora Valley and of Mount Union until 1867, at which time he attended a private school, conducted by Prof. Schultz, in the rear of the old Presbyterian church of this place, for about 5 years. From 1871 until Jan. 1874, he was employed as clerk in the stores of G. W. McLaughlin, G. W. Lukens, T. A. Appleby, F. D. Stevens and Alfred Etnier. In 1874 he entered the employ of the P. R. R., having learned telegraphy with D. S. Drake of Huntingdon. He worked at various stations on the Middle division, from January until October, 1874, at which time he entered the service of the E. B. T. Co., as ticket agent and operator at Mount Union. In 1878 he was made ticket agent and train dispatcher at Orbisonia, and in 1881 he went to Chicago, where he was made train dispatcher of the Chicago and Eastern R. R. He remained in that position for three years, during which time he pursued a course of study, evenings, at the Douglass University, so as to equip himself better for railroad work. In 1884, Mr. Seibert entered the employ of the New York Central at Buffalo, being train master. During that time, because of exposure to severe weather, he lost his health and was compelled to go to Colorado to recuperate. It was in the Silver State that he entered the Denver & Rio Grande, where he filled various positions, until appointed superintendent of the terminals at Pueblo. Mr. Seibert left Pueblo in 1892 when he became general manager of the Nevada Southern R. R., having his office in Los Angeles, Cal. He resided in California 11 years, during which time he was engaged in railroad construction and operation of mines, as well as the operation of railroads. Mr. Seibert sold his railroad and mining interests in 1903, when he took charge of the East Broad Top Railroad and Coal Co., residing at Rockhill. His successful career with the E. B. T. is familiar to every person in this section. He married Miss Gertrude Woodcock of Altoona, September 18, 1890, who survives him. He is also survived by one sister, Lucy, (Mrs. Wm. Sampson) of Montrose, Colo., and two brothers McCune and Alex., in the west. Mr. Seibert's parents were natives of Tuscarora Valley. His mother at one time conducted the Seibert House, now the Beers Hotel, (improved), in Mount Union. They were splendid people.

A Word From Mrs. Seibert

Dear Editors:—I would like to tell you just a little about Mr. Seibert's last illness. He died as he lived. Everything in the sickroom was as orderly and methodical as in his railroad offices. The nurses said to me that "usually the doctors and nurses were in charge, but in this case the patient was in charge." He refused to take any medicine until the exact minute arrived, he watched his symptoms so closely that he would not take any nourishment, if he felt his stomach was not just in the best condition, saying, "I must look out for my stomach." He amazed everyone about him by his marvelous vitality, (due to his wonderfully clean and abstemious life, the doctors said), by his readiness to undergo any new treatment suggested by his physicians, bravely husbanding all his strength for the great battle for life.

He had never failed in any undertaking in his whole life, and it seemed that this unparalleled will power and determination to conquer every obstacle was his "ruling passion strong in death" as in life, but he had "crossed swords" with the Great Enemy, even Satan, "who hath the power of death," by God's permission (Hebrews 2:14), and he lost!

I realize that it was an honor to have known such a noble character, and a greater one to have been his life-companion, and it was my precious privilege to encourage him with the promises of God's Word.

I held both his hands while they grew colder and colder as the waters of death crept higher and higher until he gently, without any pain, drew his last breath, like a tired child falling asleep. God was very good to him and to me, as Mr. S. had no acute pain during all his five month s illness.

I cannot refrain from quoting to you the words of my dear pastor, who wrote me, "I know that you appreciated your husband very highly, as evidenced by your patient and continued devotion, not only in his illness, but at all times. I am glad that you have had the privilege of being with him to the last. I am confident that you can look forward to the future with good assurance that he was a noble man, and that God loves such characters, even as Jesus declared of the young Hebrew who said that he had kept the law to the best of his ability from his youth up. Of him we read, 'Jesus beholding him, loved him.' We may be sure that the Lord has a sympathetic love for all members of the race who have a desire for righteousness. We are so glad that the time is hastening when all such will be brought to fullest opportunity for knowing the great Redeemer and experiencing the fullness of His restitution power."

I know you will rejoice that His promised grace has been more than "sufficient" for my times of greatest need, and that hourly I am able to sing in sweet submission, "All That Thou Sendest Me, In Mercy Given."

Please accept my thanks for all you have done with respect to carrying out my suggestions. I was entirely alone, and had to make all the arrangements for services, but I tried to do everything as Mr. Seibert would like to have had it done. Permit me to express through you my deep appreciation of the loving sympathy so tenderly and beautifully manifested by all my dear husband's good friends in Mount Union in their exquisite floral offering for his final resting place, and to the choir for their part in the services.

Very sincerely and gratefully yours,
Gertrude W. Seibert.
Orbisonia, Pa., May 31, 1913.

A Closing Tribute

Mr. Seibert was the product of good, sound stock, such as any man has a right to be proud of who honors his father and mother.

He was one who has passed through the fiery furnace of a business experience and came out without a scorch on his garments.

He was strong and unconquerable because he had mental energy and that is what gives action and push to the human machine.

He was thrifty, progressive and successful, for his mental qualities were well balanced and always in good working order.

He was not discouraged when it rained nor overjoyed when the sun shone. He knew both were needed to raise a crop, and he had employed both to a good purpose.

He had system and business methods instead of grasping for every windy opportunity that some visionary trapper was blowing in his ear.

He was a direct, practical, clear-sighted, sound man of affairs, and could not be driven from his standard of business honesty, upon which he had built reputation and character that remained firm as a rock to the end.

He was a just man because he examined all sides of a question, and never allowed prejudice nor any of his likes or dislikes to govern his judgement.

He was a fair man in all of his dealings and neither wronged any with whom he had business nor himself by anything like deception.

He believed in the power of labor. "Service is always a producer. Work is both healthful and valuable. The efforts put forth bring results. All of these are the agencies of mental energy."

He was a saver of time and never wasted it in idle talk or useless dreams of reaching an object without going for it.

He never offended in speech or manner, was courteous towards all, knew how to govern business affairs, how to make trade and friends, never lost one that was worthy, and therefore he was esteemed, respected and successful.

He had a quick mental understanding of men with whom he came in contact, and could dispose of business matters exactly and also according to their importance and without seeming indifference.

He was never overwhelmed with talk nor with great propositions, but weighed them carefully and at once, and had the convenient faculty of saying "yes" or "no."

He was therefore prominent in his community; was looked up to as an authority; was a leader in business affairs; was a safe adviser when asked for advice; never threw advice to his neighbors nor sought it from them; was socially kind and popular; had a strong public spirit and cheerfully responded when need required aid or a service. Then, too, he was faithfully domestic in his habits and desires—warmly attached to his family and kindred, and for all of these happy and elevating qualities he was regarded as a good citizen and loyal to all that citizenship implies. In the language of the Twice-a-Week Republican, "He was a good boy."

What Our Scribes Have to Say

ORBISONIA ITEMS

On last Monday G. W. Hicks, recording secretary of Washington Camp No. 374, P. O. S. of A., received a check payable to the treasurer, E. O. Heck, for $125, from the Funeral Benefit Association of the Patriotic Order Sons of America, which amount has been paid to the widow of George L. Boyles. All members in good standing in the local camp of the P. O. S. of A. are members of the Funeral Benefit Association and in case of death benefits are paid according to age at time of joining. Those between the age of 16 and 55 years receive $250. Those between 55 and 60, $125; 60 and 65, $100; 65 and 70, $50. Mr. Boyles belonged to the second class. To be entitled to the full amount of death benefits members must belong to the Association for one year, for less than one year benefits are paid on a graduated scale.

Memorial Day passed off very quietly in Orbisonia. The G. A. R. Post and Sunday school scholars met at the hall at 1 o'clock and marched to the cemetery where they decorated the graves of their dead comrades. A number of people from here, also the drum corps, were at Mt. Union on Memorial Day.

Dont' forget the address to be given in the Orbisonia Presbyterian church next Sunday evening by O. W. Colgate of near Shirleysburg on the subject of "Our Birthright."

Mr. Calvin Pheasant of Pogue has been on the sick list for some time and during his illness has been unable to see. We hope Mr. Pheasant's sight may be restored to him as his health improves.

Guy N. Colgate, umpire for the Virginia state baseball league, sent his father, Squire Colgate, a relic of the war, which was plowed up on the battlefield near Petersburg, Va., where the great mine explosion took place on the 30th of July, 1864. Guy was looking over the location and a colored man was plowing over the battlefield and turned up a U. S. belt buckle and minnie ball, which Guy sent home. Guy has one of the most complete lot of relics. Some of them can be seen at the office of his father, R. D. Colgate, in this place.

Mrs. H. H. Swan and two children, of New Bridge, New York, are visiting her father, Oscar Booher, and aunt, Mrs. Seward Ott, in Orbisonia this week.

W. A. Vaughn of Aughwick is now in the hospital at Huntingdon, where he had his leg amputated. Mr. Vaughn is up in years and has been a soldier. He went to Gettysburg recently to see the old battlefield and a sore toe was the result of the trip. Gangrene set in and the second operation has been performed to save his life. His condition is serious with a chance for recovery.

The remains of Mrs. Lydia McGarvey, a former resident of Orbisonia, were brought here from Kane, McKean county, for interment on Friday morning. Short services were held in the cemetery by Rev. Groh after which the remains were viewed by the friends of the deceased. She was then tenderly laid to rest beside the loved ones gone before to await the blessed resurrection.

Elmer Ewing of Mt. Union was an Orbisonia visitor on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Parter Briggs and little daughter of Mt. Union were guests of her father, D. C. Kurtz, and wife, in this place over Sunday.

Mr. Stephen Fogle, wife and two sons, and Mr. Lazarus Yetter of near Shirleysburg spent Memorial Day in Orbisonia the guests of W. A. McCleary and family.

Walter Clark and wife of Shirleysburg spent Sunday in Orbisonia the guests of their son, James Clark, and family.

Miss Helen Ott, of this place, was a Mt. Union visitor last Thursday.

Quite a number of people from this place attended the funeral of the late R. S. Seibert at Mt. Union last Thursday.

Dr. C. B. Bush and Mrs. Bush, who have been at Philadelphia for several weeks, were at their home in Rockhill from Thursday until Sunday, having come up to attend the funeral of the late R. S. Seibert. The Dr. is taking a special course of study on the eye, ear and throat.

Firing the Salute on Memorial Day

Memorial Day is Fittingly Observed in Mount Union

Mount Union always does justice to Memorial Day. Perhaps we make more of the occasion here than in some of the towns round about. But, if we do, we are proud of the fact, for it is a day that should have enthusiastic recognition in the hearts of all true and patriotic Americans.

In the morning a squad of the "Sons" went to Shirleysburg, where the graves were decorated at the Barton cemetery. Espy Miller's drum corps was there and furnished the music. The procession marched from the station down thru the town to the cemetery. Some of the old soldiers also joined the march. The address was made by Rev. R. J. Knox of Orbisonia, and we understand it was a very creditable one.

The other cemeteries in this section were also decorated, and flags were placed upon the graves of the dead soldiers.

In the afternoon, the exercises were held in Mount Union. The parade was one of the best ever put out here, and was headed by our band, fifty pieces and in full uniform. The surviving veterans, Sons of Veterans, Drum Corps, Patriotic Sons, Odd Fellows, Red Men, and citizens made up the splendid procession. The graves of the soldiers were fittingly decorated. Appropriate services were held. An immense crowd of people were present, for the day, though cloudy was cool, and the rain was withheld long enough to complete these exercises. The address of the day was made by Rev. Carl Mumford, pastor of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Mumford's address was excellent and was eagerly listened to by a large assemblage.

Graves of friends and relatives were also decorated with flowers, and considering the backward season, we were surprised to see so many beautiful bouquets. Each year, each passing Memorial Day brings more graves to decorate, and more dead, who must have a share in our recollection and memory.

In the evening, the Band gave a free concert in the Hall. This concert was to have been in the open, but on account of rain, the Odd Fellows gave the use of their Hall without cost. The Band did some remarkable playing and we firmly believe that Mount Union now has one of the best bands in the State. The boys were at Mill Creek in the morning. Some stranger was overheard to say on the train: "I want to hear the Mount Union Band, for it is the best band I know of."

County S. S. Executive Committee Meet

With the enthusiasm of the recent Sunday-school convention still in the air, there was an executive meeting of the Huntingdon county Sunday-school association held in the Lutheran social rooms on Thursday evening with County President Harry W. Wagner, presiding. Twelve members of the committee, were present.

The meeting was opened with a short prayer by Dr. R. H. Moore

It was decided that every school in the county should be visited by at least two of the county officers with the president of each district. Each school shall also be provided with a chart showing the standard set by the state association for "Front Line" and in this way, an effort will be made by the county association to bring more schools into the Front Line rank.

The county association are also to have bulletins printed with the latest news of the county work, to be cirulated in all the schools of the county.

Dr. C. E. Culver, of Mt. Union, was elected to hold the position of superintendent of temperance, in the county for the coming year.

The meeting closed with a prayer by Professor O. R. Myers.

Mount Union High School Building

MOUNT UNION HIGH SCHOOL CAME TO A CLOSE THIS WEEK

Prof. C. E. Hower

Our High School closed on Wednesday of this week, after a year of very successful and creditable work. This year closing marks the first under the new four year high school course. The term is nine months, and the standard of the curriculum is one of the most complete to be found in any of the public school systems around this part of the state.

During the year the corps of High School teachers has been a very efficient one. Prof. C. E. Hower, who has been identified with the principleship for the past three years, has continued his services with unabated success. We understand that the Professor will discontinue teaching at this time, and will devote his attention entirely to the study and practice of law. The assistants to the principal, Mr. R. W. Hill and Miss Eleanor McClelland have also won the esteem and favor of our people in educational circles, as well as every other way. Mr. Hill will not be with us next year, a fact that we regret, as he expects to enter Lafayette and thus prepare himself for the ministry.

The class of 1913 is the first class to be graduated under the new curriculum and twelve in number, they represent an efficient bunch of students, who have labored diligently and hard for the honors that now belong to them. The names of the class are as follows.

Alda Beatrice Copenhaver.
Anna Margaret Yocum.
Golda Lillian Covert.
Gaynelle Gifford.
Lula Jane Bratton.
Erma Amanda Rosensteel.
Zelma May Rorer.
Alma Lena Peterson.
Elizabeth Fredericka Hackman.
George Fred Lukens.
Leonard Richard Smith.
Harrison Blair Wagner.

Mention should be made here of our Local Board of Education, who have been largely responsible for the high standard of learning which our schools enjoy, and who are endeavoring to continue to build up the efficiency of our system of learning in every possible way. The names of the Board are:

Cloyd B. Ewing, President.
Rev. A. C. Lathrop, Secretary.
Dr. C. A. R. McClain.
G. B. M. Kepler.
J. H. Landis.

Cloyd B. Ewing
President of School Board

—Mrs. C. V. Hackman, Mrs. E. M. Beers, Mrs. R. M. Longacre, Mrs. J. H. Landis, and Mrs. Samuel Gregory were in Harrisburg last Thursday, in the interest of the Red Cross of Mount Union. The morning they spent at the Red Cross Headquarters of Harrisburg and in the rest of the day they were entertained at the Governor's Mansion and by Mrs. R. P. M. Davis.

—In the First Ward on Tuesday the assessor, C. B. Kingler had his hands quite full, and had not several gentlemen come to his assistance he would not have been able to get through. There were 257 that enrolled. Those who helped him on this occasion, and to whom he is grateful are: Edward Bell, J. D. Appleby, Chester Parks, Fred Lukens, and Dean Peterson.

—Geo. W. Creighton, General Superintendent of the Pennsylvania Railroad died on Saturday morning last in a private hospital in Philadelphia. He was one of the best known railroad men in the P. R. R., and resided in Altoona. The remains were interred at Saltsburg, Pa., the funeral being in charge of his pastor, Rev. Dr. Stiles of the Second Presbyterian church of Altoona, Mr. Creighton was about 62 years old.

For Sale:—4 good spans heavy draft horses, wagons and harness complete, as follows: 1 span gray horses, 1 span of black horses, 1 span bay horses, 1 span a bay and a sorrel. 4 good 2-horse wagons, 6 sets Yankee harness, 2 sets front gears. The above are all good teams, good harness and wagons and will be sold cheap to quick buyers. Call on or address J. A. Rosensteel's Livery, Mt. Union, Pa.

—The assessors of Mount Union and their helpers wish to publicly express their appreciation of the way in which the young men came to enroll on Tuesday, for their orderly and courteous manner and the gentlemanliness that they exhibited throughout the entire day. They wish also to thank the superintendents of our industries for their cooperation, and for the care they showed in having their men come out as they did.

—The Sunday School Officers of the 8th District of the County Association, Comprising the Sunday schools of Mt. Union, Shirleysburg and Shirley township are as follows: President, H. W. Fleck, VicePresident, Chas. H. Welch, Secretary, Miss Bessie Shafer, Treasurer, Geo. W. Radle, O. A. B. C. Supt., C. V. Hackman, Elementary—Miss Reba Weirich, Home Dept.—Mrs. Mary K. Gifford. Missionary—Mrs. C. W. Todd. Temperance—Mrs. C. E. Culver, Teacher Training—Prof. W. P. Harley, Rural Supt.—L. N. Crum.

—Albert Walker, recent superintendent of the Huntingdon Water Supply Co., purchased the property at the close of last week and is now its sole owner. The general office, heretofore located at Scranton, where most of the former stockholders reside, is now in Huntingdon, with Miss Nellie McNellis, of Wilkesbarre, the chief clerk, who succeeded Miss Anna Tolan. Mr. Walker, not wishing to harrass that borough in its law proceedings for the valuation of the plant, is ready to name his two appraisers at once. The chances are that in the near future the five appraisers will get to work.

—The question of wasted car space is getting very serious and the railroad authorities are urging their patrons to load cars to their fullest capacity, and thus help in these days when conditions are so serious. An illustrated bulletin, "Car Utility Bulletin No. 5," has been issued which explains the situation very carefully. Ask your freight agent for one of them. It is stated therein, that if the wasted space in the freight cars on the Pennsylvania Railroad system were utilized, the result would be equivalent to placing more than 120,000 additional cars at the service of the country.

—Lewis Robinson who resides in Allenport, was struck by an autmobile driven by William Hunt of Orbisonia on Friday evening last and as a result sustained a fractured collar bone and a concussion of the brain. He has been unconscious most of the time since the accident, just in the last day or so, has he been conscious and then only periodically. It seems that Mr. Robinson was walking along the side of the State Road when struck. A horse and buggy had caused the automobile to drift from its course a little. Mr. Robinson is pretty badly hurt and it is truly the earnest desire of his friends that he speedily be restored to health.

—In connection with the statement previously published that arrangements had been made by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to secure for all employes of the Company and its affiliated Companies, bonds of the Liberty Loan, by which employes may purchase Bonds outright or by making monthly payments according to certain plans. The Company employes at Mount Union Station made nineteen applications aggregating $2300.00 on the first day that this privilege was available to them. They believe that every man and woman who enjoys liberty must actively share in the responsibility and conflict to preserve it, and that this is one way to assist. The subscriptions made by some of the employes will mean considerable sacrifice to themselves and families but they are patriotic; love their country and are willing to prove that love by sacrifice. It is to be hoped that other employes will do as well or better and thus evidence the patriotic spirit of the leading officials of the company which employs them.

The commencement exercises of the Shippensburg Normal School will be held on June 27th. Huntingdon county students at Shippensburg Normal are: Mary C. Cutshall, Three Springs; Flo. E. Do you want free postal delivery to come on July 1st? If you do so, see that the pavements are laid. Where there are no pavements there will be no free delivery, and the time is getting short. Get your mail boxes up, and get busy at once.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Barben wish to thank the friends and relatives, the Sunday school and C. E. Societies for the kindness shown and flowers given during the recent death of their little daughter.

H. T. Entrikin, of Entriken, Huntingdon county, has announced himself as a candidate for Jury Commissioner.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

The High School pupils showed their patriotism on May 30th, when the flag raising took place. C. H. Welch gave a short speech about our flag about two o'clock, then the school boys and girls marched to the ball ground and enjoyed themselves the remainder of the afternoon.

The ball game which was played on May 30th was the first game won by the Mt. Union High School team. A number of young people from Hollidaysburg accompanied their team. The game was very close and interesting and the spirit of each school was well represented.

Professor Reinert of Shirleysburg visited school on Thursday morning.

Everybody is hard at work preparing for final examinations which will follow in a few days.

Rev. Crossman gave a talk at Chapel on Friday morning, which was very helpful to the young people.

The High School team played Aetna Explosive team on Saturday afternoon at three o'clock. The High school team was defeated by the score 6-3.

Prof. Harley has been very busy for a fow evening in aiding the Registration movement.

A new feature has been introduced into the school and that is a member of each class shall raise and lower the flag every day.

Attorney C. E. Hower will give a talk at Chapel on Friday morning.

The High School pupils are selling tickets for "Womanhood," which is to be held in Shapiro's theatre, June 9th.

The Juniors will give the Annual Banquet on June 14th, in the social room of the M. E. church.

The Athletic Association appointed new committees on Friday evening to nominate the officers for next year.

WALNUT GROVE CAMPMEETING

The Walnut Grove Campmeeting will be held at the usual time this year. Evangelistic services will open August 6th and day services will be held every day from Aug. 11th to 19th. Rules, rents and regulations will be the same as last year but because of the high price of living the rate of board will be $6.75 for term of nine days and at same rate for a longer period. Special efforts are being made to have a good number of ministers and gospel workers present. Rev. W. A. Spies will have charge of the evangelistic services, Miss Minnie Grove presiding at the piano. Miss Edith Myers will have charge of the children's services. The boarding house and restaurant and photograph gallery will be under the same management as last year. There will be a barber on the bround and E. L. Wible, Maddensville, Pa., will meet trains at Three Springs, with auto when notified. Rev. F. W. McClure, Lisburn, Pa., is general manager and will be glad to give information to anyone. Tents are nearly all rented and prospects for camp are good.

FAITH.

By Gertrude W. Seibert.

To follow where an unseen Captain leads,
To heed commands unheard by mortal ear,
To battle with a known, yet unseen foe,—
Ah! This is faith.

To choose the right when others think you wrong,
To stand for Truth while Error laughs in scorn,
To tread the lonely way unto the end,
Yes! This takes faith.

To wear a smile where you receive but frowns,
To kiss the hand that wounds your poor heart so,
And pray for those who fain your life would take,—
Ah! This is faith.

To fix your eyes on "that within the vail,"
Your heart's devotion set on things above,
To wait with patience till God calls you home,— Faith's victory won!

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 1, 1917.

You Pay actual CASH for PREMIUMS

THE cost of a cheap, inferior, chaff-loaded coffee, plus a premium, is the identical price at which Golden Sun Coffee sells without a premium. Use the one and you have a worthless premium and flat, bitter, murky coffee, but use Golden Sun—and while you get no premium, you do get a coffee that will be strong, full-bodied, rich, of exqusite flavor and superb aroma. Its use is an economy, for cut by special process, Golden Sun is chaffless. Sold by grocers only.

Also Miss Helen Taylor who is one of the office force of the General Refractories Company.

—Miss Mae Hudson has bade farewell to her Mount Union friends and gone to Greencastle, Franklin Co., where she expects to make her future residence. Miss Hudson was engaged in teaching piano while in Mount Union and had endeared herself to many of our people. She is a very competent teacher and we are sorry as a community to lose her.

—Rev. Todd preached a very able sermon in the Presbyterian church on last Sunday night, his text being taken from Isaiah——"My people have forgotten me." These are the words of God to the Israelites. Mr. Todd made the application to the nations of today who are forgetting God and when God speaks, said he, these words to any people they can naturally expect that His wrath will be poured out upon them.

—For sale a complete set of store fixtures, consisting of show cases, counters, scales, McCaskey cash register, desk, new counter, one (120) gallon automatic oil tank. Also a span of fine young horses, weight about 1200 lbs, well mated size and color, excellent drivers, a good double set of harness and delivery wagon, in good condition. We are closing out our business owing to one of the sons having gone to war. J. F. Miller & Sons, Jefferson street, Mount Union, Penna.

—The two dwelling houses belonging to the General Refractories Co., located on East Shirley street, have been greatly beautified by touches of paint and pretty surroundings. Mr. D. C. Corson the general superintendent resides in one of these houses and H. C. Chilcott in the other. A brick pavement has been laid from Shirley street up to the plant, which is a great convenience. Considerable money has been spent by the Refractories company in improvements both here and at the plant in latter months.

—Next week, the TIMES will publish a list of the boys who went out from Mount Union to fight in the service of Uncle Sam. This list however will not be complete with the first insertion, for there are evidently those men especially among those who enlisted, whose names we do not have. The list that we do have however is rather astonishing, for we had no idea that so many had gone from this community. We are indebted to the ladies of the W. C. T. U. for the list we have. Parents and friends of the boys who have gone out will look over the list next week and if the names of those in whom they are particularly interested are not there, we would be glad to have you notify this office at once. We want to get a complete list of the boys who have gone from here to the "Colors.", and run it from time to time, that this splendid Honor Roll might be kept before the people continually.

SIX O'CLOCK CLOSING.

The time for the six o'clock closing will expire as we understand it, September first. There are some of our business men who are anxious that this regulation be continued, and we have been asked to note it this week that the sentiment of all concerned, might be freely expressed. If you are favorable to the continuation of the six o'clock closing Mr. Merchant, please make your desire known to the President or the Secretary of the Business Men's Association.

PROTECTING THE FARMER.

There is scarcely anything more important than the thorough execution of the promise of the Department of Labor to protect farmers from recruiting by other industries. For the past three years, and particularly since the United States entered the war, the great handicap of the producers of food has been the loss of farm help through the recruiting efforts of other industries. Before we entered the war, the concerns manufacturing munitions for the allies offered wages that farmers could not afford to pay, and the farm hands gradually, and rapidly, drifted to the cities. As soon as America entered the conflict, the government began building cantonments and shipyards, much of the work being on the "cost-plus" plan, which encouraged the contractors to pay fabulous wages. The drain on farm labor then became tremendous, and farmers found it impossible to hire help at wages justified by the returns they were likely to get from their crops. The government limited the price a wheat farmer could get for his product, and boosted the wages he had to pay for what little help he could get. It is reassuring, therefore, to have the promise that the farmers will be protected from recruiting by other industries in the future, and any farmer who finds his help going to other employments in response to the tempting offers of higher wages should communicate with the Department of Labor. Just what the Department will do about it is uncertain, for the promise to protect the farmer is counterbalanced by a promise to laborers that "the government has no intention of interfering with the fundamental right of any civilian to change his work as he sees fit." With these two assurances outstanding, it will take some clever maneuvering to fulfill them both.

OUR LOCAL POLICE FORCE RIGHT ON THE JOB

Mayor Cassady and the Police Force got busy on the first day of August and commenced a clean-up of all gambling houses, booze joints and disorderly houses. The several successful raids were conducted under the supervision of Chief of Police Covert. The raiders consisted of the entire police force, constables, the Police Committee, the Council, and some of the good citizens. There have been six colored dens of the worst character and five foreign joints broken up in the last ten days.

We are informed that a race riot was quelled by the police the other day before it became very serious, and the ring leader of the colored men was arrested and will be tried before the mayor today and undoubtedly given a proper verdict. The Police force have been instructed to pick up the drunks very closely and those who have been placed in custody will be tried and fined accordingly. Over one hundred drunks and disorderlies have been arrested since August 1st.

Young girls and women loitering around and walking the streets after 11 o'clock p. m., without an escort of good repute will be picked up and arrested, on the charge of street walking.

HOW FARMERS MAY GET WHEAT FLOUR

Philadelphia, August 10. — The Food Administration Grain Corporation has issued an important new regulation to all mills and elevators in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Ohio, Indiana, and Michigan. It is to the effect that when a farmer brings to the mill any wheat grown by himself the miller may deliver to him on a toll or exchange basis a sufficient amount of flour without substitutes to provide 8 pounds per month for each person in his establishment until October 1, 1918.

The farmer, however, must sign an agreement that the wheat was grown on his farm, that the flour to be delivered to him with what he has on hand will not give him a supply more than sufficient to meet the requirements of his establishment, and that he will not sell, loan or deliver this flour to anyone nor permit it to be used for any purpose except human consumption in his establishment.

Packers' Profits —Large or Small

Packers' profits look big—

when the Federal Trade Commission reports that four of them earned $140,000,000 during the three war years.

Packers' profits look small—

When it is explained that this profit was earned on total sales of over four and a half billion dollars—or only about three cents on each dollar of sales.

This is the relation between profits and sales:

If no packer profits had been earned, you could have bought your meat at only a fraction of a cent per pound cheaper?

Packers' profits on meats and animal products have been limited by the Food Administration, since November 1, 1917.

Weirich. They are among our city's most estimable young people.

Huntingdon Post Office Robbed.

Safe robbers blew open the post office vault in the new Federal building here some time between midnight and 4 o'clock Tuesday morning and escaped with a large supply of revenue, war saving and postage stamps.

The postmaster, J. G. Lesher, is unable to tell the aggregate amount of government property taken and is awaiting the arrival of a government inspector to determine the amount of the loss sustained through the robbery.

The robbers gained entrance thru a window by forcing it open and the four doors to the vault were then blown open. There were apparently four explosions, but the burglars were unable to open a chest located in the vault containing some cash and money orders.

Two employees of the office when they reported for duty at 5 o'clock that morning discovered that the post office had been robbed. The clever manner in which the robbery was carried out indicates that the burglars were no amateurs.

An electric drill, stolen from a nearby railroad, is believed to have been used in forcing the vault.

Spring Skies are Slow in Coming But Brighter Days will Come Soon

Do not Wait, but Prepare now, for those Brighter Days Coming. Every part of the Store is Filled with Beautiful New Things Ready for your Choosing show no evidence of diminishing completeness for so many new garments have been coming in, that unbroken lines are still the rule.

The Coat and Suit Stocks

If the weather man would let up and people could wear the beautiful garments we have been selling, Huntingdon would see some wonderful Coats, Suits, and Dresses which we have sold. They are certainly models of beauty and there are still hundreds more here for the choosing of those who have been scared by the continual rain and cold.

The Printzess Coats and Suits are all you would expect to find them, with splendid models at all prices. The three models illustrated give a faint idea of the beauty of the garments we are showing.

Peggy Paige Dresses

are distinctive in every line, and are delighting our critical buyers, but no wonder. Every dress has something you never saw before in any dress, and the prices are very moderate, when workmanship, quality and models are considered. Prices are from $35.00 to $100.

Some Fine Models

in Tricolette Blouses have just arrived prices running from $10 to $18.00 each.

Some of the Most Beautiful

Voile Piece Goods we have seen have just come in. They are priced at $1.25 to $2.00 per yard but are wonderful both for value and design.

The Floor Covering Stocks

are full and very complete considering the unheard of difficulties in procuring all materials of this kind. Manufacturers ship us just what they have coming through the mills without regard to preference of patterns. However by foresight, we have managed to secure a truly remarkable stock, which is giving great satisfaction to our patrons. You cannot afford to buy rugs or floor coverings of any kind without seeing our stocks first.

The Breeders Gazette

THE FARMERS GREATEST PAPER.

In all progressive farming communities modern and systematic business methods are rapidly supplanting guesswork and mere tradition in the handling of soils and live stock.

Wherever you see fertile fields, good buildings, comfortable homes, silos and improved live stock you know you are among farmers who are builders, and not wreckers.

It is in the midst of surroundings that indicate the presence of knowledge—which is power —in the handling of farm problems that you will invariably find THE BREEDERS GAZETTE.

Town Talk

—Dr. M. P. Headings and son, Russell Headings, were visitors in Allensville, Mifflin county, on Sunday.

—Among the relatives and friends from a distance who atended the funeral of Mrs. Myra B. Barnes, held from the home of her sister, Mrs. Grace Erb, East Shirley street, Saturday afternoon, were: J. Russell Bowman and Roy Bowman, New York City; Mrs. Maud Peacock, and Clifford Faust, Darlington, Maryland; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wenzel and four children, of Sproul, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Booher and young son, of Homestead; Mrs. Nellie Barnes Kinch, and young son, Bobby Kinch, of Tyrone.

—Buy your Mother's Day flowers at your home Flower Shoppe, 23 N. Jefferson Street, Telephone 272-J. Day and night service.

—Miss Dorothy Doyle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley M. Doyle, of this city, had a part in the light opera, "Mam'zelle Taps," which was given by the Juniata College Glee Clubs, Monday evening. Miss Doyle is a senior student at the college, and a member of the Girls' Glee Club. She possesses an unusually sweet contralto voice, and her part was well performed in the presentation on Monday night.

—Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Abrams motored to Philadelphia, at the end of the week, taking with them Mrs. Roy Streeter, of that city, a cousin of Mrs. Abrams, who had been visiting in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Chilcott, and with other relatives and friends here.

—We are glad to note that Miss Mildred Locke of Allenport has recovered from a recent serious illness.

—Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Kemmler, of Ridge street, announce the birth of a son, Charles William Kemmler, jr., at their home Sunday morning, April 25th. The mother, who prior to her marriage was Miss Alice Goodman, along with the son, is doing nicely.

—Miss Marian Spahr, of Dillsburg, has been visiting in the home of her relatives, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Irrgang, East Shirley street. Miss Spahr accompanied the Irrgang family on their return from a recent visit at her home.

—Miss Margaret Miller, a student at West Chester State Normal School, had as her guest during her vacation at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Miller, East Market street, Miss Shirley Myers, a fellow student whose home is in Johnstown. Miss Miller joined Miss Myers in Altoona at the end of the week, and both returned to West Chester the first of the week.

—Yes—We will have something very special for Mother's Day. The Flower Shoppe, 23 North Jefferson St. Telephone 272-J.

—Professor and Mrs. R. H. Fissel, the latter's sister, Miss Alice Rohrbaugh, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Krepps and young daughter, Dorothy Jane Krepps, formed a motor party traveling in the Krepps car on Saturday into Adams county. Near Gettysburg, the members of the party were entertained in the Rohrbaugh home in a royal manner, and going Sunday to East Berlin, they shared the hospitality of the Fissel home, both homes being the respective parental homes of Prof. and Mrs. Fissel, of this city. They reached home Sunday night.

—Rev. and Mrs. C. W. Fields and young daughter, of New Cumberland, came here to attend the funeral of Mrs. Fields' uncle, Mr. S. S. Horton, which took place at the home of her mother, Mrs. J. N. —Cloyd Norris and C. S. Price accompanied J. Russell Bowman and brother, Roy Bowman, on their return by motor to their home in New York City, leaving her Tuesday morning. The Bowman brothers were called here to the funeral of their sister, Mrs. Myra B. Barnes, which occurred on Saturday.

—Mr. J. Quincy Dell, of Mapleton, was in Mount Union on Monday at which time he made known his intentions to be a candidate for Director of the Poor. Mr. Dell is one of the present Poor Directors and is well known throughout the county. He will doubtless have a considerable following relative to his candidacy because of his experience on the Board.

—Miss Olive Lukens, who holds a responsible position in Altoona, was a recent visitor with her brothers and families, who reside in this city.

—Mr. and Mrs. V. N. Herbster returned at the end of the week from a visit of a few days in Saxton, where they were residents for several years before coming to this city.

—Mrs. Arley G. Cassady went to Philadelphia, at the end of the week, where she passed some time.

—William Snyder, who is employed with the P. R. R. Company, at Altoona, visited over the end of the week in the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Snyder, East Market street.

—Carl Hooper, a recent graduate of the Mount Union high school, and a member of the musical organizations of the schools while here, spent some time in this city while passing the Easter vacation from the Curtiss Institute of Music, Philadelphia, where he is a student, with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Hooper, in Mapleton.

—Bobby Kinch, of Tyrone, visited several days in the home of his uncle and aunt and grandmother, Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Fox and Mrs. Robert Barnes, Washington street. The little fellow was accompanied home by his uncle, Fred Barnes.

—Mrs. Charles Ingwers and son, Robert Ingwers, were recent visitors in Altoona, where they visited an aunt of Mrs. Ingwers, Mrs. Mary Malone. Mrs. Malone is eighty-two years old and has lost her vision.

—Mrs. Ralph Harper, of Neelyton, motored here at the end of the week and spent some time. Mrs. Harper is well known here, being Miss Alice Cutshall, prior to her marriage, and a former teacher in the local schools.

DEATH OF LEMOND G. GOSHORN

Lemond Gifford Goshorn, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Goshorn of Shade Valley, was born December 9, 1926, and passed away on April 8, 1927. Funeral services were held in Richvale M. E. church on April 10th at 3 o'clock p. m., and burial took place in the Book cemetery, in charge of Rev. Baughman. Funeral director, W. D. Behel.

We watched him breathing through the night,
Him breathing soft and low;
As in his breast the wave of life
Kept heaving to and fro

Our very hopes belied our fears,
Our fears our hopes belied;
We thought him dying when he slept,
And sleeping when he died.

For when the morn came, dim and sad,
And chill with early showers;
His quiet eyelids closed: He had Another morn than ours.

CHILDREN'S DAY AT COUNTY FAIR

The Lewistown Fair Association, desiring to encourage and instruct the young citizens of Mifflin county in the advancement of horticulture, agriculture and stock raising, have set aside Tuesday, August 16th for the children of the ages of 13 years and under, and will permit all school youngsters within these ages to attend the Fair free of all admission charges.

This unparalleled generosity on the part of the Fair Association is made to create a keen desire among the coming generation for higher standards as well as to recruit to the fold of these gainful occupations a more enlightened and efficient corps of workmen and producers. For it is realized that the surest way to farming relief is from within its own ranks by the application of modern invention and methods.

Methods, and results accruing therefrom, will be exhibited for the young on that day in such plain and comprehensive fashion that it will be an incentive as well as an education to the visitors of these exhibits. Only methods of practical value, those that have been tried and proved by those now engaged in these pursuits, will be on exhibition, no fantastic schemes or unproved theories will be advanced.

The Lewistown Fair Association has requested the co-operation of the schools of this county to furnish the number of enrollments in each school of the children of the ages mentioned so that no youngster will be overlooked and miss this great occasion for the kiddies.

Programs of the Fair will be altered and adapted especially for the young folks both for their instruction as well as their entertainment. Parents eager for the children's broadening of mental vision should make sure of their attendance at this big event for the little folks, for nothing can be more instructive to the young than to learn while being amused.

ASA McCLELLAND SIMPSON DIES AT SON'S HOME HERE

Asa McClelland Simpson, a well-known resident of this place for a number of years, but residing at Newton Hamilton lately, died at the home of his son, Norman Simpson, South Washington street, this city, Monday, April 25th, after an illness of several weeks from heart disease. He was brought to the home of his son two weeks ago, and was cared for until the end.

Mr. Simpson was born in the vicinity of Everett, August 14, 1862. He came to Mount Union about twenty years ago, and was employed with a refractories plant for a number of years. While at work at the plant some years ago, he sustained a fractured skull in an accident, from which he recovered after many months. He was twice married. Some years after the death of his first wife, he was married to Sadie Carson, of Newton Hamilton, who survives along with these sons by the first marriage: Marshall Simpson, of Altoona; Frank Simpson, of Everett; Victor Simpson, of Lakeworth, Florida, and Norman Simpson, of this city. Another son, Roy Simpson, after whom the Simpson-Hunt Post American Legion, of this city, is partially named, was killed in action in the World War. Mr. Simpson won distinction during the late war because of the fact that he gave his entire family of five sons to the service, and one of the five making the supreme sacrifice. Mr. Simpson is also survived by these brothers and sisters: E. M. Simpson, of Mattie, Pa.; Alfred Simpson, of Wells Tannery; Nelson Simpson, of Saxton; Mrs. Anna Bulgar, of Six Mile Run, Mrs. Osa Swope, of Braddock, and another sister residing in the vicinity of Pittsburgh.

Mr. Simpson was a member of Everett Lodge, No. 600 I. O. O. F., also of the John Taylor Encampment, No. 315, I. O. O. F., Everett. He was identified with the Methodist church. with the Methodist church.

Following short funeral services held at the home in Newton Hamilton, this morning, at 8 o'clock, conducted by Rev. George Shimer of the Methodist church, the cortege left for Mount Pleasant church, near Everett, where further services were held and burial made in the cemetery near the church. A. J. Barben, funeral director.

BOOK OF POEMS BY MRS. GERTRUDE W. SEIBERT

Mrs. Gertrude W. Seibert has just published a new book of poems entitled "The Sweet Brier Rose" copies of which are $1.00 each. It is a beautiful little volume and contains many choice selections. TURTLE CREEK MOTORISTS INJURED NEAR BEDFORD

Crashing into a telephone pole and upsetting after their auto skidded from the Lincoln Highway, about one-half mile east of Bedford, on Sunday morning early, four persons were injured, three of whom were taken to the Bedford hospital. All the occupants of the car are residents of Turtle Creek. Two of the injured were reported to be in serious condition. The injured are: Elizabeth Thompson, 17, fractured skull and severe lacerations about the face and head; Amanda Mack, 21, concussion of the brain, severe lacerations about the head, face and neck and lacerations of the right knee; Everett Colvert, 22, lacerations of the scalp, right knee and above the right eye; Naron Gonder, 22, who was driving the machine, escaped with slight bruises of the chest and returned to his home at Turtle Creek later that same day. It is believed that the machine skidded in fresh tar on a curve, then plunged from the highway, striking a pole and turning completely over. The party was traveling to Everett at that time.

JAMES HOLLAND

James Holland died at the Blair Memorial hospital Tuesday afternoon, April 19, 1927, of complications. He was born at Nuda, N. C., 35 years ago. He lived in Mount Union five years. His widow and two children survive: Harold and Anna Holland. He was a 32nd Degree Mason and a I. B. P. O. E. of W. and a member of the Methodist church. The members of the lodge acted as pallbearers. Funeral service was held Thursday, April 21st in charge of his pastor. Burial in Odd Fellows cemetery. Funeral directed by W. P. Dunmire.

JOHN H. RODGERS

John H. Rodgers, born February 14, 1890, died April 20, 1927, from a complication of diseases in the Lewistown hospital following an operation two weeks before, aged 37 years, 2 months and 6 days. He is survived by his wife and four small children, namely, Florence, Elizabeth, Charles and John, also his father, Charles Rodgers, who lived with his son. His mother and two sons preceded him in death, also a sister, Mrs. Tom Rose, of Brooklyn Mills. Services at the home at Brooklyn Mills on Saturday at 10 a. m. Buried in Spring Run cemetery. Services conducted by Rev. W. H. Hanawalt of the Brethren church.

WEEK-END COLD WAVE

An unusually cold wave, with snow flurries and in some places high winds, hit this section over the last week-end, and on Saturday morning there was a freezing temperature. It is believed by a number who are sufficiently informed as to fruit that much damage has been done in this section of the State. In Blair county and the surrounding territory, as a result of the snow squall, high winds and freezing temperature, cherries, early peaches, plums and pears, which were in heavy blossom when the snow hit them, are frozen and will undoubtedly result in a scarcity of these particular fruits. Just how far-reaching the damage is cannot be determined until later in the season.

HOME OF JOHN R. YAPPLE DESTROYED BY FIRE

Mount Union friends of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Yapple, of Altoona, who are well known here and visit here frequently, deeply regret their loss in the destruction of their home in that city by fire, on Thursday morning last. Mr. Yapple, who had returned from his night duty as a freight conductor, had eaten his breakfast and retired for rest, while Mrs. Yapple left the house to go to a nearby store to do some shopping. When she returned and opened the front door she found a mass of flames. With difficulty, neighbors aroused Mr. Yapple, who escaped by jumping from a porch roof, but was considerably burned about the face and head. The loss from fire is estimated at $10,000. Many valuables and $180 in money were burned. The fire is believed to have been caused by the electric light wires.

HOME AND SCHOOL ASSOCIATION MEETING

The annual community Flower Market will be held in the grade school building on Thursday, May 5, 1927, at 3 o'clock p. m. This will be held in connection with the regular meeting of the Home and School Association. Anyone having seeds, bulbs or plants to donate will please bring or send them to the grade school building by 2 p. m. on the afternoon of May 5th. The sale will be continued in the evening at 7:30, at which time moving pictures featuring forest life in Pennsylvania will be shown in the high school auditorium.

Mr. Deck Lane of Ebensburg, a well known photographer, who has been successful in obtaining pictures of wild life, will be here to display them. A silver offering will be lifted at the door. Money will be used for prizes in the fall.

PASTOR TO PREACH SERIES OF SERMONS ON REVELATION

Next Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock at the First Baptist church, this city, Pastor R. M. Vincent, will begin a series of Sunday night sermons on the Book of Revelation. Mr. Vincent believes that this book is not a "closed book" as some would have us believe, but that it contains many things of vital interest to the Christian. Many Mount Union folks will no doubt want to hear Pastor Vincent's sermons on this book. The Sunday morning sermon at 10:45 o'clock will be "The Inspiration of the Holy Scriptures."

Bible school at 9:30 a. m. Classes for all ages. Junior Church at 6:45, led by Mr. Vincent is a new feature at the First Baptist church and all parents of the church are urged to send their children to this service.

Everybody welcome to all services.

MANY DISEASES ARE CARRIED BY FLIES

Scientists say that flies carry germs of typhoid fever, infantile paralysis, sumer disorders and over 30 other diseases. Flies should be killed. FLY-TOX is harmless to people but sure death to mosquitoes, roaches, mothes and bed bugs as well as flies. FLY-TOX is fragrant, stainless, sure.—Adv.

HUNTINGDON PASTOR HONORED

In recognition of his influence as a preacher and author, the Rev. H. D. McKeehan, pastor of the Huntingdon Reformed church, has been elected to life membership in Pi Gamma Mu, the National Social Science Honor Society. The honor was conferred in connection with the commencement of South Western University last week.

Shirleysburg

Rev. T. Carson Hanna, Baptist Associational Director, will be at the Shirleysburg Baptist church next Sunday morning to address the people. Rev. Mr. Hanna is remembered here from the great evangelistic meetings held during the spring, which established a record for work of this nature. Although working single-handed, the leader was greeted on his closing meeting with an audience larger than the entire population of the borough, and the professed conversions were nearly one-fourth that number. All the churches of the town were benefited by the work.

Card of Thanks

We desire to thank the neighbors and friends for their kind help and sympathy during our recent bereavement, the death of Mrs. S. J. Lohr; also desire to thank those who furnished cars and for the beautiful floral tributes.—Mrs. Minnie Shenefelt and children.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Kinsloe, of Market street, were present Wednesday at the commencement exercises of Dickinson Seminary, their son, Jack H. Kinsloe, being one of the graduates. There were seventy-one in the graduating class. As a finish to his work at Dickinson, Jack in company with his mother will sail shortly on a trip abroad, to be absent a couple of months.

ETTIE GAMBLE McMULLEN

Mrs. Ettie Gamble McMullen died in the Blair Memorial hospital at Huntingdon, Pa., May 30, 1928, aged 49 years, 2 months, and 6 days. Cause of death was complications. Deceased was the daughter of Daniel J., and Annie Gamble, survived also by the following children, Mrs. Ira Hockensmith, New Vello, Pa., Mr. Thomas McMullen, of Mount Union, and Mrs. William Horne, Newton Hamilton, and Mrs. Paul Miller, Altoona. Also these brothers and sisters, Mrs. Charles Briggs, Franklinville, Harry Gamble, California, Mrs. Samuel Appleby, Neelyton; Mrs. Cleve Lunn, Orbisonia, Mrs. Mack Worthington, Newville; Mrs. John Laman, of Spring Run; Mrs. Bruce Perry, Middle Springs, and Jessie, at home.

Dearest mother, thou art gone;
A sacred heart is missed
A loving hand, a smiling face,
Is resting with the blest.

She had been with us from morn 'till night and through trials and sorrows all the while and though her pathway steep and her trials were heard, she carried her cross with a smile.

We miss her in silence
No eye can see us weep
And many a tear we shed
When others are asleep

Flowers laid upon her grave
Will wither and decay
Our love for the one who sleeps beneath
Shall never fade away.

Sadly missed by her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Horne.

Mrs. Gertrude Seibert Dies at Miami, Fla.

A telegram has come to us announcing the death of Mrs. Gertrude W. Seibert in Miami, Fla., on Wednesday noon. The body will arrive in Mount Union for burial on Sunday. Mrs. Seibert is the widow of the late R. S. Seibert who for several years was head of the East Broad Top Railroad.

The Daily Vacation Bible school is in session now, having opened last Monday morning. The school will continue for two weeks during which time the children of Mount Union, irrespective of creed, race, and nationality, will be privileged to attend. Thus far the total enrollment has reached 232. Of this number 115 pupils are enrolled in the Junior Department which is supervised by Rev. H. Willis Hartsock, pastor of the Methodist church; 95 are enrolled in the primary department of which Rev. R. S. Burris, pastor of the Presbyterian church, is the head; 22 are enrolled in the Kindergarten, which is under the direction of Miss Mary McClain. Complete data relative to the distribution of pupils on the basis of church affiliation are not yet available. However, an approximate survey of the Junior department yields interesting facts and may serve as a general index to the whole school. At least, it shows how well the Bible school is serving the entire community. The figures for this division are:—

School	Gr. 6	Gr. 5	Gr.4
Unclassified	2	2	4
Methodist	6	20	20
Baptist	3	4	20
Christian Alliance	1		1
Catholic	3	1	2
Lutheran	5	6	3
Presbyterian	6	12	8

The school opens promptly at 8:30 Eastern Standard Time and closes at 11 o'clock. The course offered is a combination of the well-known Latham and Abington Bible School curricula. The three groups, Junior, Primary and Kindergarten meet for devotions in the Methodist, Presbyterian and Lutheran churches, respectively. The beginners in the Methodist church, those who are destined to be introduced to the public schools next September, are subjected to an hour's instruction and then dismissed. For the two remaining groups, a period of music follows devotions after which the boys and girls go to the grade school building for further study. The use of this building was made possible by the kind co-operation of the superintendent of schools and the board of education.

Never before has there been such a wealth of material from which to select a faculty. Mount Union is fortunate in having such a large number of public spirited citizens who are willing to serve their community in this way. A list of the instructors follows:

Dr. J. W. Shannon, Rev. H. W. Hartsock, Rev. R. S. Burris, Rev. J. Alfred Cox, Mr. Cloyd B. Ewing, Miss Mary McClain, Mrs. Edna Krepps, Miss Idessa Rinker, Mrs. R. M. Longacre, Miss Catherine Stitt, Mrs. Gladys Jones, Miss Mae Jones, Mrs. Robert Reeder, Mrs. Marshall Awkerman, Miss Anne Hackman, Miss Betty Heckert, Miss Carolyn Huston, Mrs. Arthur Hill, Miss Marian Welch, Miss Annabel Longacre, Miss Pauline Taylor, Miss Florence Seese, Miss Ruth Watson, Mr. Sheldon Bard, Miss Emma Grace Campbell, Miss Marguerite Vaughn, Miss Virginia Evans, Miss Lillian Dunlap, Miss Charlotte Headings, and Mr. I. N. Taylor, Jr.

Don't Forget! DAD'S DAY

Sunday June 17th

Give him something to wear and watch that smile of satisfaction.

Dad is on the Gift Calendar as well as Mother — ties and shirts and other items of apparel will fill the same gift purpose as the many things offered a few weeks ago for Mother.

A bookkeeper out of work is always referred to by his friends as a public accountant.

Fashion Says:—

"DRESS IN HARMONY"

Never before was the blending ensemble more essential to good dress—and here we suggest for your approval perfect examples of good taste.

Don't let SUNDAY, June 17th pass without reminding DAD that this is "HIS DAY." A shirt or tie will do it.

"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," and all dress clothes and no work clothes makes a dull clothing business. So what is more natural than that we should carry the best in work clothes—and sell it at the best values possible.

If other stores call you a crank—COME ON IN!

If you are fussy about your clothes — particular about your hats and shoes—If you have more trouble with shirts than Sousa has medals and take more time to union-suit yourself than it takes most men to buy a house and lot— All the more we want to meet you for the man who is hard to win is usually hard to lose.

POLICE CONDUCT RAID ON GABRIEL BELUCCI

On Wednesday night last the establishment of Gabriel Belucci and two sons, on Poplar street, Mount Union, was raided. The Belucci place is near to the Pennsylvania Railroad passenger station. The raid took place around 9 o'clock by State, County and Borough officers. The raid was made by County Detective Oliver Carmon, State Troopers James F. Mitchell and Carl H. Jamison, and City Policemen C. P. Cramer and Charles Dell. The following articles were seized in the raid: Fifteen 50-gallon barrels of rye mash; two 15-gallon copper stills, equipped with cooling devices and other necessary contrivances, 41 gallons of moonshine whiskey, two hose lines used to supply water; six 100-pound bags of sugar, one bag of corks of assorted sizes; seven 5-gallon jugs; two 3-gallon jugs, funnels, testers and various other articles used in this kind of business. The 550 gallons of rye mash was dipped by the bucketful from the eleven barrels and poured into the sewer. The barrel of whiskey was transferred into nine big jugs and along with the sugar, stills, oil stoves, etc., were taken to Huntingdon and placed in custody.

The Belucci establishment was rather difficult to reach and for more than a half hour the officers searched the house before finding any liquor. The odor, however, of moonshine was very evident. Every nook and corner of the two-story building was searched and the members of the family would not volunteer any suggestions. After deciding the odor in the kitchen was the strongest evidence of booze, the officers proceeded to take up the kitchen oil cloth in a careful manner and after the oil cloth had been lifted the floor was examined for loose boards. Tools were procured and a board in the floor was raised, and after a short time Belucci was asked to do one of two things, to tell where to gain entrance to the distillery or to stand by and watch the officers go down. Belucci decided to render assistance and so led the way into the cellar. A toilet enclosed with wainscoating was underneath the cellar steps. It was quite a revelation when the officers got inside and saw the very carefully devised distilling plant and the large amount of liquor that was on hands as well as in the process of manufacture. The father, Gabriel Bellucci, and two sons, Frank and Tony, were arrested and taken before Justice of the Peace W. S. Miller of Mount Union. These three men were held in the sum of $500 bail each. It was brought out during the investigation that two prominent men in Huntingdon owe Belucci over $300 for liquor, one of the men owing him $143.00 had a short time ago given a bad check in payment. All told, it seems that the Beluccis have about $1400 in outstanding accounts of this nature.

HEART TAG DAY HERE TOTALLED OVER $40

The "Heart Tag Day" receipts when checked up by Miss Sara Miller, who took charge of the Volunteers of America tag day held here on Saturday last, totalled over $40.

The children worked faithfully from early morning until the close, and those interested in the affair are deeply grateful to all who in any way helped to make the undertaking a success.

At the close of the contest it was found that Pauline Smith was entitled to the first prize having secured $14.33, for her tags; the second prize was won by May Bell Culver, who had $8.02; third, Martha Cramer, who had $3.69, and the fourth by Lucy McVey, who had $3.63. The other children were made happy with movie passes.

Newton Hamilton

June 18.—Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Levy and two children of Philadelphia, are visiting Mrs. Levy's parental home, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Shaver's and spending a few days at the Shaver cottage in Licking Creek.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Gilliland and two sons of Juniata, were visiting Mrs. Gilliland's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Gilliland last week.

Mrs. J. H. Kinsloe and son, Jack, of Mount Union sail next Thursday from New York, for an extended trip abroad, and will be absent several weeks. Bon voyage.

The Daily Vacation Bible School closed last Friday with a picnic along the river shore, and a program in the Presbyterian church Sunday morning, at the regular church worship hour.

Miss Rebecca Drake, employed at Lewistown, was home over the weekend.

Mrs. Jennie Taylor spent last Saturday in Harrisburg.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Ewing, Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Sechrist and sister, Mary, attended the Masonic banquet, which was held at the Juniata Valley Colony Club last Friday night.

Albert Gearhart of Atkinson Mills, whose home and contents were consumed by fire this spring, has purchased a school building at or near his place and is converting it into a dwelling house, which when finished, will be a very neat little home. This young couple suffered a great loss, not only in the loss of their home, but the loss of their little child as well, who died shortly after, from the effects of a cold contracted at the time of the fire.

R. S. BURRIS SPEAKS AT HUNTINGDON BIBLE SCHOOL

Rev. R. S. Burris, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Mount Union made the address at the closing exercises of the Daily Vacation Bible School held in Huntingdon on Wednesday evening of this week. The exercises were held in the First Baptist church.

"THE SECRET HOUR"

Do your own wooing is the love lesson taught by "The Secret Hour," Pola Negri's intriguing screen romance which opens Tuesday, June 26th at the Shapiro theatre, benefit movie for the Boy Scouts' camping trip.

Something of a parallel could be drawn between the loveless fate that befell Captain Miles Standish when he sent John Alden to do his courting for him, and the situation that develops in Miss Negri's latest Paramount picture.

We could go on and outline the picture for you—but then that might spoil the play for you—so we will stop here.

COUNTY MEDICAL SOCIETY MEETS AT HOSPITAL

The Huntingdon County Medical Society observed Hospital Day at the J. C. Blair Memorial Hospital on Thursday, June 14, 1928. The attendance was fairly good at the clinics which were held in the wards and laboratories of this up-to-date institution.

Mrs. Gertrude W. Seibert.

As was noted in last week's Times, Mrs. Gertrude Woodcock Seibert, widow of the late Robert S. Seibert of Rockhill Furnace, Pa., died at her residence in Miami Beach, Fla., on Wednesday of last week, June 13, 1928. Death came as the result of an operation for gallstones. The body of Mrs. Seibert was brought to Mount Union on Sunday afternoon last, arriving on Train 15, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Johnson and daughter, also of Miami Beach. The Johnsons were friends of Mrs. Seibert and at her request had accompanied the body to Mount Union for interment. Services were held in Miami Beach prior to leaving for Mount Union. On the arrival of the body at Mount Union on Sunday afternoon last it was taken to the Methodist church of our town, where services were held at 2:30, in charge of the pastor of the church, Rev. H. Willis Hartsock. The music was in charge of the Methodist choir. Mr. A. H. McMillen, of Brooklyn, N. Y., preached the sermon, he having come from the Middle West to participate in this service at the request of the deceased. Interment was made in the family plot in the Odd Fellows cemetery at Mount Union. Funeral director W. P. Dunmire.

Mrs. Gertrude Woodcock Seibert was born November 16, 1864, in Altoona, Pa. She was a daughter of Samuel M. Woodcock and Elizabeth Etnier Woodcock. She graduated from the public schools of Altoona in 1880 and at Wellesley College in 1885. She was married to Robert S. Seibert on September 18, 1891 and they resided in Pueblo, Colorado, until 1893, after which they went to Los Angles, California, where they resided until 1903. In 1903 they came to Rockhill, Pa., where they resided until 1913, when Mr. Seibert passed away. Mrs. Seibert devoted the remainder of her life to the work of the International Bible Students of Brooklyn, where she resided until about 1920. From that time until the date of her death she made her residence in Miami Beach, Fla., where she passed away on June 13, 1928.

Among the relatives and friends who were present at the funeral last Sunday were: Mr. Byron Woodcock, a brother, of Scranton, Pa.; Dr. Lee Woodcock and mother of Scranton; Mr. and Mrs. Lee Woodcock and family of Altoona; Mr. and Mrs. W. Irvin Woodcock, of Hollidaysburg; William and Sarah Woodcock of Hollidaysburg, and Mr. Milton Woodcock of Altoona; Mr. Carey E. Etnier of York; A. I. Etnier of Tyrone; Mr. Scott Etnier and mother of Orbisonia; Mr. and Mrs. Gardner of Pittsburg; Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Davis of McVeytown; Mr. D. S. Drake and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Etnier of Huntingdon; Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Johnson and daughter, of Miami, Fla.

Mrs. Seibert was an excellent woman and to those who knew her she was held in the very highest esteem. She had written several books, among them two books of poems, one "Daily Manna" and another "The Sweet Brier Rose and Other Poems". We are using herewith two of her poems, the one "Rest", which by request was read at the funeral service last Sunday afternoon; the other, "Sweet Day of Rest." Mrs. Seibert also wrote several hymns which were set to music, and one of these hymns "What a Wonderful Change" by request was sung at the funeral last Sunday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Welch.

"REST"

The rest of faith: How wondrous sweet,
Each trial and each grief to meet,
Upheld by that sufficient grace,
That trusts Him where it cannot trace.

The rest of peace: with mind so stayed,
That as the seabirds, unafraid,
Upon the stormy deep do sleep,
My soul an inmost calm doth keep.

The rest of love: What holy bliss,
That He is mine and I am His!
It sweetens every bitter cup,
It bids my tear-dimmed eyes look-up;

It satisfies my hungry heart,
And makes this life of Heaven a part.
Oh! blessed rest of faith and peace,
Oh! rest of love that ne'er shall cease.

SWEET DAY OF REST

I know some day my Lord will come,
And stand within my humble home,—
His glorious presence in the room
Will make it like a rose in bloom.

His voice, like music on mine ear,
Will banish every thought of fear,
He'll fold me closely to His breast
And there in peace I'll sweetly rest.

And, Oh, my Lord, on that sweet day
I know the words that Thou wilt say,
"It is enough my child, come home,
Thy work is done, beloved, come."

Then I'll arise and go with Thee
Across the shining, crystal sea,
Until we reach that blissful shore
Where we shall dwell forevermore.

THE GLAD-RAG BAG

VOL. 1 JUNE 22, 1928 NO. 3

Published in the interest of the people of Mount Union and vicinity by the Dollinger Store.

A lot of people are thinking about vacations just now. Nice thought, isn't it? We've been thinking a lot along those lines, too, and consequently we have a lot of things here that should interest you:

Luggage
Bathing suits
Knickers
Golf hose
Sport shoes
Sweaters
White Pants
(duck or flannel)
Shirts, etc.

Visit us before you complete your vacation plans.

Now that Mr. Hoover has been nominated, where do we go from here?

Let us remind you that we have BATHING SUITS for ladies as well as men and boys. This season's designs and colorings, one-piece and two-piece suits.

The newest creations for those who like to swim in smart and easy style.

Are your shoes friends with your feet? They should be. BOSTONIANS are.

If foot satisfaction is what you want why not stop in? Try on a pair. Note their fit and style.

What do you need in work clothes? We're showing a full line in our windows this week. Value is the keynote. Better stock up!

We never feel offended when a man walks out—but we do fel badly when he doesn't come in. Our stock isn't infallible—not by a jugful. You may have a greater stock of notions than we have of merchandise—although that is hardly possible. We try to treat Mr. "I think I'll look around" as courteously as Mr. "I'll take it."

With the result that some of our best customers now are folks who didn't spend one cent on their first visit.

More,and more men and young men are changing to REIS JIM SHIRTS and JIM PRUTS. Comfort is the answer.

Some fellows are now buying their second STRAW HAT for this season—result of being caught in the rain or of a seventh inning rally or what have you?

By the way, we've added a couple new numbers to our stock of straws—just in case you want to make a selection.

We've noticed that this particular section of the year seems to be especially adapted for weddings—guess that's why we've furnished so many "lucky" fellows with the official togs, lately.

If you happen to be so minded drop in and see us.

BEE CULTURE AND BEE-HAVIOR

By J. C. JOHNSTON

To get the maximum work from a colony now, that fills the hive body, two supers should be used, the bees will start working in the first on above the hive body. When it is half filled the supers should be reversed. Some beekeepers think one super should be entirely filled before putting on the second, this very likely will hamper them and not give enough room in which to work.

In a season of honey flow, bees require more room than they actually will fill, for the nectar is at least 60 per cent water, which must be evaporated in the hive, it is moved from cell to cell to accomplish this, and air currents must be kept up in the super to aid in condencing and ripening. If you will notice a hive on a morning when clover is in bloom you will see the bees working now very hard in the field, in the afternoon, the flying to and from the hive will not be so noticeable, but all afternoon and on into the night there will be a great continuous hum within the hive and bees in the entrance will be seen standing on their toes and fanning the air very rapidly this is the cause of the hum and it is for the purpose of ventilation to ripen the honey.

The cells of honey are not capped over until the honey is thoroughly ripe, nor is it good for human consumption until then and after, unripe honey will sour if the bees are prevented from curing it.

Drones are very noticeable about the hives now. These happy-go-lucky fellows fly about much with a more distinctive hum than the worker, they eat great quantities of honey and help congest the hive, they reap not, neither do they spin. Their only mission in life is to fertilize or mate with a virgin queen.

Nature provides many drones that a virgin queen in search of a mate shall have no trouble in finding hives also that the law of the survival of the fittest shall be carried out and his progeny be fitted to carry on the characteristics of the species.

Every colony will rear drones to a certain extent but a colony whose comb is built upon comb foundation will not have an excessive amount. Excessive drones are a great expense to a colony. In the larval state they require the same feed, attention and room in a comb as does worker larva, and after reared they are a great nuisance. To trap and destroy them after they are reared is like locking the stable after the horse is stolen and a trap is dangerous in that it may become clogged and smother the whole colony. The remedy should have been applied before eggs were laid in the comb by removing all comb containing excessive drone cells. It is very interesting to observe the young bees now. It is easy to recognize them from the older worker in that they are smaller and very fuzzy, making them a lighter color while the older worker in working thru narrow places in her work has rubbed most of the fuzzy hairs from her back. These young ladies have much work to do immediately after they emerge from their cells in nursing larva, storing nectar and pollen, etc., for now the worker is too busy harvesting to attend the duties within the hive, but the young have their play time too, they do much gamboling about the hives in late afternoon and evening, trying out their wings. It is also interesting to note her behavior when she reaches the hive with her first load of nectar, she struts about the entrance, apparently showing herself off, and demanding attention from her elders, which while the experienced worker hurries to the comb, deposits her load and hurries back to the field.

Market

EDITORIAL FROM THE HUNTINGDON MONITOR

The Blair county Grand Jury this week acted on 100 bills for violations of law. Eighty of the indictments involved foreigners, and they recommended the deportation of all unnaturalized citizens found guilty. The same state of affairs exists in Huntingdon county at every term of court, and the expense incident to the trials causes our tax rate to swell. The unnaturalized foreigner has been a costly proposition to the tax payers of Huntingdon county for many years, and we are of the opinion that the movement of the Blair county court is a step in the right direction.

WILLIAM H. BERRY, FORMER STATE TREASURER DIES

Chester, June 20.—William H. Berry, former state treasurer of Pennsylvania, and once prominent in Democratic circles, died at his home here last night after a long illness. Mr. Berry was 76 years old. He also served as mayor of Chester and collector of the port of Philadelphia. He was a candidate for governor on an independent ticket in 1910.

In 1910, as candidate of the Keystone party for governor, Mr. Berry came within 33,000 votes of defeating John K. Tenor, Republican candidate.

Communication

Spiritism.

Editor Miami Herald:

I wish to express my admiration of the position taken by Dr. Gray at the Baptist church last evening.

Would that every Christian man and woman in this country had heard that masterly attack upon an evil, which, like a great tidal wave, now threatens to engulf the whole civilized world and plunge it into destruction, 100,000 persons in Great Britain alone having become insane during the past year or two because of spiritism!

Permit me to say, however, that, having held almost identically the same views myself (i. e., that spiritism is demonism) for more than twenty years as the result of reading a booklet entitled "What Say the Scriptures About Spiritism?" written by the late Charles T. Russell, I feel that Dr. Gray's argument would have been infinitely more effective and convincing had he clearly defined the actual condition of the dead.

According to the word of God, "the dead knows not anything," Eccles. 9:5-6.

Again, speaking of the death of man, we read, "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that very day his thoughts perish," Psalms 146:3-4. Again, "There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave whither thou goest," Eccles. 9:10.

The foregoing are but a few of the numerous texts which clearly declare the fact that death is destruction of being, cessation of life.

It logically follows, therefore, that, since our friends who have died "know not anything" and their very thoughts have perished, any communication with them would be impossible.

The only hope of a future life after death lies in a resurrection from the dead, as St. Paul so positively declares. "If there be no resurrection of the dead then are all perished," First Cor., 15:13-18.

Jesus said: "The hour is coming in which those that are in the graves (not in heaven, purgatory or a "hell" of eternal torment, but in their graves —dead) shall hear His voice (the voice of the Son of God at His second advent) and come forth," John 5:28-29.

The "demon" that personated Samuel (the prophet was dead and could not come to Saul at the hitch of Endor's command) was "a lying spirit." He foretold that Saul and his sons would perish in battle the next day, whereas in fact one son, Ishbosheth, escaped and was made king of Israel (Second Sam., 2:8-10), and most Biblical scholars agree the battle did not occur until several days later.

Satan is "the father of lies," and he told his first recorded one in Eden, when he declared to Mother Eve, "Ye shall not surely die," Gen. 3:3-4.

Here is the origin of that false teaching of human immortality that man cannot die, whereas the Bible repeatedly declares, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die," Ezek., 18:4-20.

By means of spirit-mediums, rappings, materializations, so-called miracles of healing, etc., the Great Adversary has reiterated this colossal lie, has continued this baleful deception, to the end that he might overthrow all faith in the word of God, in the necessity for and efficacy of the death of Jesus as our ransom-price, and destroy if possible, our interest in the second advent of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, whose first work is the awakening of those who "sleep in the dust of the earth," Dan. 12:2; Job 7:21.

AMERICAN LEGION SUNDAY.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 15.—American Legion Sunday will be observed in thousands of churches throughout the United States as Washington's birthday, under programs mapped out by officials of the organization at national headquarters here.

In most cities the principal patriotic exercises will be in charge of local posts and held during the afternoon. A feature of these exercises will be the presentation to the next of kin of fallen American soldiers of certificates conveying the appreciation of France for the heroic sacrifice of America's dead.

Mrs. Hudson's Beautiful Paper On Jamestown Was Feature of Meeting of Everglades Chapter

Everglades chapter, D. A. R., met yesterday at the home of Mrs. George B. Romfh on Eighteenth street with Mrs. Romfh and Mrs. William Mark Brown hostesses. Mrs. Everest George Sewell, regent of the chapter, presided, and the meeting was opened with the usual salute to the flag and the American creed, given standing.

Interesting reports of committees were made and Miss Lilian McGahey, secretary, read an account of the state conference at Eustis, at which Mrs. Sewell was elected state regent.

Mrs. George B. Romfh, flag chairman, displayed one of the four flage to be presented to the Second street school. Mrs. William Mark Brown spoke of her visit to the historical room at St. Augustine, where many interesting relics were displayed. Mrs. G. C. Frissell, state chairman of historic relics, displayed a small leather-bound book published in 1807 entitled "Wisdom for Young Children" and a sampler dated 1829, contributed to the D. A. R. national collection of relics by Mrs. Brady of Titusville. Mrs. Frissell made a strong appeal for other local contributions of historic relics and mentioned Mrs. Samuel Manlove's gift of colonial currency. As chairman of the patriotic educational committee Mrs. Frissell reported that she had visited the schools and announced the offering of prizes for the best essay reviewing American history suitable for the anniversary celebration of the landing of the Pilgrims.

Mrs. R. A. Shine reported on the meeting of Mercy Warren chapter D. A. R., and it was announced that members of this chapter will meet Wednesday at the Y. W. C. A. to be assigned their parts for the May Day celebration.

Mrs. Katherine B. Dungan sang two beautiful solos, "The Star" and "Because He Loved Her." Miss Olive Dungan accompanied her and she gave en encore.

The feature of the afternoon was Mrs. Frederick M. Hudson's beautiful paper on "Jamestown, the Cradle of American Liberty." Mrs. Hudson visited Jamestown last summer and she gave a charming picture of its historic ruins and monuments blending its romance and history very cleverly in her story of the first permanent English colony and the historic men and women of that time.

At the social hour following the meeting Mrs. Romfh served an ice with cakes, assisted by Mrs. Frank B. Shutts, Mrs. Crate D. Bowen and Mrs. Malcolm Matheson.

Those present were:

Mrs. Everest George Sewell, regent; Mrs. W. H. McIntyre, Mrs. N. M. Barney, Mrs. A. Hunter Bouldin, Mrs. William Mark Brown, Mrs. Crate D. Bowen, Mrs. John W. Claussen, Mrs. Cushing, Miss Foster, Mrs. Glenville C. Frissell, Mrs. Henry J. Egger, Mrs. L. D. Gates, Mrs. Jerome T. Gratigny, Mrs. Agnes Egger Head, Mrs. John E. Holland, Mrs. Harvey Jarrett, Mrs. Samuel Manlove, Mrs. Malcolm Matheson, Mrs. L. H. Culbertson, Mrs. R. B. McGahey, Miss Lilian McGahey, Mrs. Peters, Mrs. Powell, Mrs. Pugh, Mrs. George S. Reid, Mrs. Richard Shine, Mrs. Frank B. Stoneman, Mrs. A. A. Sturgis, Mrs. Charles Thompson, Mrs. T. A. Winfield, Mrs. Frank B. Shutts, Mrs. Crate D. Bowen, Mrs. John S. Benz, Miss Mary Woodman, Mrs. Williams, Mrs. W. L. Hill, Mrs. H. C. Babcock, Mrs. H. S. Wright, Mrs. J. Meeks, Mrs. J. E. Botsford, Mrs. A. M. Root, Mrs. Cummings, Mrs. Wallace Culbertson, Miss Bell, Miss Norine Hillman, Mrs. A. M. Root, Mrs. C. S. Lafferty, Mrs. Ellen C. Richards, Mrs. R. B. Fisher, Mrs. H. M. Reynolds, Miss Ida Duncan, Miss Nannie W. Guthrie, Mrs. Katherine B. Dungan, Miss Olive Dungan, Miss Leach.

MRS. SOUTHWICK TODAY AT WOMAN'S CLUB.

There will be no meeting of the Woman's Club today on account of the Current Events Department's program this evenuing. The meeting of the executive board is also to be dispensed with this week.

Mrs. Southwick's reading, given for the benefit of the Royal Palm State Park fund, will be the attraction this afternoon in the club auditorium. Mrs. Southwick will read "The Servant in the House" and Mr. H. P. Chelius will give a program of music, his numbers being "Twilight" and "Valse Caprice," his original compositions, a Chopin's nocturne and a Lizet raphsodie.

MISS FLORENCE MOORE IS ENTERTAINED.

Miss Florence Moore who is a guest of Mrs. W. A. Hill, was complimented with a luncheon Friday at the Douglas Tea Room by Mrs. J. A. Hazeltine who afterward took her friends to the Hippodrome theater.

Dr. Lovina Smith also entertained at dinner last evening at the Royal Palm hotel for Miss Moore. Mrs. Hill was another guest.

BENEFIT DANCE AT MILLS-SAN CARLOS.

A benefit dance will be given Thursday night at the Mills-San Carlos hotel under the management of Mrs. Isidor Cohen and her committee of workers, and all friends are cordially invited to be present.

HI-Y CARNIVAL.

All high school is astir with preparations for the carnival to be given by the Hi-Y girls at the Y. W. C. A. on Saturday. The lawn and spacious veranda will be the scene of much fun and frolic as the reproduction of a regular Mardi Gras takes place. The public is invited to come and make merry with the high school folks.

Hotel Plaza has available choice rooms with bath, from $3.00 to $5.00. We have the finest dining room in Miami. Service a la carte.—adv.

THE L. Ps. HOLD SUCCESSFUL BEACH LUNCH.

After putting on the usual line of games, circus stunts and water sports at Hardie's casino, the tables were spread with places for forty odd hungry lads. When everything was off clean, a number of speeches were made by the officers of the club and some of the members. Everybody was happy and sober, and the members are looking forward to another such occasion to happen again in the near future.

The L. P. Club is a new organization of Miami's young men and a few of the old, young men who are interested in good sports and a jolly time. They have a membership of close to the hundred mark and are growing just like Miami.

Mesdames Hendricks, Campbell and Von Seutter and Miss Hendricks waited on the boys and the whole success of the lunch is due to their excellent service and system.

MISS ALEXANDER APPEARS ON LYCEUM COURSE.

The third number of the Y. W. C. A. lyceum course will be given Friday night, March 26, at the Central school auditorium. This will be Miss Clara Alexander, impersonator of negro songs and stories. Any person holding season tickets, who is dissatisfied because of the failure of the association to secure from the lyceum bureau the numbers originally announced, May Peterson and William Howard Taft, may cash in his ticket at the Y. W. C. A. at the rate of $1.25 for each of these two numbers. A fourth number is to be given, the single admission for which will exceed $2.50 but the association is not yet ready to announce what and when this attraction will be. A world-famous star will be brought here, it is expected.

Miss Alexander, who appears on Friday night, is considered the best in her line now appearing before the public. She is a southern woman, brought up in the spirit of the old south, and with rare talents for mimicry and impersonation and made an early hit with her tales of the darkies. She went to England where she spent many years and made a great success. Since returning to America she has appeared before many organizations and is a universal favorite. Her personality is particularly pleasing, her voice, one of those rare flexible and sympathetic ones, and her mind is keenly alive. It is believed that this entertainment will prove one of the most popular of the season.

SUNSHINE CIRCLE HAS INTERESTING MEETING.

Sunshine Circle of Biscayne Bay chapter, O. E. S., held a meeting yesterday afternoon at Masonic hall which was largely attended, and was very enjoyable to the members.

Plans were made for a food sale to be held Saturday. A gratifying report was also made of the last sale of foods, and the ladies busied themselves making aprons for the bazaar which will be held in the near future.

The hostesses were Mrs. H. S. Stearns and Mrs. Ida Newberry, and those present included Mrs. W. J. Bevil, Mrs. C. S. Werner, Mrs. H. D. Bollinger, Mrs. J. H. Sculthorpe, Mrs. F. E. Mank, Mrs. F. A. MRS. W. L. DOUGLAS HOSTESS YESTERDAY AT LUNCHEON.

Mrs. William L. Douglas of Brookline and Boston gave a beautiful luncheon yesterday in the grill at the Royal Palm. Mrs. Douglas chose pink for her luncheon and had a basket of exquisite pink radiance roses with plumossa fern for her center decoration. The nut holders were dainty pink flower cups and the little cakes were covered with pink icing. The place cards were quaint old-fashioned girls with their aprons filled with roses. For favors Mrs. Douglas gave corsages of sweet peas.

The guests were Mrs. Theodore M. Leonard, Mrs. Harrison B. Moore, Mrs. Daniel L. Cady, Mrs. Jonathan Moore, Miss Estelle Christie, and Mrs. Ila A. Watkins of New York; Mrs. Maximilian F. Bonzano of Philadelphia; Mrs. Charles H. Osgood of Norwick, Conn.; Mrs. Francis A. Fowler of Chicago; Mrs. Huston Wyeth and Mrs. W. W. Wheeler of St. Joseph, Mo.; Mrs. Robert S. FEELING BLUE ALL THE TIME

Before Taking Cardui, This Georgia Lady Suffered Until She Would Have to Sit Down to Do House-Work. Was Dizzy and Weak.

Dalton, Ga.—Mrs. V. A. Burnett, of Route 6, says: "I got down with my back and sides, not able to do my work. I suffered a great deal. I had a depressed, blue feeling all the time.

"I couldn't rest at night. I was nervous. I would be dizzy and just no account at all.

"I would have to sit down while trying to do the housework. It seemed I couldn't get my breath. I was afraid I would get past going altogether.

"I heard of Cardui and began using it. I could see after a half bottle it was helping me, so I kept it up . . . and soon I was like a new person.

"I knew Cardui did the work, for no other medicine I took ever helped me as it did. I certainly can recommend . . . Cardui.

This well-known medicine, which Mrs. Burnett says helped her, is a mild, medicinal, purely vegetable tonic, for over 40 years used by thousands of women, with similar results to those which this Georgia lady obtained.

Cardui should help you, too. Try it.—adv.

LOVELY LACES SHOWN AT HUTTO AND HUTTO'S.

Miss Elizabeth O'Sullivan, of London, is showing a stock of exquisite Carrickmacross and Limerick laces at Hutto and Hutto's shop on Avenue B. Miss O'Sullivan is an expert on laces and had her own shop in London.

Among the pieces shown here yesterday was a bride's veil in lily of the valley pattern. This piece is in the filmy Carrickmacross, a very full size and of exquisite quality, lovely enough to pass down as an heirloom—lovely enough to make any woman want to be a bride just to wear it.

There are pieces for the table, runners and centerpieces, and overdresses, blouses and many collars and cuff sets.

She is also showing a beautiful collection of Irish crochet. One particularly handsome piece is a linen and lace lunch cloth in Irish crochet. The center is of fine linen with a very wide lace edge.

Personal Mention

Mr. A. P. Morrow, wife, daughter and Miss Baker of Elmira, N. Y., will leave Wednesday night for home. They spent four weeks at Lemon City and greatly enjoyed Miami and its wonderful attractions. Mr. Morrow is connected with the Willys-Overland company and president of the Willys-Overland-Morrow Company at Elmira. This is his first visit to Miami, but feels quite sure he will return next fall for the winter.

Miss Kathryn Holt of Staunton, Va., is visiting Miss Helen Lummus and Mrs. J. N. Lummus at their home, "Salubrity," Miami Beach.

Mrs. Elmer Norris and children have returned to their home at Montgomery, Alabama, after spending the season in Miami with Mrs. Norris' parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Mark Brown. Mr. and Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Henry J. Egger accompanied Mrs. Norris to Jacksonville, making the trip by motor. Mrs. Egger visited in St. Augustine several days while Mr. and Mrs. Brown were in Jacksonville.

It is claimed that the term "hyphenated Americans" dates back prior to the year 1876, when John Boyle O'Reilly applied it to a remnant of the old-time toryism who were objecting to the nation-wide celebrations which took place that year.

Mr. William J. Matheson Entertained At Mashta For Miss McCormick and Fiance

Mr. William J. Matheson entertained Thursday evening at Mashta, his beautiful home on Key Biscayne with a costume dance and buffet supper in honor of Miss Reubenia McCormick and Mr. Valentine Hollingsworth of Boston, whose marriage will take place this afternoon at 5 o'clock at St. Stephen's church, Coconut Grove.

Guests were carried to Key Biscayne on Mr. Matheson's yacht Calabash, Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James' yacht, Lanai and Mr. John Bindley's Surpass.

Mr. Matheson's guests came in Eastern costume and the atmosphere of the East was dominant from the moment the veiled figures left the yachts and were ushered by salaaming lackeys through the great doorways of Mashta where the lights burned dimly from great wrought copper lanterns. There was brilliant moonlight and Mashta, built on a point commands entrancing views of the sea. During the evening when a Paul Jones was danced, the dancers followed their leader through the great rooms and loggias, under the pergolas and into the moonlit garden by the sea.

Mr. Matheson wore a gorgous burnous of Damascus cloth heavily woven with gold sunburst about the shoulders. Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James made an impressive Egyptian princess with slave bearing her train. She wore a scarab on her forehead and her robes were of blue cloth of gold brocaded in gold. Miss McCormick wore an evening gown of white irridescents and Mr. Hollingsworth was in Eastern costume, turbaned like a Moslem.

Mr. Matheson's dance was one of a series of large parties given for Miss McCormick and Mr. Hollingsworth and was an unusually beautiful affair.

MRS. CARL FISHER WILL SUMMER IN JAPAN.

Mrs. Carl Graham Fisher will leave on the tenth for Indianapolis, Ind., where she will spend a few days before going to San Francisco to sail on April 27 for Japan. Miss Merle Von Hagen, who has been her house guest during the season, will accompany Mrs. Fisher, who expects to be abroad until some time in August. Mrs. Fisher and Miss Von Hagen will sail on the Siberia Maru.

Mr. Fisher expects to go soon with a party of friends, which will include John Oliver La Gorce, of the National Geographic Magazine, J. A. Allison of Indianapolis; Louis Mowbray, C. W. Beck of Philadelphia and Louis Fuertes, to Andros Island in the Bahama group, to hunt flamingos. Mr. Fuertes is a scientist who has made a special study of flamingos and has written a book on them. The object of the trip will be to study these beautiful birds in their native environment and make pictures of them. Their trip is of special interest in Miami because of the building of the splendid hotel by Mr. Fisher and Mr. Allison and their associates, which will bear the name Flamingo.

At the Pussy Willow Yarn Shop Salisbury's Silverwool and Silverwool Shetland, Pussy Willow, Brushed Wool, and the improved Germantown, all can be had in many beautiful new shades. In the Mank theater building, 307 Tenth St.—adv.

CINCINNATI NATIONALS ENTERTAIN TONIGHT.

The Cincinnati Nationals will entertain their friends tonight with a dance at the San Carlos Hotel. The Reds will leave Sunday for the north and are giving the dance as a farewell courtesy to their Miami friends.

The Pussy Willow Yarn Shoppe will close March 31st for the season. Yarns will still be carried by Ye Wee Shoppe.—adv.

MR. AND MRS. KREBS HOSTS AT DINNER PARTY.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Krebs, of Wilmington, Del., entertained last night at dinner at the Royal Palm. Pink gladiolii were used for the table decoration and the favors were bunches of violets.

Their guests were Mr. and Mrs. A. Sonnir Krebs, Mrs. Carolyn P. Snyder and Mrs. Beach.

THE SWEET BRIAR ROSE.

A dainty little booklet of religious verse entitled "The Sweet Briar Rose" has just been published in Miami by Mrs. Gertrude W. Seibert. It includes about fifty inspirational poems of the kind that help and uplift. The title poem "The Sweet Briar Rose" has been extensively published and is known through the English speaking world. Mrs. Seibert is a productive writer along religious lines. This little volume was issued at the request of friends who desire a collection of her poems. The following little verse is suggestive of the others:

Keep Sweet.

Soul, let nothing make thee fretful,
Nothing bitter or regretful,
Heart, keep sweet, keep sweet!
And all day long
E'en from the moment of thy waking,
Let a song
Keep welling from a heart that's breaking,
Soul, keep sweet, keep sweet!

Do not forget before you leave to order The Herald sent to your summer address. You will want Miami news, especially if you are a property owner here. Telephone 1100 or drop into the office and tell us when to make the change.—adv.

LAST NIGHT AT URMEY.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Gardner entertained at dinner last night at the Urmey hotel, where the regular dinner dance was held. Mr. and Mrs. Gardner had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Goodman, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Bebinger, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Hill.

Miss N. Hunter also entertained last night at the Urmey at dinner, her guests being Miss Clinger, Miss La Frances, Mrs. Gregory and Mr. Hunter.

Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Graves entertained Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hinch of Vancouver, B. C., Miss Mary Boslen, Miss S. Boslen, Mr. Newbon Boslen of Carlisle, Pennsylvania.

WILL GIVE FAREWELL DANCE WEDNESDAY.

Owing to repeated requests by a great many Miamians for a farewell dance, the Hotel McAllister orchestra has made arrangements to give a dance Wednesday, March 31st, at the Stanley Studio, avenue C and Twelfth street. This orchestra, under the direction of Prof. A. B. Wilson of Jacksonville, has enjoyed tremendous popularity, not only among the guests of that hotel but with everyone who has heard it this season, and this event will be looked forward to by many of the dancing set.

HIGH SCHOOL CARNIVAL.

The girls of the Hi-Y Club of Miami high school extend a most cordial invitation to everyone to attend the carnival given by them this evening.

The entertainment will begin quite early in the evening, and on the cool lawn and spacious verandas will be all the games and attractions that make a real carnival so interesting. Some of the features of the evening are the winsome dancing doll, who will undoubtedly charm her audiences by her unusual grace; a chorus of Hawaiian girls with their dreamy music, a magic well, wherein one may peer to read his fortune; yowling wild animals of Africa, a dime museum containing many startling freaks; a wise and witty fortune telling palmist; and a wonderfully well trained cat that talks through a Ouija board.

Many clever games will be in progress all evening and one should not miss the opportunity to ride the bug. Popcorn, peanuts, ice cream cones, orangeade and all the frills of a real carnival will be on sale. If you want some of that delicious home-made candy, you must come early.

CURRENT EVENTS TO MEET SATURDAY.

There will be a meeting of the Current Events department of the Woman's Club Saturday afternoon at the club house at 3 o'clock.

Miss Mary Gordon Thom, of Baltimore, Md., arrived yesterday and is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Munroe. She will be maid of honor at the wedding of Miss McCormick and Valentine Hollingsworth tonight.

That Black-Draught Is Excellent for Stomach and Liver Disorders, Hence Its Great Popularity—Mississippi Planter's Endorsement

Houston, Miss.—Mr. J. A. Trenor, a well-known planter of this place, recently related his experience in using Thedford's Black Draught. "I don't believe there is a better liver medicine made," said Mr. Trenor. "I use it for headache, stomach disorders and torpid liver.

"It is not bad to take, does not leave a constipated condition, as so many of the liver pills and medicines do. It does its work and leaves you feeling like a new person."

Thousands of others have found Black-Draught as helpful as Mr. Trenor describes, and a valuable remedy for derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels. It is purely vegetable, having an active effect upon the bowels, gently stimulating the liver, and helping to increase the flow of bile.

Black-Draught has been found to assist in the digestion of food, and relieves constipation in a prompt and normal way.

On account of Black-Draught's long-proved merit and immense popularity, many imitations are being offered for sale. For your own satisfaction it will pay you to insist upon the genuine, and be sure the package bears the name "Thedford's Black-Draught."

At your druggist's— ready for instant use—full directions in package. —adv.

MISS ALEXANDER GIVES Y. W. C. A. LYCEUM PROGRAM.

The third number in the Y. W. C. A. Lyceum course which was begun last night at Central School auditorium, while different from the original schedule, was considered one of the most thoroughly enjoyed entertainments ever given in Miami.

Miss Clara Alexander, the talented southern girl who has cultivated her wonderful gift for portraying the human interest side of the negro of the "Old South" enabling her to give pleasure to thousands of people both in this country and in Europe, gave the entire program with the exception of the violin solo by Maurice N. Karp. Seldom, if ever, have Miamians had an opportunity to enjoy such a feast of fascinating southern melodies, gems of negro dialect and clever short stories, as were offered last night by Miss Alexander in her own graceful way.

Her program opened with a little song, "Push Along," in which she was accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Frederick M. Hudson. From that Miss Alexander passed quickly on to other numbers equally as delightful as the first, and her program was varied throughout, according to her mood, which brought her in close contact with her attentive audience through her original and altogether pleasing personality. Perhaps the most highly appreciated numbers on her program were the poems of Paul Lawrence Dunbar to whom she paid loving tribute, and did full justice to the southern poet. She gave "My Sweet Brown Gal," and "The Spring Wooing," with a feeling of sympathy which completely won the hearts of her listeners. Then followed a clever little song, "Why Adam Sinned," and touches of local color were spontaneously added by this charming visitor which were both witty and accurate.

Harking back to the days when she entertained at the various camps for the soldiers, Miss Alexander gave one of Robert W. Service's gems from his "Rhymes Of A Red Cross Man," called "Young Fellow My Lad." She preceded this number with a little explanation as to why she desired to include it in her program, saying that out of all her repertoire, this piece had been chosen by the president of the Federation of Women's Clubs in New York, as the one offering which should always be included in Miss Alexander's entertainments. A number of friends of Miss Alexander in the audience requested her to give "All Night Long" which she has made popular in the few days she has been in Miami, and it was cordially received. After a group of delightful short humorous stories, the program was closed with an interesting narrative of racing days in the old south in which Miss Alexander's voice and mannerisms were at their best in portraying a game well loved on the old plantations.

Mr. Karp's violin number was "Romance," by Wieniawski, which was well received and demanded an encore. Mrs. Hudson was his accompanist.

The Packard Piano has won a unique position in the world of music, by rendering a service, in excess of that required or expected.

Communication

Precept and Practice.

Miami, Fla, March 26, 1920.
Editor Miami Herald:

In one of Gypsy "Pat" Smith's talks or sermons here in Miami, he made the statement, as reported in your paper, "that William Randolph Hearst should be locked over a bonfire." Now, I'm not taking up the cudgels for Mr. Hearst, he can do that in his own vigorous way, but I am seeking to find the Christianity in that remark that Mr. Smith calls for a little later in his talk when he hays that Christ dying on the cross said, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." No doubt Mr. Hearst has made many enemies, Gypsy Smith among them, but why does not the latter practice the precept he preaches?

Then, again we read that at the Rotary Club meeting Gypsy Smith seemed to go out of his way in order to make an attack on the Irish people and on their leader, DeValera. And I am sincerely glad that Senator Reed was there and was able to give a few points and show how he stood on the Irish question. But, again, where does the Christian likeness come in that the Gypsy is advocating for others to practice? Then, once more, in one of his talks, he revamps that old Rainbow division yarn, of one of the Americans of that division telling the Irishman why it was called that; and the Irishman replying: "Oh yes, the rainbow comes out when the storm is all over."

I don't know how his hearers received that story, but there should have been some good Americans there who should have resented that slur on our gallant boys who saved the day for England and Gypsy "Pat" Smith, before the storm was over.

FRANCIS J. REILLY.

Already Here.

Miami, Fla., March 25, 1920.
Editor Miami Herald:

Being an ardent advocate of truth and justice, I feel, with your permission, that I should not let pass without comment and correction the statement of Gypsy Pat Smith, as quoted in your issue of yesterday, to the effect that "One Pastor Russell violated the rules of the scriptures when he said Christ would come in 1923."

Having been a close and constant student of Pastor Russell's writings for the past 25 years, I believe I know whereof I speak when I declare that Pastor Russell never said Christ would come in 1923, nor did he ever preach that Christ would come at any other time, because he knew from his study of the Bible that Christ had come before he began to preach, indeed the fact of his having discerned the presence of the Lord at His second advent was the cause of Pastor Russell's leaving commercial life to enter religious work. In proof of this statement, notice the title of his magazine, first published in 1879, was "Zion's Watch Tower and Herald of Christ's Presence."

It may seem a startling announcement that Christ has come, but to those who will investigate, there are at least 15 time-proofs and more than 85 fulfilled prophecies, which demonstrate beyond a doubt that the second advent occurred in 1874.

Time and space are too limited to explain the above in detail, but the key to the situation lies in the correct translation of the Greek word "parousia," mistranslated "coming," as of one on the way, while the true significance is that of "presence," as of one already here. All the signs of the present day are proofs that the Lord has already come, as a spirit being, unseen except by the eye of faith, which discerns Him in that the "scriptures are fulfilled." We have more than 10 times as many proofs of the Lord's second presence now as the Jews had of His presence among them at His first advent. But in order to understand these scriptures we must have clear ideas of the manner and object of the Lord's return.

I will be very pleased to furnish the above proofs to any Bible students who may be interested.

Shock-Absorbers For False Teeth

Cleveland, O., Oct. 3.—Non-Skid Shock Absorbers for false teeth are the latest thing. Heretofore shock absorbers, non-skid tires, rubber heels, and such-like things have supposedly been limited in their application but now a chemical concern in Cleveland is advertising a powder which sprinkled upon "sore teeth" is supposed to form a smooth cushion, hold them firmly in place, and give a "non-skid" effect while they romp over the toughest roasting ears of corn and chew the stickiest candy.

One who has lost his natural teeth can supply himself with this antiseptic, adhesive comfort powder—Corega—at a drug store, and proceed to laugh and sneeze, crack nuts and do other hazardous things without risk of shaking his prized false teeth from their upper and lower berths.—adv.

SUFFRAGE LEAGUE OUTLINES WEEK OF PROGRAMS BEGINNING APRIL 13

Announcement was made at yesterday afternoon's meeting of the Dade County Equal Suffrage league of progress made on the program to be carried out locally during the observance of "citizenship week," beginning April 13. Mrs. Frank Baker, chairman of the program committee, outlined the following program:

Monday afternoon: Mrs. C. H. Ward, subject, "[illegible]"; Mr. [illegible] Haven, subject, "Citizenship, a Patriotic Duty."

Tuesday evening: L. A. McDougall and perhaps a speaker from Chicago. Mrs. Ethel Rice will read.

Wednesday afternoon: Mayor W. P. Smith, subject, "The Needs of the City and the Influence of the Woman's Vote."

Thursday evening: Senator W. L. Hughlett. The senator will be allowed to choose his own subject but will be asked about the formation of a republican party, and the operation of two parties in Florida. On this evening Mrs. Ralph Polk will probably sing her suffrage song which she is writing for the occasion.

Friday afternoon: Ieman B. Walker, subject, "How Can Woman's Vote Become a Power?" M. Walker will conduct a questionnaire after his talk.

Saturday afternoon: Mrs. D. A. McDougall, democratic delegate from Oklahoma to the national convention in California.

Mrs. Ira Sproule-Baker will also assist in a musical way, although she has not chosen any particular afternoon or evening for her appearance. Mrs. Sproule-Baker is another musician who will present an original suffrage song, not yet published. Mrs. Rice, who comes from Chicago, is not only a reader of note but is well known for her club work, although she did not organize, as The Metropolis was wrongly informed, the Chicago Woman's Club. It was the Hamilton Park Woman's Club, which this winter visitor organized and she was its first president. The club has a membership of 500 and a waiting list of practically the same number.

All of the programs for the week of April 12 will be held in the Woman's Club building and as they are arranged for an educational purpose, they will naturally be open to the public and everyone who desires to attend is urged to do so. The attendance of women is especially desired. Other speakers, who have not yet been heard from, will likely appear on the programs.

THREE ANNUAL ELECTIONS

All guilds of Trinity Episcopal church have announced elections for this week, beginning with St. Catherine's guild which will meet at 8 o'clock tonight in the parish house to dispose of annual business.

The annual meeting and election of Trinity Guild will follow at 3 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon and St. Margaret's Guild [illegible] on Friday night for the same purpose.

E. J. Stephenson is being heartily [illegible] by [illegible] friends since his [illegible] return to Miami. Mr. Stephenson and family, consisting of Mrs. Stephenson, Miss Vera Mae Stephenson and [illegible] Stephenson, left last year for Chicago and [illegible] is only a business one, but he is so enthusiastic over the year's change in Miami that he is seriously thinking of bringing his family here to make their permanent home.

Miss Sadie Hick and Miss Pattie Monroe have returned to Washington, D. C., after a few weeks' delightful visit here with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hick and [illegible] Mrs. A. Leigh Monroe. They are working for the government in that city, where they went more than a year ago.

Following [illegible] of the Gralynn [illegible] H. H. [illegible] has left for Stamford, Conn., on a business trip to [illegible] hotel, in which he is the owner and manager. Mr. Mase expects to return here sometime this month to finish up business matters.

EASTER MONDAY BALL

A most successful venture in entertaining was the ball at which the Knights of Columbus entertained their friends last night at the Mills-San Carlos hotel, where they were assisted by the hotel management and the Daughters of Isabella. The Knights have a reputation as cordial hosts and this reputation they sustained in their Easter Monday hop.

For those who did not care to dance games of 500 were arranged and as a result Miss Doll, Mrs. G. L. Haddock, Mrs. L. A. C. Long and G. M. Joyce were prize winners.

Upwards of 60 couples were present in the palm room, where dancing was indulged in, while about 40 people played cards. Punch was served during the evening by the hostesses. The reception committee was composed of the following: Miss May Kurrus, Miss Frances Lacy, Mrs. Gus A. Mills, Mrs. J. J. Quinn, Mrs. J. D. Rooney, Mrs. Mary Zapf, Dr. A. F. Kasper, D. A. MacDougall, J. J. Fitzgibbon, F. W. Gould, H. F. Hazard, J. H. Hourihan, Walter G. Jester, J. J. O'Connell, Warner King and J. A. Steinhart.

LARKINS CLUB IS GUEST

Mrs. P. G. Dusenberry will open her beautiful home tomorrow afternoon for the Woman's Club of Larkins, which will be the guest, this lively club being known for its worth-while programs and its exceptional parties.

The year book for 1920-21 shows many lively things planned for the future. The year opened with the installation of officers in February, the officers and executive board including: Mrs. John Opsahl, president; Mrs. D. J. Reid, first vice president; Mrs. M. E. Dorn, second vice president; Mrs. John Myers, recording secretary; Mrs. R. W. [illegible], corresponding secretary; Mrs. E. M. Jordan, treasurer; Mrs. G. C. [illegible], librarian; Mrs. Sadie H[illegible], and Mrs. Jordan and Mrs. C. H. Wheeler, directors.

The club [illegible] at the Dade county fair, and has [illegible] under Mrs. C. H. Wheeler, Mrs. D. J. Reid and Mrs. R. S. Thompson and Mrs. R. P. McAdams. In June "[illegible]" will be presented under Mrs. M. E. Gibbons and the club picnic will come in July. Mrs. John Myers will [illegible] "Woman's Contribution to Civilization" and in September "Authors" will be studied and a book shower will form a part of this program with Mrs. G. [illegible] Franklin in charge. There will be a Hallowe'en party planned by Mrs. H. W. Dorn and a Thanksgiving program by Mrs. J. L. Bailey. In December will come Christmas carols and greetings and in January will come a final program on "Americanization" by Mrs. Dorn.

"Y" RECREATION PLANNED.

An organization with the sole purpose of providing recreation for employed women and girls in the city was perfected last night under the direction of the recently appointed Miami Y. W. C. A. recreation secretary, Miss Frances Perry.

Miss Laura Cushman was elected president of the organization, and Miss Lila M. Neuenschwander was elected secretary and treasurer. The following committees were appointed: From the Burdine & Quarterman store, Miss Neuenschwander and Miss Annie J. Jennings; from the Burdine's Sons' store, Miss Terry and Miss Ruth Thieme; from Foster's store, Mrs. Bertha Cormack, and from the Y. W. C. A., Miss Dolly Brun, Miss Corine Beck and Miss Louise Batt. These committees will plan an entertainment or program for the next general meeting, which will be held in two weeks. A moonlight boat ride was planned for tomorrow night.

It is the plan of Miss Perry to organize classes in gymnasium, swimming, tennis and other sports in which the girls show an interest. The Y. W. C. A. considers itself fortunate in securing Miss Perry's services during the summer months and feels sure that the girls will be much benefited if they will take advantage of the recreation offered. Miss Perry is a graduate of the Posse Normal School of Gymnastics of Boston and during the war served at Lakewood, N. J., and at Staten Island, N. Y.

PREPARING FOR BAZAAR

When the Pythian Sisters' Needlecraft club met with Mrs. William Dunworth in her pretty new bungalow at Thirteenth street and Avenue F, last Thursday, the members took up work for the big bazaar planned for next fall. Mrs. Frank Baker, president, believes in preparedness and so next week when the members meet with Mrs. George Lane, 1602 Avenue I, they will continue this work.

Joining the local members at Mrs. Dunworth's home were: Mrs. A. Adams, Mrs. Minnie Raymer and Mrs. L. Forney of Iowa.

The local members besides Mrs. Dunworth, Mrs. Baker and Mrs. Lane were: Mrs. George Okell, Mrs. A. J. Cleary, Mrs. Lucy Schacht, Mrs. Jenkins, Mrs. Albert Routledge, Mrs. Horace Scott and Miss Weams.

THREE SPECIAL PARTIES PLANNED MIAMI BEACH CASINO THIS WEEK

This week at Miami Beach casino (the closing one for the year) will be marked by at least three special parties, which have already been announced in addition to the usual dances. First on Wednesday afternoon the Misses Kathryn and Irene Stafford, hostesses at the casino, will entertain the children of their dancing classes at a party. Wednesday night there will be a benefit dance for Trinity Guild of Trinity Episcopal church, Circle 2 of that guild having arranged for this. On Friday night the Pan-Hellenic association of Miami will entertain with a benefit dance.

On Saturday at noon two of Miss Stafford's pupils gave an impromptu exhibition of a waltz, Jane Oates and Frederick Bannerot, who were lunching with Miss Stafford, putting on the dance much to the delight of the other casino guests. Five couples on Wednesday afternoon will give this same lovely dance as part of the fun at the party.

There was the usual crowd on the beach not only at the noon-tide bathing hour, but all during Saturday afternoon as well, some preferring the afternoon because the rays of the sinking sun are less liable to cause sunburn. One man was overheard telling another much satisfaction that "the bath house will remain open all summer."

Three boyish figures noticeable on the beach were the three young sons of Mr. and Mrs. T. O. Wilson, and Gaines, the eldest, was especially admired for his clever work in balancing a canoe in the rough surf. Later the boys enjoyed luncheon in the casino and invited Miss Nina Bass to join them.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. A. Stewart of Pittsburgh chaperoned the Misses Helen and Elizabeth Allen, Tom Smallman of Canada and F. Byron-Kuhn, the group enjoying luncheon together.

Among those who enjoyed an afternoon dip were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Mark Swift, who were entertained at dinner at the Hotel Breakers by Miss M. A. Dewey and Miss M. J. Dewey, visitors from Canton, Ill., and relatives of Mrs. Swift.

One of the interesting bits of news at the Hotel Breakers is that concerning Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Fulton, who spent a week in Havana recently. Mr. and Mrs. Fulton left Havana in an Aero Limited plane at 1:30 o'clock on Saturday and landed in front of the Breakers hotel at 6:30 o'clock the same afternoon.

MISS HARDEE, HONORED GUEST

One of the most popular visitors in Miami is Miss Lorene Hardee of Tampa, who is the charming house guest of Miss Ada May Tatum and who since her arrival here has figured centrally at many social functions where she has won large numbers of friends with her sweet personality.

On Friday night, Mr. and Mrs. Smiley Tatum honored her with a dancing party at their lovely home, 1815 Twelfth street, and on Thursday afternoon Miss Hardee shared honors at the Tatum home with Mrs. Tatum's sister, Mrs. George Hayes, Mrs. Dixie Gore, and Mrs. Julian Frix, when Mrs. Tatum entertained about 50 of her friends.

Mrs. Hayes's delightful visit here with Mrs. Tatum came to a close yesterday when she left for her home in Denver, Colo.

HUMANE DRIVE NOT OVER

Failing to secure the $1,000 needed to carry on the work of the Miami Humane society during the campaign last week and the tag day Saturday, Mrs. A. J. Myers announced today that she will continue her campaign until the desired sum is raised. About $500 has already been collected. Mrs. Hanson Brock and a few others assisted with the campaign on Saturday.

Anyone desiring to assist Mrs. Myers by either donating time or money to the cause is asked to communicate with her.

"SWEET-BRIER ROSE."

Miami has produced another book. This time it is a book of verses, "The Sweet-Brier Rose and Other Poems," by Mrs. G. W. Seibert, a regular winter visitor in Miami. The beautiful little volume, nine by six inches in size, has a double cover of heavy paper, the decoration on the front cover being embossed and bronzed, and to the Hefty press is due the credit for the book's first-class appearance.

"Those verses have done me more good than all the sermons I have ever heard." This is the remark someone was heard to make about Mrs. Seibert's poems, all of which, Mrs. Seibert declared, were inspirations which came to her after she had experienced some sorrow. The poems had been published separately from time to time, as she had written them, but it was not until she came to Miami this year that she decided to have them published in one volume and to have it done in Miami.

The frontispiece of the book is a snapshot of Mrs. Seibert standing beneath a Travelers' palm in the Royal Palm garden. Her friends regret that the picture of her is indistinct, but Mrs. Seibert always explains that it was only the palm tree's picture that she really cared to have in the book.

The poems show that the writer has a thorough knowledge of Biblical history and that she has many beautiful, happy thoughts. She wrote "The Sweet-Brier Rose" in 1909. The following three paragraphs about the rose are typical of her other poems:

"Ofttimes with loving tenderness
"Its soft green leaves I gently press
"In sweet caress.—

"A still more wondrous fragrance flows,
"The more my fingers firmly close,
"And crush the rose!

"Dear Lord, oh, let my life be so—
"Its perfume when the tempests blow,
"The sweeter flow."

Mrs. Seibert is a portrait painter as well as a writer of poetry.

PUBLIC PULSE.

Miami, Florida. April 26, 1920.

Editor The Miami Metropolis:

During the past season in Miami several speakers have from the platform and the pulpit uttered most disparaging remarks about the late Pastor Russell, and inasmuch as I have been for 26 years a close and constant student of his remarkable expositions of the Bible, and have personally known the man for more than 20 years, I feel that some one should defend him against the attacks of his traducers. It has been well said, "Speak no ill of the dead." Pastor Russell departed this life in October, 1916. He cannot reply to these attacks, therefore permit me to say a few words in his defense.

When a young man, 25 years of age, Pastor Russell called a meeting of all the clergymen of Pittsburgh and Allegheny, his home city, showed them scriptures which proved the second advent of the Lord occurred in 1874, and urged them to proclaim the message. They all came: they all heard; they all refused to believe or to proclaim the message of the hour. In the same year, 1877, he decided to retire from the commercial world, and devote his entire time, energy and fortune to the work which the Bible indicated to be a "harvest work" for the end of this gospel age. He decided to test the Lord's approval of his course by: (1) devoting his life to the cause; (2) expending his entire fortune in the work; (3) prohibiting collections at all his meetings; (4) depending wholly upon unsolicited contributions to carry on the work after his private means were exhausted.

The clergy have denied the right of Pastor Russell to preach the Gospel, because they claimed he was "not ordained." On this question, I quote his own words: "There are two ordinations proper. One is of God. One is of man. The ordination of God is the begetting of the Holy Spirit. If any are preaching without this ordination, they are doing something that they are not authorized to do. There comes, however, another special ordination of those who are called ministers of the Gospel, in which class I count myself. This is ordination by the church, and is recognized by all denominations everywhere. By some it is considered a mere form, by some it is performed with great ceremony, by others with less ceremony. But to our understanding, each congregation should have those whom it has chosen ordained in a Scriptural way—by the stretching forth of hands—by a vote. Whoever has not been ordained in these two ways is not an ordained minister of the Gospel in the Scriptural sense. First the Divine ordination is necessary; second, the earthly ordination is necessary. By the grace of God I have both of these."—The Watch Tower, 1915, page 358.

As to his doctrines, he claimed, and proved his claim by his publications, that his theology was that of the Lord and the Apostles,—"the faith once delivered unto the saints," before the Great Apostasy defiled the faith and brought into the church the false teachings of man-made creeds. The basis of all his teachings is that of the blood-atonement,—the redemption of the lost and sinful race of mankind through the sacrificial death of Jesus Christ as their Redeemer. He taught that God has never yet tried to convert the world, but has been selecting only special classes from among men during the Jewish and gospel ages, for the purpose of blessing, instructing and perfecting those of the world of mankind who will accept and obey the conditions laid down in the coming Millenial age, when the Kingdom of Heaven is set up, when "the saints shall judge the world and angels." (1 Cor. 6:2-3).

He was a most strenuous opponent of the hell-fire, eternal torment error, and the church's most invincible champion for the Word of God against the onslaughts of higher criticism, evolution, science (falsely so-called) and infidelity. People of all faiths, and no faith at all, flocked to his banner because he answered their questions and settled their doubts as no one else had ever done. His system of theology has harmonized the conflicting creeds of Christendom and settled with a stroke of the pen the contentions of theologians for centuries over the immortality of the soul, trinity, immaculate conception, etc., etc.

It is doubtful whether any other human being ever equalled the amount of work accomplished by Pastor Russell. Never physically strong, suffering constantly for more than fifty years with severe headaches, due to an accident in his youth, for twenty-five years distressed with hemmorrhoids so that he was unable to rest in even the easiest chair, yet in the past forty years he traveled 1,000,000 miles, delivered 30,000 sermons (at one time published weekly in 2,000 newspapers in this country and Europe), speaking usually for two and one-half hours, wrote over 50,000 pages of biblical expositions, frequently dictated 1,000 letters per month, managed every department of his world-wide evangelistic campaign, employing 700 speakers, personally superintended the compiling of "The Photo Drama of Creation," the most wonderful biblical moving-picture ever produced and shown absolutely free to 12 millions of people. His works have been translated into 35 languages and more of his books jrinted than any other publication in the world except the Bible and the Chinese Almanac.

During all his 40 years of preaching, Pastor Russell never took up a collection, yet his work never lacked for funds, because his satisfying and harmonious theology converted not only the heads and hearts but also the pocketbooks of his hearers.

For more than 35 years Pastor Russell preached that the greatest of world-wars would begin in the fall of 1914, and that it would be but "the beginning of sorrows." Had the people believed this prophet of God, this country would not have been caught unprepared for the conflict, but "as it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the days of the Son of Man."

Pastor Russell's life was a miracle of sacrifice, a consuming fire, he truly "laid down his life for the brethren." He never took a day's vacation in over 40 years, but spent the day and half the night in serving his God and "the sheep of His pasture." During the last eight days of his life he had appointments to preach in California, Kansas, Oklahoma, Nebraska and New York, and though for several days evidently dying from cystitis (the result of excessive travel and speaking), he refused to cancel any engagements and departed this life October 31, 1916, on a railway train, en route to his Kansas appointment.

At the age of 30 Pastor Russell had accumulated a fortune of about $30,000, but he died penniless, having used it all (as well as the funds voluntarily contributed to the cause), in the Master's service. He was beloved by all who truly knew him, not only for his works' sake but for his own true worth, and thousands upon thousands of prayers have daily ascended to the Throne of Heavenly Grace for this faithful servant of the Lord.

Probably no man ever lived who was so sadly misunderstood, misrepresented, reviled and persecuted by those who should have welcomed him as a leader in religious thought. But "The marytr of one generation is the saint of the next," and generations to come shall rise up and call him "the blessed of the Lord!" Pilate knew that "for envy they had delivered Him." Can it again be true that history repeats itself?"

Very respectfully,
GERTRUDE W. SEIBERT.

STOP HEADACHE AVOID DANGER

Doctors Advise Aspironal Elixir to Remove Cause as Well as Relieve the Pain Quicker. Absolutely Safe.

The medical profession is strongly opposed to the use of headache remedies that merely relieve the pain. They are warning the public that the cause of the headache should also be removed. That is why physicians and druggists are so delighted with the new Aspironal Elixir that is sold under the two-minute guarantee. They know Aspironal also removes the cause of bilious and sick headaches by gently acting on the liver, correcting biliousness and constipation and preventing the return of the headache next day.

The next time you have a headache go to your nearest drug store, hand the clerk half a dollar for a bottle of Aspironal and tell him to serve you two teaspoonfuls in a little water. With your watch in your hand count off two minutes and call for your money back, as per manufacturer's guarantee, if you can't feel your headache fading away within the time limit. Your druggist invites you to try Aspironal, so don't be bashful. Everybody is doing it. Same guarantee applies to colds, coughs and neuralgia.

MANY CASES OF RHEUMATISM-NOW

Says We Must Keep Feet Dry, Avoid Exposure and Eat Less Meat

Stay off the damp ground, avoid exposure, keep feet dry, eat less meat, drink lots of water and above all take a spoonful of salts occasionally to keep down uric acid.

Rheumatism is caused by poisonous toxin, called uric acid, which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine. The pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.—Adv.

UNFURNISHED HOUSES ARE AT A PREMIUM IN MIAMI

Realty Men Can't Get Listings—Few Furnished Dwellings to Had by Renters

In spite of the fact that six or [illegible] hundred residences have been built in Miami in the last year, Miami is entering upon the supposedly "slack" summer season with practically no houses for rent either furnished or unfurnished. The few furnished houses available are those offered by Miamians expecting to spend the summer in the north and who prefer to have someone in their houses instead of leaving them locked up.

"We rented our last unfurnished house yesterday," said Arthur Hollopeter of the realty firm of Stewart & Hollopeter, this morning. "We have a very limited supply of furnished houses. There is quite a lot of houses for sale, both furnished and unfurnished, but they are not being offered at bargain prices. No one is sacrificing on residences. In fact, most of them are asking neat profits."

Roy Morrison, of the firm of Morrison, Harwood & Jesse, said this morning that Miami has practically no unfurnished houses for rent. The vacant houses in Miami are new ones that are offered for sale and not rent, he said.

"Practically all the furnished houses we have are for rent only for the summer, not for the year around," said Mr. Morrison. They are mostly homes of Miamians who expect to be away all summer and are willing to let them out while they are gone."

Russelites Released, Friends Here Learn

J. F. Rutherford, president of the Watchtower Bible and Tract society, with seven other Bible students, all Russellites who were sentenced to 20 years imprisonment for publishing "The Finished Mystery," were released this morning when the case, which had been continued until today, was dismissed. News of their freedom was received here today by Mrs. G. W. Seibert from a friend, A. H. MacMillan, one of those on trial.

These eight Russellites were sentenced in July, 1918, to 20 years imprisonment, but through the efforts of the Bible students were released from the federal prison at Atlanta on bail in April, 1919. Their case came up for trial on April 7, and was continued until today.

Traffic Rules of West Mentioned for Miami

A few simple rules, uniformly adopted throughout the west and middle west, greatly relieved traffic congestion and facilitated driving in the cities, according to S. B. Sampson, member of the realty firm of Bridges & Sampson, who has just returned from a trip to the coast.

In the first place, everywhere is found the rule that the car approaching a corner from the driver's right has the right of way. In the second place, the use of the three-position signal by th driver ahead keps the driver behind completely informed as to the intention of driver ahead.

If the driver ahead wishes to turn to the right he holds his arm as nearly straight up as the top will permit. If he intends to turn to his left he holds his arm straight out. If he intends to stop, he holds his arm down.

"It is remarkable how much this simple system helps to make driving easier," said Mr. Sampson. "Miami would find it tremendously to its advantage to adopt this plan, I am sure."

BOYNTON

(Special to The Metropolis)

BOYNTON, May 6—The revival services being conducted here by the Rev. C. H. Summer are progressing in a most satisfactory way. There will be services in the tent every night this week beginning at 7:30 o'clock. The illustrated lecture given Saturday night at the church by the Rev. Summers, bearing on the missionary work of the church, was well attended and much appreciated.

Mrs. Ben Marie motored to West Palm Beach Wednesday morning, spending the day there with friends.

Mrs. James McKay, Mrs. Caroline McKay, Miss Grace McKay and Miss Helen Marie motored to West Palm Beach Wednesday afternoon.

Wednesday's meeting at the tent was attended by quite a number of Delray friends, including the Rev. and Mrs. Evans and Miss Mollie Munro.

Miss Sadie Murray has returned to her home here after spending a few weeks with her sister, Mrs. James Thompson of Coconut Grove.

Miss Gladys Ward and little sister Laura were the guests Saturday of Miss Maudie Pierce at her home in West Palm Beach.

Miss Flora Ball of West Palm Beach was the week-end guest of he. schoolmate, Miss Marjorie Coon, at her home here.

Mrs. W. Streeter and son, William Streeter, of Lakeland, left for their home in that place Saturday morning after a two weeks' visat tithe mate,-haveNUP two weeks' visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Shepard.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Marie entertained a number of friends at dinner Thursday evening, the guests including Mr. and Mrs. F. N. Smith and daughter Helen of Lake Worth, Miss Rachel Lyman of Lantana and Theodore Eefting of West Palm Beach.

Mrs. Charles Stilts and Mrs. Frank Webber shopped in West Palm Beach Saturday evening.

B. J. Hilliard of West Palm Beach was in town Sunday visiting relatives and greeting old friends.

Little Clayton Shepard is much improved from his recent illness.

Mrs. Norton and her mother, Mrs. Wheaton of Daytona, who are spending a few days in Lake Worth on business, accompanied by a party of friends, motored to Boynton Friday to call at the home of Mrs. James McKay.

A new garage is to be opened here by Fred Muster and A. Davis in the building just west of the tracks on Ocean avenue, owned by F. P. Harper. It was formerly occupied by J. R. Harper, who conducted a general merchandise business there. The place is now undergoing necessary repairs to make it suitable for the new business.

The picking and shipping of the tomato crop is progressing, prices are good and weather conditions are excellent so far. Unless something unexpected happens, the season will be fairly successful.

Mrs. C. A. Maull returned to Miami the first of the week after spending a few days at her home here. With her husband and children she expects to spend several weeks in the Magic City.

J. Cochran, who has spent the last several winters here and who is largely interested in real estate in Boynton, suffered a stroke of paralysis Saturday and was removed at once to the hospital in West Palm Beach. His friends are wishing him a speedy recovery.

Mrs. J. R. Harper of West Palm Beach spent Tuesday visiting her mother, Mrs. F. P. Harper, and her sister, Mrs. James McKay.

Mrs. Glenn Murray and children have returned to their home here after spending a couple of weeks in Miami with relatives and friends.

C. Martin was called to his former home in New Jersey by business the first of the week. He will return as soon as possible, having decided to make Boynton his home.

LINK BOARDS OF TRADE TO GET AID FOR TRAIL

Fort Myers Secretary Proposes Concerted Action Toward Federal and State Support

Through the establishment of a Tamiami Trail association, consisting of members from each board of trade between Tampa and Miami, the Fort Myers board of trade believes that federal and state aid could be secured for the completion of the cross-state highway and has written the Miami chamber of commerce, asking that a local delegate be appointed. According to the letter the Fort Myers organization, at a meeting a few days ago, adopted a resolution endorsing the formation of the Tamiami Trail association and suggested that every community along the route be represented by one delegate.

"The main object would be to secure federal and state aid at the earliest possible date for the completion and maintenance of the Tamiami Trail," writes Secretary Warde of the Fort Myers organization. The board of directors of the chamber of commerce will consider the suggestion at the next meeting.

She Can't Read and Will Be Sent aBck to Possibly Face Death

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, May 6—Because she could not read, Anna Sherbetdjian, a young Armenian woman at Ellis Island, was ordered deported back to Turkey where she may face death for her escape from a harem there to come to the United States to an unseen prospective bridegroom.

Hampirsoon Terekelyian, a wealthy Philadelphia merchant, appeared at the island to claim her as his bride, only to learn she could not enter the country. Harri Yazzmajian, a prosperous rug dealer of Cambridge, Mass., had arranged to have Anna come here to marry Terekelyian. Harri's wife had come from the same harem from which Anna had escaped, he said.

Rich Armenians are planning to appeal the case.

NEUTRALIZE ACIDS IN YOUR STOMACH

GET RID OF INDIGESTION

Few people realize the importance of keeping the stomach free from excessive hydrochloric acid. Yet Acid Stomach is the cause of nine-tenths of all stomach trouble. The food sours and ferments bringing on Gas, Heartburn, Bloating, Indigestion, and the stomach pains that every sufferer knows so well. Pepsin and artificial digestents are not needed. They give only temporary relief and often do great harm.

Neutralize or sweeten the stomach acids after eating with a glass of warm or hot Magnesia water. A teaspoonful, or four tablets of pure Bisurated Magnesia to a glass of water is all that is required. Get a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia from any reliable druggist and try this for a few weeks. Eat what you want and enjoy your meals.—Adv.

HOMESTEAD

(Special to The Metropolis).

HOMESTEAD, May 6.—Mrs. Lucy Warner Jordan went last Sunday to spend a quiet day sketching in the woods beyond Royal Palm State Park, but found plenty of excitement instead when her automobile containing her young son, Cyrus, and H. S. Cooper plunged into the canal. The brakes did not hold when Mr. Cooper was turning the car for her.

Fortunately both Cyrus and Mr. Cooper are good swimmers, and though the water is about 15 fet dep they soon reached safety. The car was taken out Monday and brought to Homestead for repairs.

A. E. Ballinger and family left Tuesday for Prescott, Mich., in their Ford car.

I. T. Pearson of the Farm Life school will teach four weeks at Florida City to finish the term.

Mrs. Bud Lyons of Pompano is visiting Mrs. Clinton Lyons.

Mrs. J. S. Shields was taken ill in Miami and has been unable to return to Homestead.

Mrs. Charles Loveland and son, Edward, left Monday night.

Miss Eula Ray entertained the Homestead teachers last Friday evening in honor of Miss Florence Pollard. Miss Pollard was given a beautiful salad bowl of lacquered wood in anticipation of her marriage which is soon to take place. Dainty souvenirs were prepared of hand-painted hearts on which each guest wrote a wish and a favorite recipe or a bit of advice.

Walking Delegates to Get a Wage Increase

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, May 6—Walking delegates of the unions comprising the New York Building Trades council, whose members recently received increases in pay, have had their wages boosted, too. They will receive a minimum weekly salary of $75, it was announced today, and unions which do not pay the new scale will be refused seats in the council.

Heretofore the walking delegate has received a salary fixed by each individual union, the amount usually not exceeding the wages paid to journeymen working at the trade.

Bible Thought for Today

FOR THE eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to shew himself strong in behalf of those whose heart is perfect toward him.—2 Chron. 16:9.

Our Customers

> "Never quarrel with your customers, especially your best customers, and don't get mixed up in anything that might lead to a quarrel. The United States Chamber of Commerce informs you that Uncle Sam has seven big outstanding customers. They bought from the United States in 1924 two thousand million dollars' worth of products. Such customers are worth keeping. Their names are Great Britain, Canada, Germany, Italy, France, Japan, China. The wise merchant keeps on good terms with customers, treats them all fairly and alike, avoids anything that might cause friction. Therefore, when Uncle Sam is invited to enter into any foolish League of Nations, or into any well packed world court, he should reply: 'No. Thank you, gentlemen. I stay on my side of the ocean, doing business politely and efficiently over my counter. I shall not mix up in anything that might cause unpleasant irritation. I am not going to help England decide against France, Japan against Italy. You are my good customers. I shall continue to attend to my business, and I shall do it in the old American way.'"

The Miami Herald, in commenting on this, said: "No one, so far as we can remember, has so cleverly stated the question of the League of Nations as applied to this country."

Let us sum up the Brisbane idea and see what it amounts to. We are studiously to refrain from doing or saying anything that will offend our customers. We are to pat all nations on the back which might be having trouble with each other, and encourage them in developing strife, on the theory that our gain will be in gold. How much is the man respected by anyone who in a community is all things to all people? How much of a citizen is he appraised in the public estimate who thinks only of his purse, asserts no force of character, and assumes no responsibilities which might interfere with his business? He would be set aside in the people's view as a money grabber, without a single redeeming quality.

Let us carry the Brisbane theory a little farther. Suppose that Great Britain and France should get into war. The United States would simply say: "Go on, France; go on, Britain, fight your damnedest. We will stay on our side of the ocean and sell both of you the necessities of war." Suppose the world became involved in a conflict as it did several years ago, and the great creditor nation, the one which is in a position to assume the moral leadership of the world, did nothing to restrain force, evidenced no opposition to the violation of treaties, and showed no concern when the laws of international morality were forgotten all in the furtherance of the gold-gathering policy of doing nothing to offend any one of our customers? What would civilization think of us, if there was any civilization left outside of our own hemisphere?

Whenever war occurs anywhere, we may for a time have a trade reaction that is favorable, but the net loss is upon the world as a whole. The individual in a community who raises neither hand nor voice against the things that menace is unspeakably contemptible. The nation which is moved by a like impulse, for the purpose of gaining international trade, is to be no less worthily regarded.

Yes, as the Miami Herald says, no one except Brisbane "has so cleverly stated the question of the League of Nations as applied to this country." He has revealed an inhumanity that is shocking, a mania that is lamentable, and an asininity that is increasingly characteristic.

The Tamiami Trail

With the delivery of $125,000 by the county commissioners to the state road department Tuesday, the long series of difficulties that have beset the building of the Tamiami trail to the Monroe county line will have ended and assurance will be had of an early realization of what has long been one of Miami's fondest dreams—an automobile highway through the everglades to the west coast.

A road of this sort is a necessity if Miami is to cease being a terminal point for auto tourists. Up to the present this has been a disadvantage, as automobilists dislike having to return by the same road over which they come. With the Tamiami trail completed during 1926, as is expected, linking the east and west coasts of south Florida and traversing the undeveloped territory of Monroe and Collier counties, there will be a constant stream of traffic consisting not only of sightseers, but of settlers seeking homes on the last American frontier, made available for the first time by a road over which its products can be comfortably and economically carried to market.

High School Business Courses

A rather severe arraignment of the present-day commercial course in the high schools of the country was delivered a few days ago by Sherman Perry of the American Rolling Mills Co., in an address before the business education department of the National Educational Association at Indianapolis, Ind. Business men of the executive type, he declared, complain that such courses fail to turn out a product that can assume reasonable responsibility and perform duties speedily and accurately. Young men and young women, he added, are woefully lacking in that one essential without which life is a failure—initiative. Mr. Perry believed that the weak point in the high school commercial course was a lack of liason between those who endeavored to turn out a finished product in the commercial courses, and business men themselves. He urged the teachers to become acquainted personally with the needs of business when they would be in a better position to pass on the knowledge they had acquired.

That there is at least some justification in Mr. Perry's statements, every business man and industrial executive is aware. The big cry of the day is for "big men," men and women who can fill the executive positions at the top and command great salaries. There is more room at the top of the ladder at all times than there is at the foot, but for some reason, comparatively few have the necessary ambition to get up higher than a few rungs. Perhaps the schools are at fault somewhat, but there seems to be a deeper reason. It is not so very unusual to see college graduates in minor clerkships after years of service, while others with practically no education, are in command of the ship. This is not always the case by any means, but it is frequent enough to make one wonder as to the reason.

Probably the greatest factor in a failure is weakness of character. One need not do moral wrong to lack self-control and strength of purpose unless it be the wrong to one's self. The building of character begins almost at birth, and the training in the first few years of the boy's or girl's life counts far more than that received in all after years. If the child's every whim is granted, if he is permitted to abuse his parents, his brothers or sisters; if he is allowed to loaf around and not taught to perform any duties, and if he is petted and pampered, then the parents have no one but themselves to blame if manhood does not bring business and social success. The school systems, like any other system, can stand constant improvement, but even if educational perfection be attained, the efforts are in vain unless education has the background of sturdy character.

White House Desecration

The appeal of a president dead to a president living for preservation of the present interior style of the White House may prevent the desecration which is threatened. At least, it serves to draw attention to the act contemplated after only the slightest consideration. The appeal is in a letter written by Theodore Roosevelt, while he was president, to Cass Gilbert and the American Institute of Architects, which now has been forwarded to President Coolidge in an effort to have him withdraw the approval already given for the White House change.

President Roosevelt wrote, December 19, 1908:

> "The White House now, within and without, is literally the ideal house for the head of a great democratic republic.
> "It should be a matter of pride, an honorable obligation to the whole nation, to prevent its being in any way marred.
> "If I had it in my power, as I leave office, I should like to leave as a legacy to you and to the American Institute of Architects, the duty of preserving a perpetual eye of guardianship over the White House and to see that it is kept unchanged and unmarred from this time on."

Similar love for the White House as it is was held by Woodrow Wilson, who once told a friend that every diplomat and foreign statesman who called on him had expressed admiration of the White House. President Wilson, like all his predecessors, had reverent sentiment for their official residence which amount to tradition, and the late President Harding opposed all suggestions of change.

It is not so much, perhaps, that President Coolidge has desired a change from the French Empire style of decoration, as that he thoughtlessly has approved the suggestion of some one else. Now that the matter has been brought to his notice so emphatically, it is hoped he will see the point, which is that to remodel the White House is a desecration. The White House ought not need defense for its preservation against change. Tradition should make it inviolate. It may be well, however, that Roosevelt's letter has been found at this time. It is at least persuasive, if not commanding.

Bastile Day

July 14th, France's independence day, is rightly the one foreign national holiday that the American people commemorate. It marks the awakening of the downtrodden European masses to the message of liberty and democracy delivered a few years before in Philadelphia through the American Declaration of Independence.

Ten days ago thousands of Frenchmen shouted "Vive l'Amerique" on the anniversary of the ringing of our Liberty bell. It is fitting that an echo of sympathy and fraternity reverberate throughout the United States on the anniversary of Bastile day, to prove to France that whatever the momentary political questions that may be puzzling today's public men, the American people have not forgotten the generous aid extended by their forefathers to ours in the parlous days of 1776.

AT THE CAPITAL

By CHARLES P. STEWART

NEW YORK, July 14. — Ex-Representative "Alfalfa Bill" Murray of Oklahoma is disgusted. He writes from South America to friends here that the spirit of the old-time pioneers is dead in North American breasts.

Some time ago Bill got a land concession in Bolivia—a tract the size of half a dozen Texas counties at least. His plan was to colonize it with a lot of hard-fisted, tough-fibered frontiersmen from the "states"—men of the type of the bygone "covered wagon" days.

A "Wild West," in short, was what Bill was trying to create.

He loved the "wild west" in this country while it stayed wild, and pined for it as it began to grow more and more domesticated.

Finally his yen became so acute that he decided to see if he couldn't scare up a substitute for the real old thing to satisfy it. Somebody told him about the only unconquered wilderness, which nevertheless is a nice place to live in, was to be found in central South America.

Accordingly, away Bill journeyed to South America and hied himself, as nearly as he could, to the center of it.

There, indeed, he found a first-class wilderness, wholly unconquered, just the raw material for the old "wild west" he remembered so well—a little hotter, perhaps, but all the better, from an agricultural standpoint, for twelve months a year of crop-growing weather.

For a "wild west' has to be something besides mere landscape. To conquer nature, conquerors are necessary, and conquest is what "Alfalfa Bill" Murray lives for.

It isn't the wilderness in itself that he likes. The job of taming it is what he gets his fun out of.

Having done so, he's ready to move on to a new one, just as he moved on from Oklahoma to Bolivia, when the former got too civilized for him.

"Nowhere else in the world," said Bill to himself, "are there such pioneers as back in the 'states,' where I came from. Gosh! I remember 'em in the old days! How they'll jump at a chance to get back to 'em."

He propagandized accordingly. He offered extremely favorable terms to the land-hungry, for it was recruits he wanted rather than their money.

He made pioneering sound blamed romantic. He described the country as a cross between a garden of paradise and a storehouse of riches, which was true enough, but Bill rather slighted the detail that settlers would have to start from scratch on the task of developing the resources he was bragging about.

Probably he took it for granted that as experienced frontiersmen, they'd have sense enough to know that without having it diagramed.

What Bill forgot was that the old-timers he had in mind either were dead or mostly too old to make fresh starts in a new country. He just happened to be an exception.

He got colonists all right, but they were the old hard-shells' sons and grandsons—two entirely different and progressively softer generations. A look at Bill's wilderness scared 'em.

Bring a man up in an electric-lighted, furnace-heated farm house, with running water, telephone, radio set, phonograph, well-built barns, cribs and silos all about him, a tractor to do all the hard work, and an auto waiting to rush him in 15 minutes to the nearest movie whenever he feels like it—

* * *

Bring a man up like this; then slam him down, at the end of a week's ride on a hard-jogging mule, with his entire equipment included in what he can load onto the critter's back behind him—slam him down thus on a spot untouched by human hand or foot since the day the Creator finished with it, and say to him:

"Dig a well. Cut bricks. Bake 'em. Build a house. Thatch it. Raise crops. Reduce 'em to something edible. Cook.

"Look out for ugly Indians. Live or die, as you please. Nobody else cares."

It IS disconcerting.

So Bill's colony didn't last long. It dwindled away, at first one or two at a time, then in groups, then in a body.

Now Bill has his "wild west" still there, but no "wild westerners." And the stories those colonists tell as they straggle back home!

Heck! What were they looking for?

Tough experiences! You bet pioneering's a tough experience.

THE BOSS

By HAL COCHRAN

Sometimes the boss has a reason to think that the world is a queer working place. Sometimes we feel he's a hard-hearted gink and of feeling has narry a trace.

He is the man who is heading the works, where the everyday fellow's employed. His is a brain that, you'll find, seldom shirks, for it's bound to be ever annoyed.

Mere petty things that are bothersome, quite, are brought to his desk every day. Using discretion, he sets problems right, e'er he send puzzled men on their way.

Cooperation means business success. It's the key to our work-a-day cheer. Cooperation would fizzle, I guess, if the big boss we work for weren't here.

Give him the credit that's due. That's the touch that will help when it's all done and said. While we are using our handpower and such, he's the fellow who's using his head.

NEW YORK LETTER

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, July 14.—The Building Moloch has claimed almost all the old homes in Gotham. The few remaining appear to romanticize days when Forty-second street was a picnic ground and hooves of spanking bays struck fire from the cobble stone.

They stand as grim, historic sentinels frowning upon the brittle ornate apartment beehives and skyscrapers sweeping in such opulent argosy about them.

They are mostly inhabited by descendants of the original owners who cling to family portraits, curly white staircases and dull colored rag rugs. Hurrying New York shifts and surges all around but does not touch them or their dwelling.

The family carriage is still retained. Worn steps are scrubbed bright each morning. About the only visitor is the dour faced family lawyer who calls monthly. The women wear crinkling black silks and bonnets and the men square topped derbies and barrel cuffs.

The atmosphere of the past is so stiff it crackles. I am told the owners of these homes are mostly worth millions. Theirs is a life of methodical infiltration. They do not read the daily newspapers and they refuse to greet new acquaintances.

There is the story of one—an aged spinster—who had a rakish nephew who had thrown off all restraint along Broadway. His debts piled up and his business foundered. He was snubbed by the family servitor when he went to call and the door closed in his face.

Finally, in desperation, he wrote a note of appeal to save him from disgrace and perhaps jail. The messenger returned with a Bible and a note reading "Please never communicate with your aunt again." That night he took poison on the stoop of her home. But they saved him at the hospital and he went to work.

John Held, Jr., whose old fashioned effort to "shoe" a mule at his Connecticut home near New York resulted in near death, has returned from the Orient whither he fled to convalesce. After the mule had done his stuff, Held was removed to a Norwalk hospital. He was battered, bruised and broken and among other things had a fractured skull. He was on the operating table two hours and when he flickered back to consciousness, looked feebly about and spying the group of surgeons, said to the nearest with a suggestion of a grin:

"What was it, doc? A boy or a girl?"

Somehow I am always confusing John Held, Jr., with Don Herold. They are two of the most original of our pen and ink men in style although their creations are vastly different. Each lives in Connecticut and writes as well as draws. It is a rare gift to do both. George Gibbs paints in Europe for six months and writes novels in Philadelphia the other six. Bugs Baer started out as a comic artist. Gene Markey illustrates his book reviews. Oliver Herford, Nate Collier, and several others are able to make the pen do double duty.

A great editor has said that any one who resents honest criticism is a fool. He is right but criticism often rankles. I don't care for it and I wish the fellow who wrote "if you ever stop writing I know a laundry that needs a mangler" had minded his own business.

THE GUILTY PARTIES

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

When a tiny creeping creature
Crawling o'er the ocean sand
Thought that he would be a feature
Of the region called the land,
And in every briny bubble
Saw a rainbow bright with hopes,
He was merely making trouble
For the future Mr. Scopes.

When this animal's descendants
Cast their shells and sprouted feet
In the radiant resplendence
Of the semi-tropic heat,
And quite free at last from oceans,
On the grass and herbage fed—
They were merely putting notions
Into Mr Scopes' head.

When such things went on for ages,
Till the cooling world was rife
With all sorts of changing stages
Of the thing that we call life;
And with fury, hate or terror
Beasts would growl, or hiss or screech—
They were just creating Error
For young Mr. Scopes to teach.

Not a shadow of suspicion
Ever crossed a creature's mind,
In that primitive condition,
Of the evoluting kind,
While their course was straight and steady
Up toward Heaven all the while,
They were merely making ready
For Professor Scopes' trial.

President Hindenburg's cabinet is running out on him. His army did the same thing.

MAN CREATED PERFECT

Editor Miami Daily News:

We can agree with evolutionists who accept an intelligent first cause, as to the development of the inferior animals by a process of evolution.

But it is not said of man, "Let the seas swarm" or "Let the earth bring forth," as with the lower animals. We read in Genesis that God said, "Let us make man in our own image and after our likeness," a special creation. (Genesis 1:26-28; 5:1-2). The word "image" would evidently not apply to physical form, but rather imply that man was a moral and intellectual image of the Great Spirit, yet so fashioned as to be adapted to his earthly conditions and nature. Man was of the earth, earthy.

We would understand the word "likeness" to refer to man's official position on earth. As Jehovah was emperor over the whole universe, so man was to be king of earth, having dominion over all the lower animals.

Here is the battleground between the word of God and the word of man—called science—to which the whole world, particularly the educated, and even the leaders in theological seminaries are bowing down and worshiping—their scientific god called evolution! There is no middle ground. If the evolution theory be true, the Bible is false from Genesis to Revelation. If the Bible be true, then the evolution theory is absolutely false in all its deductions in re the race of man.

Not only does the Genesis account deny the theory of evolution, but the entire Book from cover to cover sets forth the thought that man was perfect in the day he was created, that he fell through disobedience—and therefore he needed a Redeemer, Christ Jesus, to ransom him from sin and death and restore him to his former condition. The corner stone of the Christian religion is set forth by our Lord when he declared, "The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." The evolutionist denies that anything was lost, but that man has been through billions of years laboriously climbing up from protoplasm to oyster, from oyster to fish, and then in turn to reptile, monkey, primitive man and finally to modern man, as we find him today.

The gospel means "Good Tidings." But if evolution be true, "the time of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began" would be far from "good tidings"—it would mean a return to monkeyhood or perhaps to the oyster or protoplasm stage—in fact, very bad tidings!

Let us take our stand on the authority of the word of God. Let God be true, though it prove every evolutionist a liar!

MIAMI AV. BRIDGE

Editor Miami Daily News:

Do bridges grow stronger by use? A few years ago the argument was that as the Miami av. bridge was not strong enough to carry a street car, the new Second av. bridge would be built strong and wide enough to carry such traffic. Now we read a whole section of the Miami News where they advertise the construction of a street car line on this avenue and over the Miami av. bridge.

Why run a street car line over Thirteenth st. and down Miami av. when the juncture of Thirteenth st. and Fifteenth rd. is but seven blocks from the S. W. Sixth st. rail line now in operation, and the car barn located at the Second av. bridge?

If street cars run over Miami av., what will be the congestion in that narrow street?

Do the people of Miami think the longest way around is the shortest cut? Why at all times avoid the shortest route? The cheapest and most direct route for Grapeland blvd., Coral Way and Holleman Park residents to reach the city is decidedly by S. W. Third av. route. By Coral Way we find a much shorter route also to Coral Gables if the officials will take the trouble to measure the different routes.

Third av. is 60 feet wide and thickly settled, and a direct opening into Holleman blvd., why shun the direct route?

MORE FRESH AIR

Editor Miami Daily News:

I would suggest that the street car company might help a lot by providing windows which will open, keeping them open, on the Beach cars especially, and on all their lines. Miami is cool in summer if you can get air, otherwise not, and the windows on most of their cars are defective or will not open, and if opened, will not stay open.

Worst Story Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS

Somebody is always stopping me and telling me a Story and saying: "You can use it in your Act." Now, I never in my life on the Stage told a Story. Mine has always been just observations on the day's news. But still I have to listen to them. I hate a Story and I hate the Guys that are always telling them. There is not a new one in 10 years, yet people go through life inflicting them on everybody they meet.

Sam Harris, the theatrical producer, puts on good shows in New York, and is a real fine little gentleman. (I may want to work for him some time). Well, I meet him every day in the Astor hotel barber shop. Sam knows all the stories and gags on the main stem. Just when he starts telling me one I have the barber holler at me, "You are next," and I get away from them. But this one I couldn't dodge. It was the worst story I heard today.

When Mr Hammerstein was producing "Rose Marie," the big musical comedy success, they needed chorus men for the show. In the piece, the chorus men are principally Northwest mounted police and frontiersmen. Out of the couple of hundred that were examined, the best one was a big fellow who was selected on account of his excellent voice.

He was taken before Mr. Hammerstein to be given the once-over, and was promptly turned down as looking "nothing like the part." As the young man was leaving, Mr. Hammerstein casually asked, "What experience have you had, anyway?"

"Well," the man replied, "I haven't done much of acting lately. I have spent my last eight years in the Canadian Northwest mounted police."

Chances are his nails were not manicured. That's why they thought he wouldn't be a good looking stage mounted police.

Individual Liberty

By CHESTER H. ROWELL

The best test of what we really value is to find out what we will fight for.

Once that was individual liberty. Is it now?

Inquire of the night riders, who run men down for exercising their individual liberty to refuse to cooperate with their fellows, in the tobacco or raisin business.

Ask of the "entertainment committee," that beats up the scab for exercising his individual liberty to stay out of the union, or to refrain from striking.

Ask of the trade association, which combines with the banks and the wholesalers to bankrupt the dealer who exercises the liberty of individual competition.

The thing we fight for is not liberty. It is to coerce the other man to forego the liberty which we have eagerly surrendered, and to join with us for uniformity, not individuality of action.

Our traditional theories compel us, in words, to condemn all these things.

But on which side, in fact, do we fight?

It is still a fighting world.

One week, Persia introduces a Prussian system of universal military service, and the next week quits the arms conference rather than submit to the search of ships that might be carrying arms.

France, because it has been preaching the cruelty of poison gas, refrained for a while from using it against the Riff tribesmen, but when they proved hard to subdue by orthodox methods, it considered using it on them and hesitated to join with the other nations in outlawing gas generally.

Every Solomon Island cannibal goes armed all the time, and fighting is the chief concern of life.

So would it be in civilized communities, if we had not organized them with fighting police, to fight to keep the rest of us from fighting.

Internationally, we are just emerging from the Solomon Island stage.

And Persia, France, the Riffians and American jingo isolationists are the chief influences to keep us in that stage.

It is not women suffrage, but the electric washing machine that has emancipated women, said a speaker before the National Electric Light Association.

In other words, real emancipation is freedom; not from autocracy, but from drudgery.

That depends a good deal on what use is made of the new leisure. Drudgery is an evil. But work is a good.

Machinery emancipated men from drudgery, but they used that opportunity, not to escape from work, but to accomplish more work.

Unless this turns out to be true also of women, the electrization of the home will present new problems of [illegible].

The "delicatessen wife" is not emancipated. She is a victim, deprived of one occupation before she has adapted herself to another.

The old inefficient home absorbed all, and more than all, of a woman's energy just to keep it going. The modern electric flat absorbs much less than all of it.

Bible Thought for Today

"If ye walk in my statutes, and keep my commandments, I will have respect unto you, and make you fruitful, and multiply you, and establish my covenant with you."—Lev. 26:3, 9.

A Year of Achievement

Executives like General Gerardo Machado, who completed his first year in the presidential chair of Cuba on May 20, justify the forbearance which characterizes the foreign policy of the United States in its dealings with Latin-American republics. Cuba, under previous administrations—in fact, under every president except its first, Tomas Estrada Palma—has been woefully misgoverned. Strong pressure has been exerted on Washington requesting intervention in Cuba at different times, in accordance with the terms of the treaty which gave Cuba its independence and gave the United States a god-child; but in the face of broken pledges by parties in power, the United States has been loath to compromise Cuba's sovereignty and autonomy by direct interference, and has confined itself to friendly counsel through the regular diplomatic channels.

For the past year Cuba has had an efficient and honest government. President Machado, a successful businessman, has applied the practices that made him wealthy to public matters. An astute politician, he played the game as it was until after his election. Since then he has thrown off all shackles and has governed according to his own rules. His first achievement was the doing away with graft; his second, the abolishing of government sinecures; his third, the curbing of alien agitators, who were responsible for labor troubles. At the present time President Machado is working out a comprehensive plan of public improvements; is curtailing the sugar crop to ensure better prices, and is encouraging Cuban industry with a view to decreasing the excess of imports over exports that has long been the cause of Cuba's economic instability.

President Machado has piloted Cuba through a difficult period. Sugar, the major product of the country, has been selling below cost. Business has been bad and money tight. The national treasury, nevertheless, is piling up a big surplus.

President Machado enjoys the confidence of his people and of foreign chancelries. He has fairly earned this confidence.

Disarmament Problems

The matter of disarmament for the United States is relatively so simple that it is difficult for the average citizen of this country to understand all that is taking place in the preparatory conference at Geneva. The fact is that, speaking in general terms, the United States does not have a disarmament problem of its own, for the reason that our military forces have been shrunk to a point of absolute danger if there might come a threat worth while.

A fairly complete outline of the United States' program appeared in the dispatches to The News by Junius B. Wood, our special correspondent in Geneva, who is one of the few remaining reporters of the old school, which held to presentation of news facts, uncolored by opinion which has proper place only in the comment the facts may warrant. Mr. Wood, first to give us an idea of what our government may contribute to the solution of a great world problem, announced our formula which is:

(1). Limitation of battleship tonnage, as fixed at Washington conference, should be extended to include all naval vessels, maintaining the ratio 5-5-3.

(2). Limitation of land armament should be based on population and area of the home country, exclusive of colonies, and in direct ratio rather than in inverse ratio, as France proposes.

(3). Making peace-time service standard in character and specified in term. In this connection, the United States is opposed to voluntary enlistments for a longer period than three years.

(4). Adoption of voluntary instead of compulsory military service as now is the case in most European countries.

(5). Any limitation based on the wealth of an individual nation is impractical, on account of impossibility of agreeing as to the extent of that wealth.

(6). Any limitation fixing the maximum military budgets for individual nations is unacceptable. So far as the United States is concerned, the war department appropriation includes budget and harbor work, the Pan American canal and many other non-warlike activities. Moreover, the United States would be affected because of the fact that its pay for officers and soldiers is higher per capita than European scales.

From the strictly American viewpoint this program offers a fair working basis, but because it fails to take into account conditions elsewhere, particularly in the countries of Europe, it presents at the same time a stumbling block to agreement.

If the rest of the world might understand the attitude of the American people, which is the attitude of the American government, there would be no problem before the disarmament conference so far as we are concerned. But the rest of the world does not understand; it knows only that the Unitel States has shown prosperity, gained in complete security, while prosperity has not prevailed elsewhere where security has been absent. Thus it appears that Germany, as well as France, is asking for assurance against aggression, or for the right to maintain worthy defensive force.

Since the immediate consideration in the disarmament problem is agreement on a program, that we have presented may be as good as any. But armament consists not only in immediate preparedness. The United States has something more to offer, if it will be helpful, than yet has been proposed; it may aid peace more by eliminating war causes than merely joining in a futile effort to regulate the machinery by which war may be waged.

Robbing The Cradle

Amendment of the Florida marriage law fixing a minimum age at which a child may be wed was suggested by Judge Darlington of the Tampa juvenile court after circuit court had pronounced the union of a 12-year-old Tampa girl perfectly legal. Florida statutes merely provide that "if either of the persons to be named in the license be under 21 years, the county judge shall require satisfactory evidence of the consent of the parent or guardian of such minor to the marriage." In the Tampa case, the child's mother testified that she had given her consent to the delivery of her adolescent daughter, who lacked two months of being 12 years old, to the bridegroom who was more than five times her age.

It is unquestionable that climate affects the physiology of the race and that development and maturity come earlier in the tropics than in the temperate zones. As a result marriages usually come earlier in life in tropical countries, both in the new and old worlds, especially in India and China. Most South American countries have a 15-year minimum marriage law, and Judge Darlington's suggestion that the Florida minimum be fixed at 16 years seems logical.

American educational, intellectual and phychological standards, which are continually being raised to meet modern conditions of life, have already materially augmented the average marrying age of girls in this country where women, emancipated and enfranchised, no longer look to marriage as the only means of livelihood and happiness. Marriage is a contract entailing obligations, and as such it is indispensable that both parties be old enough thoroughly to understand them. Few 16-year-old girls brought up in the wholesome American way are capable of this comprehension.

It is safe to assume that the average marrying age of Florida girls will continue above 18, but to curb the thoughtlessness of the exceptions and the mercenary machinations of a few unworothy parents, a minimum age should be written into the Florida marriage law.

Looking Forward

There is a thought well worth considering in the expression of a noted social worker who had been taken on a visit to some of the night clubs that are notorious in the larger cities, that the young men and women there are not likely to be the parents of the coming generation. This is a thought that needs no elaboration when review is taken of the wholesome activities of worthwhile youth, including two notable events of the past week, namely: The international meeting of Girl Scouts, with reassertion of their aims, and the triumphant tour of General Baden-Powell, founder of the Boy Scouts. It is the latter which holds the greater attention now because of the impetus it has given to a worthy movement here, emphasized by the farewell party given the great leader of youth on his departure for his homeland.

The visit of Baden-Powell was notable because in the turmoil of national worries about wrongful tendencies of the young, in the midst of what hysterical people call a crime-wave, it has brought attention to the fact that there are at least 600,000 boys in this country about whom there need be no worry. These are the Boy Scouts, who are trained and being guided constantly to become men of character; and impressive is the call in this regard, not for more Boy Scouts, but for more adult leaders who will aid the Boy Scouts to organize and to function.

It is stated that in the past 15 years one out of every seven boys in the nation has become a Boy Scout, so that with the ratio increasing as leadership appears, the outlook is fairly good for a people of our number and makeup.

Attention is directed to the fact that at the sixteenth annual convention of the National Council of Boy Scouts, held in Washington to do honor to General Baden-Powell at the place of its founding, a Brooklyn judge declared that of 100,000 boys brought into the criminal courts of his city in 15 years, less than a dozen had ever been Boy Scouts, and only two were scouts in good standing when they got into trouble. Matching this claim a spokesman from Tampa said that no Boy Scout had ever been haled before the courts of his city, and equally gratifying was the record of the New York city children's court—dealing with offenders under the age of 16— that in 10 years no Boy Scout has been arrested.

This record brings from the Chicago Tribune, published where crime is a problem, the observation that "Boy Scouts are good citizens." And from the same source, the comment that, "If the country as a whole could show such a record there would be no crime problem, no problem of juvenile delinquency." The record and the comment are brought herewith, most respectfully to our groping crime commission.

It seems to us that the secret of Boy Scout helpfulness is that it encourages boy spirit, supplying direction for helpful activity to take the place of "Don'ts." It teaches manliness and actually dares the boy to be manly. The Boy Scout is no namby-pamby; his hardihood is tried as was that of pioneers, and all to helpful purpose. He is taught to know nature and to contend with her.

There need be no worry about the boy who is taught to "Do a good turn daily;" but we may suspect the man who laughs at the teaching. That is only a part of the Boy Scout's motto; the other mandate is to "Be Prepared." And the Scout oath is: "On my honor I will do my best, (1) to do my duty to God and my country and to obey the Scout laws; (2) to help other people at all times; (3) to keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight."

It is worth cultivating and supporting —this Boy Scout movement; and perhaps it's worth more than passing notice by those who are beyond the age of membership.

The temporary leader of Poland was not trying to start a revolution and he says he did not want to be dictator but it is noted in passing that he did not await for any demand from the people.

It is easy to tell that a man is a candidate for something when he takes to dropping in, unannounced, on meetings of the sort he formerly ignored.

It is possible that new lodges may be added to the list so long as Pullman car names and cigaret brands are not trademarked.

The thing that creates suspicion about a gasoline tax is the way the price holds up in states where it is not assessed.

Organization of a new band would be more difficult if the first step were selection of a place for practice.

No one ought to kick about the weather who can enjoy spring blooms and an open fire at the same time.

Experience is a great teacher, but most people learn the lesson too late for any personal profit.

Advice given freely sometimes proves to be the most costly in the long run.

The man who really has a message does not need to employ a press agent.

AT THE CAPITAL

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, May 24. — You'll hardly know whether it is money or a merchandise coupon after the treasury's committee on redesign of the currency gets through.

Their plans for revamped paper money are expected to save about $4,000,000 a year and to provide much handier currency. Their problem is to take care of the paper money and let the coins take care of themselves.

The proposals, in brief, are to reduce the size of bills by about one-third, to eliminate the yellowbacks and make other color changes, to simplify and standardize design and to stop printing some of the little-used denominations. These proposals are not yet official. They are revealed now directly from the committee, however, and are believed to be virtually assured of adoption.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has authority to make such changes in the currency without consulting congress. The committee on redesign has been making exhaustive studies for nearly a year and is expected to report within a few months. After the secretary orders the changes, nearly a year will be required for engraving the plates and for printing and distribution.

"The department is convinced that our present paper money system can be made more economical and efficient and is committed to improving it," says Assistant Secretary Charles S. Dewey. He is the official directly in charge of the expert committee on redesign.

The change in size is expected to be most radical. Ever since the first greenbacks were turned out during the War Between the States paper money has been approximately 7.28 inches long and 3.04 inches wide. The new bills, it is planned, will be 6 inches long and 2½ inches wide.

These dimensions are copied from Philippine money. When the islands came under American control a consignment of paper money, in pesos, was ordered from the bureau of engraving and printing. Elihu Root, then secretary of war, insisted that it have a distinctive form.

When it is considered that the government uses about 1,200 tons of paper a year for printing money, it is apparent that such a cut in size will effect a tremendous saving.

Furthermore, the smaller sized bills will not be folded so much and will give longer service. Tests already made by federal reserve bank tellers show the smaller bills can be handled faster.

There are in circulation now 11 different denominations of bills: the $1, $2, $5, $10, $20, $50, $100, $500, $1,000, $5,000 and $10,000. Four of these probably will be withdrawn. They are the unpopular and hoodoo $2 bill and the $500, $5,000 and $10,000. There is little demand for these.

For the 11 denominations now in use there are 39 different designs. There are five different kinds of $10 bills, for instance. The committee is expected to recommend one distinctive pattern, and no more, for each denomination.

The portrait, being a steel engraving, is the surest protection against duplication and the feature most easily detected in a counterfeit. To use the same portrait on two bills is considered an opportunity for raising the lower one.

Colors are to be changed also. Yellow ink can be bleached off with comparative ease and it is to be discontinued. It is proposed also to print the backs of bills in two colors instead of one as at present.

NEW YORK LETTER

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, May 24.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Early out and watched flocks of pigeons flying about St. Patrick's spires and talked to a garrulous street sweeper who seemed blessed with contentment. Thence to a restaurant and watched the city going to its labors.

Home and at my work but stopped by a blank wall of sterility and idled at my window wondering what was behind all the passing parade of materialism and filled with thoughts so glum I was glad when Frank Sullivan dropped in with a gay story of a fat lady and a midget.

In the evening Justine Hall came to dinner and with her and my wife to a Turkish place in the Ghetto for dinner and drank so much sirupy coffee I was owl-eyed all night and my poor thoughts racing like whippets after a rabbit.

—o—

Nothing so distracts a writer as to have someone pirouting around the musky ruins of his desk. It is his Pompeii under which lie scratches of vagrant thoughts, soiled clippings, seared manuscripts and many of the very secrets of his soul.

The other day near Washington Square I gazed at the desk of a man who has written more than a dozen successful novels. Here are some of the things I saw: Two clogged and rusty pens, three ash trays piled high, a half cake of soap, a tattered dictionary, two pairs of scissors, a fly trap, four pipes and three tumbled heaps of newspapers, magazines and manuscripts.

That morning he had dismissed a servant who had merely thrown out an advertising pamphlet from a sporting goods house which had slipped to the floor. It had been burned before it was missed and through its pages were jotted notes on the first two instalments of a serialized novel for a magazine.

—o—

Those ladies with ample chins who wear sandals, Grecian robes and expound socialism through thick exhales of smoke seem to be about the only "atmosphere" left in coffee shops near Washington Square. They live in the Christopher street stable mows for art's sake, which consists of painting mauve-tinted holiday cards and writing poems for mushroom magazines. Art, they will tell you, is a cruel mistress if you will listen. But few will listen, although I overheard one telling her troubles to a tubby fellow who said he was in the "magazine business." Later he showed his picture in the magazine. He was none other than one of those Leon J. Zilchs who earned $126 extra money in spare time in a little New Jersey town gathering subscriptions for magazines.

Life is full of discoveries. A well-dressed New Yorker with a boil on his neck found he did not need a back collar button and has never worn one since. Adversity furnishing the usual compensation.

—o—

Perhaps man will eventually shed other dressing accessories. For years suspenders seemed necessary. Then came the belt. Now a leading tailor says few men wear belts save when vestless.

—o—

Speaking of accessories, the most embarrassed male I ever beheld came into a crowded room the other evening and adjusted a monocle to his eye. It slipped to the floor with a plink. He picked it up and made two other unsuccessful attempts. Then he tossed it in a waste basket, blushed furiously, turned and walked out. If it had been I, I would have kept on walking until I reached a nice friendly river.

ROMANCE

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

When Homer wrote his flowing verse
He did not stick to facts exactly,
Nor was he accurate and terse,
Nor did he tell his tale compactly.
For data he was never strong,
For proofs he spent no time in questing,
He made up as he went along,
And that's what makes him interesting.

The stories of the startling crimes
Of old and half-forgotten heroes
And other big-wigs of the times,
The Julians, Alarics and Neros,
Would not impress us, were they true,
The while we read, we always doubt them,
Yet eagerly we con them through
Because the authors lied about them.

It wasn't what these people were
That make their epics so exciting,
But just that nothing could deter
The geniuses who did the writing,
From putting in some gallant deed
Or making up a situation
Which, when they thought there was the need,
They drew from the imagination.

Biography today is dry;
No life contains sufficient glory
Or great adventure to supply
The makings of a first-class story.
If you have hopes to write a book
Which people will declare worth buying—
For facts you never ought to look,
But simply do some good, tall lying.

CIVILIZATION AND SPIRITISM

Editor, Miami Daily News: In your issue of Sunday, May 16, I note account of an interview with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in re the subject of Spiritualism.

Probably no other subject (except, perhaps, the League of Nations) has occupied more space in the magazines and newspapers during the past few years, than Spiritualism.

The civilized world is rapidly going mad over Spiritualism, or more properly speaking, Spiritism. In fact, some of our most noted alienists have declared that the whole human race will be insane within the next 10 years unless something intervenes to oppose this tidal wave now threatening to engulf us. It has been estimated that within the last two years more than 100,000 persons in Great Britain alone have lost their minds because of Spiritualism.

I feel, therefore, impelled to sound a note of alarm. I appeal to your readers, if there be any Christian men and women among them who still believe the Bible to be the inspired word of God, and whose faith in it has not been utterly destroyed by present-day teachings from both pulpit and platform along the lines of Higher Criticism, Evolution and "Science, falsely so-called," to hearken to the word of the Lord if they would keep their reason on its throne and save their souls from eternal death.

Any person who thoroughly understands the condition of the dead, as clearly set forth in the Bible, will be absolutely convinced that communication with the dead is an utter impossibility. The Bible teaches that man was created mortal (i. e., a condition in which death is a possibility, but not a necessity), that he disobeyed his Creator and was condemned to death, to destruction, and that the dead can never see life again except by a resurrection from the dead through the power of the Lord Jesus Christ at His Second Advent.

The doctrine of man's natural or "inherent immortality" (i. e., a condition in which death is impossible), is taught by all the heathen and pagan religions and is the foundation of all the deceptions and delusions of Spiritualism. I challenge any person to find in the Bible a single statement by Jehovah God to the effect that man is immortal, or has an immortal soul, or that he cannot die, or be destroyed, even by his maker, Almighty God, "who only hath immortality." (Read I Timothy, 6:16.)

This doctrine that man has a mysterious something (nobody knows exactly what) inside his body, which cannot die, was first taught in the Garden of Eden by Satan, "the father of lies," the Serpent, when he said to Mother Eve, "Ye shall not surely die," whereas the Lord God had said to Adam, "Thou shalt surely die!" (Genesis 3:1-4; 2:16-17.) Shall we believe God's truth or Satan's lie?

It is not within the scope of this brief article to give the numerous scriptural citations which prove that "the dead know not anything," their "thoughts have perished," and that they are not in Heaven, Purgatory, "Hell-fire," or hovering around in the earth's atmosphere, but that they are in their graves, dead, as completely out of existence as though they had never lived, and that the dead will remain in this condition until the Lord Jesus shall awaken them out of death, but to any who sincerely desire to know the truth from a scriptural standpoint, I shall be pleased to send proof texts, free upon request.

If any be not convinced by the scriptural definitions of death, i. e., destruction, (sometimes referred to as "sleep" because of the hope of an awakening by a resurrection promised in God's word) let him consult a Webster's dictionary, which declares death to be "cessation of life."

As to who and what it is that is responsible for the various spiritualistic rappings, voices, materializations, "spirit photographs," Ouija board messages and undeniable communications received by Sir Oliver Lodge, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and other members of the Psychical Research Societies of England and America, I will send the explanation thereof free upon request.

Thank God for the promise that the dead shall "live again," at the Second Advent of our Lord, although in the meantime they are dead, "asleep in the dust of the Earth," "in the graves." (Daniel 12:2; John 5:26-29.)

Regarding Greece's President

By MILTON BRONNER

LONDON, May 24.—A mixture of a tin-pan Mussolini and a pinchbeck Rivera—that's Theodore Pangalos, president-dictator-boss of war-crushed, debt-ridden, poverty-stricken Greece.

At least his enemies put it that way. They say he hasn't the administrative genius of Mussolini, although he made himself dictator like him: and that he hasn't the good humor of Rivera, although like him, he owes his power to the army. But a lot of this stuff about Pangalos is propaganda from two Greek sources—the royalists and the Venizelist republicans, both of whom Pangalos put out of commission.

As a matter of fact, Pangalos is a mixture of a comic opera bluffer who gets away with it, and a stern disciplinarian who does not hesitate to shoot men out of hand when they don't obey orders, or when they are not true to their country.

For a long time Pangalos succeeded by hard work. He studied in the French war college. During the great war, when Venizelos finally overrode the pro-German royalists and brought Greece into the conflict on the side of the allies, Pangalos served at Salonika under General Sarrail and under French commanders-in-chief.

Later, under Premier Venizelos, he served as chief of staff of the Greek army in Thrace and Asia Minor and got a big reputation as strategist, organizer and disciplinarian.

Then came a crisis in Greek affairs. A revolution had kicked out the king and the victorious Turks smashed the Greek army in Asia Minor.

It was not a defeat. It was a rout. The jubilant Turks came to a conference at Lausanne prepared to ask all kinds of onerous terms.

But they did not reckon with Pangalos, who had been made minister of war. He saved Greece from anarchy. He reorganized the army. By May, 1923, he had eight fine divisions in line on the Maritza.

When the Turks at Lausanne demanded a war indemnity, he announced he was ready to march on and capture Constantinople. He probably could have done it.

But the western allies got cold fits. They did not want the Greeks to have that great city and they didn't want each other to have it. So they persuaded Venizelos to hold the Greek army quiet.

Pangalos never forgave Venizelos for this. Other governments were formed in Greece. Pangalos despised them all.

Last June he pulled off his comic opera revolution. With about 200 army officers and men he seized some posts in Athens. The Greek cruiser Averoff, lying in Athens harbor, joined him. Its guns pointed at the capital city.

The government surrendered. Pangalos came into power without shedding a drop of blood.

Several months ago he fired the president of Greece, Admiral Kondouriotis. He called for an election of president. All the hostile political parties agreed upon Alexander Zaimis. At once Pangalos issued a decree that nobody should be eligible except persons between 45 and 65. That cut out Zaimis and Venizelos.

Pangalos was unopposed at the polls. He has been "elected." He is sure of power as long as the army stands by him.

In person he is of medium height, stockily built, with swarthy visage and cold dark hair and eyes. He is a man of swift decisions and jerky gestures, indicating a highly strung nervous temperament.

$80,000 FROM 140 ACRES

(The Anniston Star)

Strawberries, that can be grown as successfully in Alabama as in Mississippi, are proving a money-making crop in Lauderdale county, Mississippi, according to a report from Meridian.

This season, the Meridian report says, 20 carloads of strawberries already have been shipped from Lauderdale county by the Strawberry Growers' association, and 25 carloads more are in sight for shipment. The president of the Strawberry Growers' association, J. G. Hobgood, is quoted as saying the members of the association will realize $80,000 from their berries this year, most of the berries selling thus far at $6 a crate. The entire crop was raised on 140 acres.

To what other crop could 140 acres be planted to bring the farmers $80,000? Five hundred and seventy-one dollars is a pretty good income from an acre of ground. Another thing noticed in the strawberry report from Mississippi is the way in which the berries are marketed. The Strawberry Growers' association looks after the shipping and marketing of the berries. Here is cooperative selling in a practical way, and it evidently is paying, as cooperative selling always does when handled in a business-like manner.

THE TOLL GATE PASSES

(Lynchburg Advance)

The death knell of the toll gate in Augusta county has been sounded by the board of supervisors. On Nov. 1 this ancient system of collecting revenue with which to both build and maintain good roads will go out of existence.

There is some opposition to the action of the supervisors in approving the recommendation of the county finance committee that the toll gate should be abolished. Farmers living on dirt roads are said to feel that the toll gate benefits them and with its removal they will get no more funds for their roads.

As a general rule, toll gates in all sections of the United States have been abolished. Perhaps the Augusta county gates are the only ones remaining in Virginia. They have been found inadequate to the needs of highway financing and new and more modern methods of raising revenue have superseded them.

The gasoline tax is the new toll gate. There is no more popular or more expedient method of securing money for highway construction. The old toll gate served a useful purpose and no doubt by making use of it the Valley of Virginia today boasts of a fine network of improved roads. But it is entirely out of date.

Bible Thought for Today

"The Lord God of your fathers make you a thousand times so many more as ye are, and bless you, as he hath promised you!" Deut. 1:11.

Flag Day

Today's observance of Flay day, nation-wide in scope and world-wide in sentiment, tends to bring us into a closer realization of the significance attached to our National Colors.

The stripes of red, symbolic of the baptism in the noble blood of American manhood, alternating with the pure white stripes, that should never bear the stains of national dishonor; together with the clear-cut stars amid the field of blue, all forming the component parts of the banner representing these United States of America, is a beautiful and impressive sight to behold as it floats in an azure sky, with the bright sunlight playing upon its glorious and protecting folds.

Our Flag should have the loyal support of all true Americans. Government officials, the men in whose hands the welfare of this country rests, should ever remember—and practice—the sacred trust reposed in them. No un-American practice, or malfeasance of public office, can be tolerated, supported or condoned by our people.

For our Flag to continue to wave over the republic as the symbol of Liberty, in its truest sense, and rational patriotism in its noblest form, thus justifying that proud boast of unsullied reputation so well known to every school student, is our prayer. However, our country should be free from sectarianism; free from corrupt political influences and practices; eternally grateful to the brave men who have, by sacrificing their lives, insured Democracy; and solicitous of the comfort and welfare of its maimed veterans.

In this way Old Glory will continue to merit its praise, justify its glorious traditions, prove symbolic of unadulterated patriotism and unselfish devotion, and indeed measure up to the beloved Lincoln's terse words: ". . . that these dead shall not have died in vain . . ."

That Tacna Tangle

Any student of South American history could have told President Coolidge from the offset what General Lassiter, his high commissioner to the Tacna-Arica arbitration board, has just reported—that a plebicite is impractical at this time. In fact, a fair referendum on the question as to whether or not the two captured provinces should return to Peru, their original owner, or should be retained by Chile, will be impossible at this or any other time, so long as Chile retains possession of the disputed territory and is in a position to exert undue influence at the polls.

Chile is proverbially a bad loser. The most militaristic of the Latin-American nations; with an army trained by Prussian officers and a white population that has assimilated a larger proportion of German immigration than any other new world country, she has established a "might is right" precedent in her dealings with her weaker neighbors that she does not propose to allow the United States to set aside.

The role of mediator is an ungrateful one. President Coolidge, it appears, did not realize the far reaching effects his acceptance of this seeming honor will have. The United States cannot afford to be a party to the only sort of plebicite Chile will permit—a pantomime. Neither can the United States afford to take the only step that will ensure a strictly legal and honest referendum—military occupation of the disputed territory.

In either case American prestige will suffer, and each time the Washington government makes a "faux pas" there is a reaction on the balance sheet of international business. If we are too weak-kneed we lose the respect of our Latin American neighbors; if we are too high-handed we arouse a violent storm of pan-hispanic-Americanism attended by symptoms of commercial boycotting.

Somehow the state department has a faculty of getting in wrong.

Who Is the Bad Loser?

In a gratuitous attack on the sportsmanship of Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen the Miami Herald, with its usual inconsistency, incurs the very indictment that it raises against Dade county's brilliant daughter. It is a matter of record that Mrs. Owen set an example of the highest type of political campaigning, free from personalities and mud slinging. During the days immediately following the primary, while the issue was still in doubt, Mrs. Owen refrained from comment, and after the results were in and Congressman W. J. Sears was shown to have won, she thanked her supporters for the confidence shown her and congratulated the nominee on his victory.

The primary is over and effusions such as appeared on the Miami Herald's editorial page Monday are untimely and serve no purpose save to place in evidence how absolutely out of touch that paper is with the sentiment of Dade county.

Mrs. Owen has proved herself an astute politician and an able campaigner, and her probabilities for future public service have been enhanced by her experience in the 1926 primaries.

Perhaps the Miami Herald is seeking to vent on Mrs. Owen its pique because other candidates it favored but lacked the courage to support openly were defeated at the polls by the same voters of Dade county who gave Mrs. Owen a majority.

Waning Honeymoon

There are unmistakable signs that the Coolidge honeymoon is over. The president came into a situation which seemed too ideal for him. The Harding administration was tinctured with both scandal and extravagance. The country believed in Coolidge's honesty, and it had evidence of his inclinations toward economy. Then again, he was somewhat of a static individual. It can hardly be said that the country had tired of the intellectualism and idealism of the Wilson regime. It cannot be questioned, however, that interest lagged, and the things which preceding and during the war had brought about enthusiastic reactions, failed to arouse response.

Into this state of things came Coolidge—calm, silent and inactive. There was not much to be done. The period of doing had passed. The time for big things was over. The policy of sitting tight and reducing war expenditures was not only the proper thing to do, but very easy of accomplishment. Coolidge played his role admirably.

It is an old saying that the professionals in the stock market see a turn in things long before the layman does. The same thing may hold true in politics. Certainly the president's prestige has diminished with the leaders of his party. As a personality, Mr. Coolidge is cold and unresponsive, and does not bind men to him with hoops of steel. He was unmoved by the spectacle of McKinley's crucifixion in Illinois. If anything was done to save Pepper in Pennsylvania, it was done through subterranean channels. Not a word was spoken during all the time that Vare, the Philadelphia boss, was nailing Pepper's political hide on the barn door. These men, as well as Cummins, had followed the Coolidge banner throughout. Cummins, too, may now feel that gratitude does not abide in the White House. The only executive word has come in behalf of Lenroot in Wisconsin.

All of these things have brought about an articulated resentment which already is finding expression in the public prints. If the Iowa result amounts to something more than a temporary protest against the existing regime, then it can be said again that the professional political opposition has been but a leap or two ahead of that of the public. Mr. Coolidge has been reckoned as an astute politician. If so, then we may expect to see him follow in the ways of opportunism. There may be a shifting of sails. We may even see White House enthusiasm in the form of radio speeches over the Haugen relief measure.

At all events, there is much doing in the political game, and there must be a great deal doing in the White House if Mr. Coolidge is to be renominated. As one reflects upon the Iowa result, which bears no dissimilarity either in its cause or its features, he veers to the belief that Coolidge will not break the third term precedent, in fact, that he will not be a candidate of his own party.

Lowden of Illinois would be a very much safer guess now, as the Republican nominee. He has been training with the farmers. He is a man of the finest personal qualities, of real ability, and of infinitely more imagination than Coolidge. He could be much more easily nominated than Dawes, for instance, or Borah, for the reason that notwithstanding his apparent high favor with the western agricultural interests, he holds the confidence of big business in the east. He was a stalwart when a member of congress, "regular" even to the point of going down in defeat with old Uncle Joe Cannon, when the revolution over the house rules came, and therefore would fit admirably into a situation which portends much trouble for the Republican party, in that he would be accepted by the east and acclaimed by the west. We speak for the present, of course, only of the nomination.

Niagara Falls Changing

Niagara Falls, long a scenic mecca for tourists, faces possible extinction at the hands of erosion, changer of the world's surface characteristics.

At least engineers who have studied America's great waterfall, the stream feeding it, and the conditions prevailing about it, are inclined to believe so. Mr. R. L. Randolph, a Chicago engineer, is of the opinion that the American side of the falls is certain to disappear in time if something is not done to raise the levels of the water bodies feeding it. His reasons for such a conclusion are set forth in a recent report to the Mississippi Valley association, and they have a reasonable substantiation in fact. The rock ledge over which the Canadian falls tumble, he points out, is being worn away by the constant rush of water, at the rate of from five to seven feet each year. The erosion on the American side, on the other hand, is negligible in comparison, only amounting to two or three inches annually. It is inevitable, then, if the present ratios of erosion are maintained, that the Canadian ledge will be worn back until the entire volume of the stream is diverted into it, leaving the American falls high and dry.

This condition was likewise stressed by Secretary of Commerce Hoover, who impressed the need for action of a conservative nature, when the report of engineers investigating the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway project pointed out the alarming erosion on the Canadian side, indicating that it may be expected to increase. Obviously it would be many years before these things come to pass, but the gradually diminishing fall of the water over the American side presents no very inspiring spectacle to those with the scenic interest of America at heart.

An oft-returning Canadian visitor, one of whose hobbies has been Niagara Falls, sees many indications that the falls will dry up completely, in such signs as rocks, once submerged and now high and dry, the absence of spray over the Horseshoe fall, and the like. A number of Great lakes canal systems which divert water from the channel of the Niagara river are blamed for the difficulty by authorities who have sought the causes for the condition now prevailing. Some of these canals, the Erie-Hudson, notably, have been deepened, new artificial waterways are under construction in the region, and all contrive to lessen the volume of water racing over the falls.

The extinction of the falls is aeons in the distance, of course, but attention should be directed to the situation now, if for no more serious reason, so that future generations of honeymooners may not be confronted with the terrifying dilemma of having no place to go.

One wonders how it is that Senator Willis, spokesman for the Anti-Saloon League in the senate, permitted the sidetracking of General Andrews' enforcement measure without even raising his voice to a whisper.

It is noted that Senator Fess, who arose to defense of the course of the administration toward agriculture, is not a candidate for reelection this year.

Perhaps what Senator Borah means is that there should not be any national referendum except that in which the vote is for a candidate.

How can the farmers expect any real attention from Washington with things like the Cathcart case taking up so much time?

AT THE CAPITAL

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, June 14.—"That was a terrible break you made at the Bruce-Mellon wedding," one of his fellow congressmen remarked the other day to Representative John Philip Hill of Baltimore.

"W-w-what b-b-break?" stammered Hill, turning pale.

"You had on the wrong kind of collar and tie to go with a cutaway coat," his friend informed him.

"I did not," cried the Marylander hotly. "I had on exactly the right kind."

The other produced a newspaper clipping.

It was a picture of Hill, in elegantly cut morning coat, high standing collar, with turnover corners, a black string tie, and, of course, all the accessories.

"What's the matter with that?" the portrait's original demanded.

The friend produced another clipping.

It was a picture of David K. Este Bruce, the bridegroom, in tail coat, turndown double collar and a light four-in-hand.

"Well, he's wrong," Hill insisted indignantly. "I don't care who he is. That kind of neckwear and a morning coat are downright incongruous. My way's the right way."

"What, Dave Bruce make a mistake like that at his own wedding!" exlaimed the friend incredulously. "'Tisn't likely."

By this time quite a crowd of congressmen had gathered around the disputants, in the House of Representatives' lobby.

Hill appealed to them.

Opinions differed. Some favored Hill, some his critic, and some held that Hill's collar and tie and Bruce's collar and tie were both all right—that it was a mere matter of taste on the part of the wearer.

At this point Representative Cooper of Wisconsin passed.

Cooper has worn a cutaway for nobody knows how many years.

He had on Hill's kind of a collar and Bruce's kind of tie.

Hill refused to call it a draw. He still contends that his combination was absolutely O. K.

In the absence of his son, who, with his bride, is on his way to Rome, young David's father, Senator William Cabell Bruce of Maryland, is equally positive that his offspring's getup was correct to the last detail.

What gives a touch of especial bitterness to the dispute is the fact that the two schools' respective proponents are from the same state and the same town. Civil strife notoriously is the worst strife of all.

PARIS IMPRESSIONS

By O. O. McINTYRE

PARIS, June 14.—I stood on the subway platform in the Avenue de l'Opera this evening and watched Paris debouching from work. Torrents of humanity cascaded from shops and stores to be swallowed up by taxis, tubes and busses.

What strikes you most is its jaunty, carefree spirit—the utter lack of responsibility. Pedestrians thread their way through the traffic maze laughing and chatting oblivious to the disaster at their heels. The heart is worn on the sleeve.

All shades of life are etched lightly like prisms of color from a cathedral window. There are midinettes with fanciful boxes. Whiskered papas pedaling home on bicycles. Boulevard dandies seeking first conquest of the day. Grand dames with lorgnettes.

Soldiers in sky blue with oddly visored caps. Solid merchants distinguished by heavy Prince Alberts. Workmen in blue aprons. The old crones who mumble and snarl. Lapel flowers and mourning bands. Shy country peasants in denim suits.

It is the blending of a curious mixture flowing by as swiftly as a mill race. In an hour the streets are desolated. I have walked along the Rue de la Paix at 7:30 without seeing a soul. Paris dines at nine o'clock. And at eight the streets fill again for the dinner promenade.

Paris has its electrical sign display, but it hasn't the gaudiness of Broadway. Ciro's sign, for instance, is two and a half feet long and a foot high in a thin delicate pink. There is an electrical restraint that is rather appealing to the New Yorker accustomed to pyrotechnics.

Montmartre is a little more brilliant, but real Parisians rarely go there. It is the Paris Broadway of the tourists who expect to see something naughty and sit next table to Mr. and Mrs. Joe Silch, the dry goods people, and their daughter Flora from Bucyrus, Ohio.

American newsboys who sell American papers apparently prosper here. Four who operate in midtown have been here since the war. One with leather lungs who used to be at Brooklyn Bridge tells me he brought his mother over two years ago, married a French girl and has bought a home near St. Cloud. Most of their sales, he tells me, are made in front of the Cafe de la Paix.

One never fails to find a barehead group standing at the grave of the unknown soldier under the Arc de Triomphe. I have seen them there in a heavy rain and blinding snowstorm. To me it is a haunting daily tragedy, for in the groups is always a motherly looking woman who perhaps feels that after all it may be her boy lying under the blanket of constantly fresh flowers.

He has grown chummy with an elephantine French Dane—not dame—and they frolic daily in the hotel garden. And when a lady in a perfume shop sprayed him with a fancy odor he seemed to like it. He has been in two fights, winning the first, but was badly trounced in the second. Still, it was a bigger dog that licked him.

NO PEACE FOR THE POLE

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

The Poles, as a general thing
(Before war was eternally banned),
Were the prey of some Kaiser or King
Who wanted a slice of their land.
At times they were bowing their necks to the yoke
Of arrogant foreign oppression,
Anon they were dealing a masterly stroke
And repelling a plotted aggression.

A Pole never knew, when he rose
To plow or to harvest the hay,
Just which of his numerous foes
He would have to contend with that day.
But he always was sure he would need before night
To abandon his regular labors,
To take up his musket and join in a fight
Against one of his powerful neighbors.

He slept with his arms by his side,
For the war he was certain would come.
When a column of smoke he descried
Or his ears caught the boom of a drum,
He told all the children to run in the house,
Shook down a good feed for the cattle,
And bidding a hasty goodbye to his spouse,
He hurried away to the battle.

And now (as we mentioned before)
That fierce national strife is unknown,
The Pole who can't live without war
Has started a fight of his own.
And when it is settled a new one will start,
For his life has been always exciting.
And the Pole is aware in his innermost heart
That he never can live without fighting!

"WHY?"

By HAL COCHRAN

As every day passes, most every wee child asks questions galore that near drive mother wild. The what and the where and the whyfore of things, are words to the singsong that every kid sings.

You mustn't do that and you mustn't do this are things a child's told so he won't go amiss. You're aiming to help him, and hope to get by, but always are stopped when the youngster asks "Why?"

Too often all parents lay rules down offhand that minds of the wee folks can ne'er understand. 'Tis well to explain them. 'Tis well to be stern. For, knowing the whys, is the way children learn.

When talking things over and making rules clear, you're helping the child to go right, without fear. You'll get his respect 'cause he knows that you're grown, and you'll help him to build up a mind of his own.

WHAT IS THE SOUL?

Editor Miami Daily News:

The killing of his imbecile daughter by a prominent physician several months ago has led to much newspaper discussion in re the soul.

Misconception as to the truth about the soul is the basic error upon which are almost all false religious teachings.

With our minds freed from preconceived ideas respecting the soul as a mysterious, indefinable something, put into man's body at birth and abstracted at death, good souls going to heaven and bad souls to eternal torment, let us examine the Bible record of the soul's creation in Genesis 2:7.

In the scriptures the word translated "soul" (Hebrew, neh-phesh) signifies "a sentient being." With this definition in mind, we note (1) God formed the physical organism or body "out of the dust of the ground;" (2) the spirit of life, called "the breath of life" (because life is sustained by the breathing process), was communicated to this body; (3) a living soul, or sentient being, resulted.

The breath or spirit of life, entering the body, inflated the lungs and caused the heart to beat, the blood to flow, the eyes to see, the ears to hear, etc., with the result that the corpse-like organism was changed into a soul, a being capable of sense-perception and thought.

Note carefully the language used in Genesis 2:7. The Bible does not state that man RECEIVED a living soul, but that "man BECAME a living soul." Quite a difference! Man does not have a soul; he IS a soul.

Expressed in an alegbraic equation: Body plus "breath of life" equals soul. Take away either body or breath, the result is zero. Destroy the organism of man's body by burning, cutting or disease, or cut off the supply of air to the lungs by drowning or otherwise, the soul ceases to exist. We say the man is dead. The Bible says of this condition, "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth (to dust, as science also agrees), and that very day his thoughts perish" (Psalm 146:4).

The word "soul" is used in every-day conversation exactly in the scriptural sense when we say, "The place was absolutely deserted; we didn't see a soul!" Do we mean we did not see a disembodied spirit, popularly called a soul? No; we mean we did not see a person, a living being, a soul!

Is the soul immortal, indestructible? Let the Word of God make answer. "The soul that sinneth, it SHALL DIE!" (Ezekiel 18:4, 20). "Every soul that will not hear that prophet (the Christ) shall be destroyed from among the people" (Acts 3:23).

Some say, "Oh, yes, we know that the body dies, but the soul cannot die." Please remember the soul ceases to exist when the body is destroyed, for the soul results from the union of two absolute essentials, viz., body and breath of life. Disrupt this union, the soul is destroyed, and the soul cannot exist again except through divine power, as in its original creation.

The erroneous teaching that man possesses an immortal soul is the foundation of the eternal torment theory, that Satanic blasphemy against the God of Love, the Father of Eternal Mercy. Its advocates must necessarily reason that if the soul cannot die or be destroyed, the wicked must live forever in torment, whereas the Bible distinctly declares, "All the wicked will God destroy" (Psalm 145:20), and "The wages of sin is DEATH" (Romans 6:23). Read also Psalm 101:8 and Levit. 23:30.

Misunderstanding the nature of the soul and believing it cannot die is the foundation of Spiritualism, which claims the dead can communicate with the living, whereas the scriptures declare that spiritism is demonism and that evil spirits (evil angels), under Satan's control, are responsible for spiritualistic manifestations, instead of the dead, that "know not anything" (Eccl. 9:5), whose very "thoughts have perished" (Psalm 146:4).

False teachings in re the soul have caused Christians in general to lose all interest in the second coming of the Lord Jesus and in the resurrection work of His millennial kingdom, for they reason, if none are dead, how could there be a resurrection of the dead? "Jesus will cause all souls to live again, for he bought them by his death."

Limited time and space will not permit the examination of other false teachings resulting from erroneous views about the soul. Some may ask, whence came all these false doctrines? They all originated in the Garden of Eden when Satan, the Serpent, "the father of lies," declared to Mother Eve, "Ye shall NOT surely die," whereas the Lord Jehovah had said to Adam, "Thou SHALT SURELY DIE!" Shall we believe God's truth or Satan's lie?

THE POLITICAL OUTLOOK

(Dearborn Independent)

It looks like an active year in politics. Regular Republicanism is meeting unexpected opposition, which yet might have been expected if politicians possessed any knowledge of the public. The defeat of McKinley in Illinois, of Pepper in Pennsylvania, of Stanfield in Oregon, all of them men of character and ability, discloses a dissatisfaction which is indisputably present, even if its causes and content are not yet clear. And it promises to be a year of unusual political interest.

Many elements may be recognized in the dissatisfaction. Doubtless the administration attitude on the World Court is at odds with the nation's attitude on the same question. The people also feel that there has been a good deal of official insincerity and willful bungling on the prohibition question. Politicians keep prophesying that prohibition will be an issue in the campaign. They are mistaken, unless they mean that the enforcement of prohibition is a demand which the people will make in the campaign.

But perhaps the chief source of dissatisfaction throughout the country is the subtle and uneasy sense of the people that the country has come under strong corporation influence, that the government has almost entirely succumbed to financial control. This in no sordid sense; no one has been bought or sold. But when the foreign policies of the administration are dictated by one financier and the domestic policies of the nation by another financier, neither of whom has ever conceived a progressive thought, the people are quick to sense it. They may not know who the financier-foreign adviser of the president is; they may know the name of the other financier, but may not guess the extent to which he runs things at Washington; yet they feel creeping through the veins of the nation an element which is not warm to the popular heart.

We wanted and needed a business administration in this country. We wanted conservatism of the progressive sort. We wanted a cessation of government interference in business. But what we have got instead of a business administration is a corporation administration, which is not the same thing. And what we have got instead of progressive conservatism is a most amazing reactionism. And the cessation of government interference in business has had but one effect, to loose the most lawless elements of American business upon a career of exploitation, criminal in its recklessness, for which the country cannot possibly escape dear payment.

Now, these are the things present, but largely inarticulate as yet, among the people. He is no friend of President Coolidge who would mislead him by silence on this point. Certain influences have been built into our government, whose effects, now ripening, are resented by the people. And what has begun at the polls is nothing to what will come unless the popular will in government is somehow substituted for the coterie-will in government.

These are the things which men around the president are saying, but not to him. And somebody should say it to him, unless, as it may easily be, the president is proceeding upon the assumption that the financiers are the real rulers of the country and therefore the safest advisers of the government. If this is the president's opinion, he is so wrong that the national reaction against such a position may sweep his party from power.

FACE TO FACE WITH FACTS

(The Key West Citizen)

Pessimists who claim that Florida is slowing up and authors of unfavorable propaganda concerning this flourishing state cannot face facts and keep on preaching.

Miami, which has in recent years been the scene of the greatest activity, gain and growth in all lines, may well be taken as the accurate pulse of the entire state.

Authentic figures compiled by the Miami realty board disclose the following facts that should be of especial interest to those who may have believed that 1925 would prove the banner year in Florida's phenomenal growth.

In these figures comparison is made of conditions during the first three months of 1925 and the same in the first quarter of the present year.

During the period mentioned in 1925 Miami's building permits totaled $7,375,101, and for same period in 1926 it was $10,910,411, an increase of $3,535,310, a gain of 47 per cent. In the same comparative statement Miami Beach shows a gain of 26.5 per cent and Coral Gables 25.6 per cent for the same time. Bank deposits increased 30.8 per cent and bank clearings 72.3 per cent in Miami in comparison, and the postal receipts show an increase of 91.4 per cent, almost double. The Miami Western Union office handled 1,960,714 telegrams during the first quarter in 1925, and for the same period in 1926 the number was 4,449,850, an increase of 2,489,136, a gain of 127.0 per cent. The railroad tonnage of freight received gained 57.2 per cent and freight forwarded grew 109.5 per cent in the comparative figures.

But it was in municipal construction that Miami shows the greatest percentage of gain, though the amount involved is not noticeably large, being $96,650 in the three-months' period of 1925 and $637,400 for the same period in 1926, an increase of $540,750, a gain of 558.4 per cent.

What is true of Miami along lines of progress is true of all other points in the state in proportionate measure, and this assertion can also be amply substantiated by authentic figures.

So if those who may be preaching the erroneous doctrine that Florida is slipping cannot honestly do so if they will stand face to face with facts in an unbiased, unprejudiced way.

Bible Thought for Today

"Speak not thou in thine heart . . . saying, for my righteousness the Lord hath brought me in to possess this land."—Deut. 9:4.

Morals

In a recent issue of "Antioch Notes," a pamphlet published currently in the interests of Antioch college, there is presented an interesting discussion of morals, dealing with the transition from the old world of arbitrary authority to a new world of belief and conduct, based upon critically tested evidence.

The writer believes that the new world will be a finer and more stable one, but indicates the danger of easy-going optimism as equipment for the passage. The old morality may have been arbitrary and ill-adapted to modern life, while the new may go far toward meeting the needs of humanity, and yet if a period of immorality intervenes, the wreck of life might be so complete that society would be forced to ascend again from moral barbarism.

It is true that a small part of our population lives always morally on the level of beasts, held in check only by the moral forces of society. It is equally true that this primitive element, sometimes well educated and highly polished, lacking moral restraint and social purpose, with contempt for those traits, boldly presents itself today as normal and typical, and seeks to set standards as the authentic representative of society. Many men do not discriminate in the selection of moral standards, and are ready disciples of those who prey upon the gullibility of the people. Fortunately, however, they are in the minority, and it is to be doubted if the prophets of false moral codes will ever secure enough converts to upset true standards of morality.

The advance of science has done much to dispel ignorance and superstition, and people are thinking for themselves as never before. Some of the old ideas belong in the discard but there are elementary rules of conduct which must be generally observed if the social structure is to be preserved. Among them may be included the restraint of animal instincts and passions to the welfare of social and individual health, the subordination of self-interest to concern for the well being of mankind in general, and the keeping of the mind and heart open to all truth.

If society is to endure, these principles must be the rule and guide of mankind. By their observance we will be enabled to profit by the good and discard the undesirable elements of a new freedom of thought and action, which will bring greater happiness to humanity. If we ignore them, fredom will become license, [illegible] relapse into grossness and animal servitude will result.

Air Gliders

That America has been foremost among the nations of the world in development of the airplane will not be gainsaid by any who have given close consideration to the problems of aerial navigation. The first heavier-than-air machine to fly successfully came out of these United States; its refinement to the present state of comparative perfection may be traced largely to the same source.

But there is a phase of mechanical flight to which little attention has been paid in this country—that of the air glider. Nor have any other of the world powers excepting Germany, given it serious and active consideration. Such a condition may not be due altogether to Germany's keen perception in recognizing the possibilities of the glider; stipulations of the peace treaty have curtailed German aviation in motored planes, and the tendency to develop the glider was natural under the circumstances.

Herr Ferdinand Schulz broke the record for sustained flight in a motorless airplane recently, remaining aloft almost [illegible] and one-half hours. In itself that [illegible] a remarkable achievement; but it [illegible]les in the light of the pilot's declara[illegible]n of confidence in his ability to make [illegible] record 24 hours, or even longer, be[illegible] the summer wanes. The earliest [illegible]neers in the field of aviation con[illegible]cted their experiments with gliders. [illegible]y were the trail blazers. They had [illegible] knowledge of the air that has [illegible]anied development of the power[illegible] however, and several of them [illegible]ed their lives to aerial navigation [illegible] course of their experiments. It [illegible]oteworthy, in those days, if a glider [illegible] lasted but a few minutes.

[illegible] present planes approach mechani[illegible]fection, but they are enormous [illegible]sters. This factor has been re[illegible]e in large measure for the pro[illegible] cost of travel by air. There is no [illegible]te prospect of effecting notice[illegible] conservation through redesign[illegible]rs or mechanical refinement; the [illegible]ich a saving now would seem to [illegible]lization of the air power that keeps the glider in flight, much in the same manner that a kite is flown. It is improbable that motorless gliders, depending altogether on the skill of the pilot in extracting power from the air currents, will ever be practical for long distance flights, or freight or passenger carrying. But a plane equipped for gliding, and having motors that could be brought into play when necessary, might be a successful step toward solution of the problem.

Some of our native experts might well divert at least a part of their talents into these channels; the glider is going to be an important factor in future aviation.

The Olive Branch

Creditable sportsmanship was shown by the Miami Realty board in applying for readmission to the Florida Association of Realty Boards, from which it resigned some two years ago following the failure of the state organization to discipline Tampa and St. Petersburg boards for violation of resolutions governing community publicity at the Washington national convention. Tampa realtors are also to be congratulated on having made the first overtures for peace, especially since this may be taken as an admission of the justice of Miami's stand.

In any case the important thing is that Florida realtors are again a solid cohesive group, free from regional disputes and schisms. This consummation was the more devoutly to be wished in view of the fact that the national association of realty boards will hold its mid-winter convention here, and it would never do for internal dissension to dull the luster of the reception that is planned for the visitors at that time.

Mind and Body

There was nothing new or unusual in the activities of Emile Coue, who died recently at his home in Nancy, France, after achieving fame as a professor of applied psychology, to make him famous. He had not posed as a doctor, nor had he claimed possession of any curative personal powers; but because he met with an extraordinary success in making those which whom he came in contact undertake to help to cure themselves of ill, and in many cases to work theretofore unexpected recoveries, he was hailed far and wide. When, a few years ago, he was persuaded to come to the United States, he was almost mobbed by those who had gained the idea that he possessed some magic touch which might eliminate human ills, and since, of course, this was not true, his formula, "Day by day in every way I am getting better and better," became more or less of a byword, and Coue left the country in disgust. His disgust was mingled with astonishment that the people should be at once so gullible and apparently so ignorant of a truth established before he was born. Since first men began to practice the art of curing it has been recognized that a large share of the effort to make well must be on the part of the patient. All Professor Coue did was to seek through applied psychology to emphasize the patient's part.

The control of the mind over the body in the matter of human ills is not at all confined to ailments that may be called imaginary. It is present in ailments that are painfully real, and unless the mind can be made to respond there is a point beyond which effort to restore the body will not avail. Every honest practitioner of medicine will demand that his patient adopt a helpful frame of mind, and it is not unusual that medicines are prescribed not so much because of their potency in themselves as because of the encouragement their use will be to having one say to himself, as Coue would have him say, that "Day by day in every way I am getting better and better." The repetition of a formula means nothing, but belief in it means everything, and the most necessary belief is in one's self.

There are many people who unconsciously practice the Coue method, who did so before ever they heard of this foremost advocate of auto-suggestion, as it is called. Sometimes they assert they have warded off attacks of nausea and of headache and the like by will power. But there are better examples in which invalids have helped the physician in his effort to help them.

The system of one man is worth reciting. Whenever he feels himself run down, whether he has consulted a physician or not, he buys a new outfit of clothing and goes away for a brief spell to some favorite play place. The assurance of new and well-fitting clothes, the change of scene, the removal from every-day worry, all play their part in the recovery, but all make up the whole of determination to get well.

It is unfortunate that in some quarters Professor Coue should have been thought a quack; that came of America's late habit of demanding over-advertised European lecturers. Coue never made any claims for himself. He simply taught the value of auto-suggestion in treatment of human ills, and by works demonstrated that he was a great teacher.

Early Risers

Those who are impelled to rise early from their couches these summer mornings are the folks who really extract the most from life. Nature is never more lovely at any season of the year than at this time, and those who have never had a "close-up" of sunrise have missed something that is worth infinitely more than a few hours of "extra" slumber, perhaps made necessary by an inclination in the direction of denying themselves rest far too late the night before.

Persons residing in large centers of population perhaps will say that there is nothing attractive about watching the sunrise over factories and house tops, or noting its creeping beams across busy streets. But they forget that in even the meanest part of a busy mart, or in the most humble residential neighborhood, many persons have coaxed into life a bit of greensward—a miniature lawn, more beautiful by very reason of its uniqueness of location.

One is forcibly reminded that every time a tree is sacrificed in a city street, just a bit more pleasure is being taken out of the lives of those who have their well being in that particular neighborhood. The onward march of progress makes pitiful sacrifice of the bounties of nature. We do not appreciate these things until they are gone.

But when nature is the most inviting, when the air is the purest, and the sun shines the most invitingly, at early dawn, those who have cultivated the early rising habit really pity the folks who miss it all by lying late abed.

The National Educational association has decreed that sport should be given second place in the schools, but they also passed a resolution asking for a federal department of education.

The Detroit man who stole a rare rug from the art museum and was caught by the police no doubt has lost faith in the story about the carpet of Bagdad.

The man whose wife told him she would bake a cherry pie if he would pick and stone the cherries, decided that he liked lemon pies better.

Addition of four thousand under-cover men to the prohibition forces will add to the cost of liquor distribution in more ways than one.

The seasons are mighty well arranged; it would be terrible if fresh cherry pies and corn-on-the-cob came at the same time.

One reason for the slump in summer radio sales is that one cannot well buy radio and inner tubes at the same time.

Lockjaw has been almost eliminated from Fourth of July celebrations but sorethroat is still with us.

A wonderful thing would be the discovery of some health food that is also palatable.

It would be terrible if the Charleston should become popular in Holland.

AT THE CAPITAL

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, July 10.—Republican insurgency—described by the socialistic Congressman Berger as "the elephant's tail"—has reached such proportions in the last week or so that one of two things appears likely to happen:

1—Either the tail will shortly be wagging the elephant, or else

2—It is quite among the possibilities that the tail will detach itself from the elephant and undertake to be a party on its own account.

To appreciate how formidable the elephant's tail—insurgency—has become, it is first necessary to consider the question:

What is a political insurgent?

The answer seems to be that he is a member of a political party who is out of harmony with its leadership to some extent.

Now President Coolidge, by virtue of his office, at least theoretically is the Republican leader at the present time. Any Republican who bolts one of his essential policies becomes an insurgent automatically.

No Coolidge policy is more absolutely an essential one than his policy toward agriculture. It is to this policy that the recent startling spread of Republican insurgency is due.

Just how extensive it is throughout the country remains to be seen. Even as to the house of representatives there may be a little uncertainty, the lower house is so unwieldy.

But the Senate is easy to size up. If the Senate is an index, the elephant and his tail are near the parting of the ways.

Senators LaFollette, Frazier, Norris and Nye have been Republican insurgents all along. Though a nuisance to the party organization, they were numerically too weak to be very dangerous.

On the farm proposition it was to have been expected that Senator McNary would be an insurgent, inasmuch as he was the author of one of the bills which flies straight in the face of everything the administration considers agriculture entitled to.

Senators Capper, Howell, Johnson, McMaster and Norbeck have been occasional insurgents, so perhaps it is not surprising that they are completely off the reservation over the question of farm relief.

But Senators Cameron, Cummins, Deneen, Gooding, Harreld, Jones of Washington, Means, Oddie, Pine, Robinson of Indiana, Schall and Stanfield?

These were "regulars." They are insurgents as to farm relief.

And Senator Watson, who was a recognized "White House advisor" and frequently its spokesman in the senate? He won his primary campaign in Indiana on an insurgent platform—as to farm relief and other things, too.

Most significant of all, Senator Curtis voted against the administration on the farm relief bill. Curtis is Republican floor leader in the upper house of congress. His defection must have given President Coolidge a jolt.

In fact, the president would have been definitely turned down in the senate on the farm issue, but for the Democratic votes of Senators Bayard, Bruce, Dill, Edwards, Gerry, King, Reed of Missouri, and Walsh, and for the votes also of Senators Borah and Couzens, who often are Republican insurgents but who happened not to like that bill.

That makes 26 Republican senate votes—counting Borah and Couzens as insurgents, whenever they choose to be—that President Coolidge cannot control.

Insurgency on such a scale as this becomes more than mere insurgency. It hints at a party split.

NEW YORK LETTER

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, July 10.—In the days when bung-starters swung freely on the Bowery, the entire district was fretted with dives picturesquely named. Their owners, too had names that fitted in with the free and easy spirit of the day. All are now a mere memory.

Prim floral and beauty parlors occupy sites of the rowdy swing door saloons and sawdust carpeted barrel houses. Only old timers recall Scotty Lavell, Bull Lawrence, Awful Gardener, The Allen, Mike Callahan, Billy McGlory, Stitch McCarty, Silver Dollar Smith, Paddy Gleason, and Nigger Mike Salter.

There were joints called the Cob Dock, Gumbossey's Flea Bag, The Doctor's, The Billy Goat, The Sailor's Return, The Scotchman's, Harry Hill's, Owney Gheoghan's, The Bull Pen, Jumbo's, The Red Hot, The New Market, The Palm Garden, The Slide, Mother Olsen's and scores of others.

To say nothing of McGurk's Suicide Hall whither soiled ladies crept to quaff carbolic acid in beer—the popular hemlock of that day. These were the odd nests sought by slummers. Waiters tied rocks in the end of their towels in case of a rough house.

The slightest display of freshness on the part of a patron meant he would hear the birdies—tweet, tweet—and be carried out feet up. When a bouncer yelled "Hand him a lily!" it was a certain sign that someone's gay world would become suddenly blurred.

In Nigger Mike Salter's, where the one time Izzy Baline, now Irving Berlin, pounded the ivories, when a fracas started a quartet of waiters would dive into the cellar, shed their aprons and come up clad as policemen. Everybody fled in fear of a raid.

Many of the dumps were havens for the "gay cats," as the hobos and quondam safe-blowers were known. At The Alligator two huge straws were served with a nickel beer so two could drink from the same glass. Life was rough but red-corpuscled. The Bowery bowed only to the rule of the bare knuckle.

There is an old world charm to be found in Vesey and Barclay streets west of Church. This is the market for the sale of religious goods to all parts of the world. The atmosphere is subdued even to the pale orchid twilight effect in the stores. The clerks move about in rubber-heeled silence and have the benign dignity that goes with their calling. Windows display crucifixes of the bleeding Christ, altar robes and utensils, choir boy costumes, pulpit stands with ponderous Bibles, waxen saints and the like.

There are more newspapers, magazines and other periodicals sold at the intersection of Sixth Avenue and 42d street than any other place in town. Three corners have one newspaper hutch each and at the Bryant Park corner are three, including the stand for out-of-town papers and the hutch of Blind George, which was placed there by his loyal customers when he was forced to leave his Herald Square corner. The reader may find everything at one of these corners from the Walla Walla Bugle to La Vie Parisienne. Most of the stands are open at dawn and remain open until after midnight. A big magazine trade comes from chorus girls after the theater. They fortify themselves with a box of fudge and sheaves of zippy reading after the arduous day in the arts.

MAKING 'EM BEHAVE

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

Time was in the Balkans when Princes and Kings
Were supreme in monarchical power,
They always were having their gay little flings
And flitting from flower to flower.
The subjects who muttered that it was not right
For men who were formally wedded
To go to casinos and stay there all night,
Were usually jailed or beheaded.

A King was a King, and no wrong could he do;
On the primrose strewn path he proceeded
And the people's chief duty, as well they all knew,
Was to get him the cash that he needed.
As to how he might mend his erroneous ways
They never dared make a suggestion,
For the morals of monarchs, in those happy days,
Was not a debatable question.

But now when a Prince starts to kick up his heels
And indulge in his pet dissipations—
They give him enough for his clothes and his meals
But nothing for cards and flirtations.
And when he wakes up and discovers at last
The terrible pass he is brought to,
He finds that it costs him too much to be fast,
And behaves as a good ruler ought to.

In future the Princes that rule the domains
Where they once used to roister and revel—
Provided of course, that they have any brains—
Will behave, as one says, on the level.
For if dancing around cuts their revenue down,
The statutes may well be made stronger,
And what is the use of a nicely blocked crown—
If a man isn't King any longer?

No boy of the present generation is ever going to brag about the whisky that father used to make.

They stopped grafting in the New Jersey penitentiary, and a lot of the inmates left the place the next day.

Steel skyscrapers, it was believed, would last indefinitely. But that was before the Charleston was invented.

WHO IS GOD?

Editor, Miami Daily News: "All nature speaks, "there is a God," and yet how few among the civilized peoples of earth believe in a personal creator and upholder of all things, while others have no clearer conception of the only true God than have the heathen in darkest Africa.

Accepting the Bible as God's revelation of himself and his purposes, we read God said to Moses, "I am that I am;" i. e., God ever was, is now and ever shall be, without beginning and without end. Again, "I am the Almighty God;" i. e., omnipotent, all powerful, irresistible. To Moses God declared his name was "Jehovah," which signifies the self-existing one, with life in himself.

The Word of God reveals four primary attributes of Jehovah. 1. Justice and judgment are the habitation of thy throne." (Psalm 89:14) It is impossible for God to deviate in any degree from exact justice. 2. Wisdom. God's wisdom is manifest in the infinite variety and marvelous beauty of the created universe. "Oh Lord, how manifold are thy works, in wisdom thou hast made them all." (Job. 36:5) Read also Job, chapters 36 to 41. It is impossible for God to make the slightest error of miscalculation as to time or method of accomplishing his purposes. 3. Power. "Power belongeth unto God." "In the Lord is everlasting strength." (Psalm 62:11; Isaiah 26:4). God's power is limitless, and none can withstand it. 4. Love. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son," (John 3:16). "God is love!" (John 4:8) Can we imagine a God of love preparing a place of eternal torment for any living being, especially ignorant heathen? No! Nor has he done so.

Moreover, in Jehovah, God, Love, Power, Wisdom and Justice are exactly balanced and find perfect expression in his every act. "His work is perfect. A God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is he." (Deut. 32:4).

In addition to these four outstanding attributes of Jehovah God, we note also his unchangeableness, foreknowledge, pity, faithfulness, goodness and mercy, tender sympathy, long-suffering, in fact every characteristic mentioned by St. Paul in 1 Corinthians, 13th chapter.

"God is a spirit," Jesus declared. (John 4:24). He is eternal, immortal, invisible." "Who only hath immortality (1 Timothy 1:17; 6:16), therefore, it follows that man, his creature, does not possess inherent immortality. Nor are angels immortal, because Satan is to be destroyed in due time. (Hebrews 2:14).

"Jehovah is the only God, there is none beside him." (Deut. 4:35). He declares, "I am the Lord, that is my name; and my glory will I not give to another." (Isaiah 42:8). Trinity of Gods, but exists alone, as the one and only true God. The Jewish people believed in one God, therefore were and are unable to accept the teaching of so-called Orthodoxy that Jesus Christ was God. St. Paul did not believe in or teach a "Trinity" of "3 times 1 is 1" (any school-boy will tell us "3 times 1 is 3")—for he declares in his epistle to the Ephesians, "One God and father of all, who is above all. . .one Lord (Jesus Christ), one faith, one baptism." (Eph. 4:5, 6).

It may surprise some to learn that God has a well-defined purpose or plan. From the popular viewpoint, it would appear that Satan has been the arch-schemer and has overreached Jehovah during the past 6,000 years of man's history on earth.

But not so. Jehovah God has merely permitted evil to take its course, and has interfered only where the Devil would have frustrated God's arrangements for his peculiar people.

In Ephesians 3:11 we read that God has "an eternal purpose, which he purposed in Christ Jesus, our Lord." (Another translation reads: "A plan of the ages.") This divine plan is similar to that of an architect. The Old Testament contains the drawings or plans, while the new testament sets forth the specifications, or details.

(I shall be pleased to answer any sincere inquiries as to this "Divine plan of the ages.")

How wonderful is Jehovah: How lovely, how adorable is our God, there is none beside him!

"The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firament showeth his handiwork." (Psalm 19). "Oh, that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful work to the children of men!" (Psalm 107:8).

Eternal Lord, Almighty King,
Who ruled ere aught that is was framed,
When all was shaped unto thy will,
"He rules!" Creation's voice proclaimed.
Unimaged and beyond compare,
From chance, from change, forever free;
Through endless ages be adored
Thy Power, Thine Infinite Majesty!
My God, my Saviour, Thou, mine All,
My Rock, my Tower, when woes befall,
My Standard high, my Refuge nigh,
Thou ever hearest when I call!
Into Thine hand my soul I trust,
And sleeping, waking, know Thee near,
And e'en in Death itself, Thou, Lord,
Art with me—naught shall make me fear!

To those who have been privileged to know the only true God, Jehovah declares, "Ye are my witnesses, that I am God!" (Isaiah 43:12).

DROPPING ENCUMBRANCES

By MRS. H. S. JENISON

The great apostle said, "Let us lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset us, and run with patience the race that is before us."

Weights of any sort are burdensome. Mental worries, business troubles, misunderstandings between friends, all hold us back from the best in life, and hamper our progress as the iron soles on the feet of the deep-sea diver. When on a journey, consider the physical and mental effect of several heavy suit-cases and an assortment of bundles. These worries in visible form detract from the pleasure of a journey, as a false note in the music of an orchestra mars the harmony of a symphony. In all conditions of life, it is well to travel as light as possible.

Many people at the present time, realizing the weight of the burdens they are carrying, are planning to unload as many as possible, that life may become simpler and happier. Responsibilities come to all, many of which we cannot and would not forego, but the wise man is he who lays aside all unnecessary causes of worry, and frees his journey through life from the encumbrances that prevent him from getting the best out of his experiences. We pass through life but once. Let the journey be one of simple joys, of helpfulness, of broadening experiences, instead of a constant endeavor to accumulate property and wealth, which brings, often, more care than happiness.

A COLLEGE PRESIDENT

(The Nation.)

What is a college president? The regents of the University of Oregon are ready to tell us. The official statement of their investigating committee which nominated Dr. Hall gives the reasons for their choice:

> Dr. Hall, as president of the University of Oregon, will prove to be a very popular man. He is very easy to meet, has a pleasant smile, and one is immediately impressed by his unbounded energy. He is not only a real college executive, but has had business experience as well in connection with one of the banks in Madison, Wis. Dr. Hall is a very able public speaker and his services undoubtedly will be in great demand throughout the state. We are very enthusiastic about the new president.

Possibly Dr. Hall has other qualities besides those which led to his selection, but at any rate he has a voice and a pleasant smile, and has been connected with a bank. Is anything more needed?

THE MIRACLE

(St. Petersburg Times.)

The miracle of Florida is not the growth that has carried the name of the state to all quarters of the globe in the span of two or three years, but the neglect of a century.

What drove tens of thousands of farmers into the arid back country of the west to risk the hazards of rainless desert and the uncertain returns of dry farming when Florida was growing wild with the leaping greenery of untilled soils? What has held other tens of thousands to the chance of a single crop of corn worth the average of about $13 an acre in some Middle West states when Florida stood waiting and ready to grow the same golden crop in a broadcast seeding that has shown a government average of $109 to the acre? The answer doubles the puzzle of the question. Some will say—lack of railroads. But they had to lay track to the desert southwest. People had to brave hardships tenfold to carry progress into the west, the northwest. Progress is not a pillar of fire leading men on. It is the shadow of their passing. It is the silver smoke of campfires already deserted for the bivouac another mile farther up the trail.

A SCANDAL IN THE FAMILY

By IRVIN S. COBB

A young Irishman whose family was scattered pretty well over the English speaking portions of the globe emigrated to America. Soon after his arrival in New York he paid a visit to the Bronx zoo. He halted in front of a cage containing one of the largest kangaroos in captivity. After watching the curious creatures for some time in an awed silence, he hailed a keeper.

"What's that thing?" he asked.

"That," said the keeper in his best professional manner, "is a marsupial mammal that carries its young in a pouch on its breast, lives on roots and herbs, can jump 20 feet at one leap, is able to knock a human being down with a kick from either hind leg, and is a native of Australia."

"For the love of Hiven!" cried the Irishman, bursting into tears, "Me sisther's married to wan of thim!"

Bible Thought for Today

Deflated

Secretary Wilbur asked for 71 new warships at a cost of $750,000,000. The house naval committee votes to allow him 16 at a cost of a little over $250,000,000. The country has been heard from.

It looked for a time as if the navy inflationists had the bit in their teeth and were on a runaway. The support of President Coolidge for the enormous building program sponsored by the secretary of the navy was secured. If he stood, as Secretary Wilbur represented him as standing, the president is rebuffed by the action of the house committee along with his secretary.

The opinion of the country, once it became vocal, was clearly hostile to the inflated program of the navy. There was a sinister and a cynical aspect to these big navy demands. Here was America, officially representing itself as opposed to war and the making of war, yet about to embark upon the greatest fighting machine program in the world's history. The situation placed America in a hypocritical attitude. The pressure of American public opinion is reflected in this clarifying action by the house committee.

The committee even voted to include the suspension clause which the jingoes succeeded earlier in eliminating. This clause authorizes the president, in case new arms limitation agreements are reached before these ships are built, to suspend the building. If the bill is finally passed in this form, it may be made an instrument for an all-round checking of navy building. If the powers are merely to match ship with ship, why should any build new ships? The cost of the ships might as well be saved. The cost of a few battleships would go far to facilitate education, improve national health, check the spread of poverty.

The action of the house committee is close to the line of common sense. Without throwing down an alarming challenge to other countries, it displays a disposition to support a reasonable program of naval defense. It leaves the way open to negotiations for sane arms limitation. It reflects the settled antiwar attitude of America, an attitude largely free from the hypocrisy which, had the Wilbur program been endorsed, could plausibly have been ascribed to us.

Kings in Contempt

The mere shadowing of a jury, when there was no reason to suspect its members, is contempt of court. Justice Siddons laid down this dictum in his trial of Harry F. Sinclair and his satellites for contempt. As Sinclair had unquestionably set the Burns detective agency to shadowing the jury before which he and Fall were being tried, there was nothing left but to hold all concerned guilty.

The fact that this shadowing had forced the judge to abandon the Sinclair-Fall trial was in itself a tacit conviction by the judge of contempt of court.

Accordingly, Sinclair stands sentenced to six months in prison for contempt, and with him for lesser terms the others. But they are not yet in prison, nor will they be soon. An appeal has been taken. Properly enough, the rule laid down by Justice Siddons will be passed upon by the higher courts before the sentence is served. Would that this review by the higher courts might be so prompt that the delay of justice would not appear to defeat justice!

Reed-Thompson-Willis

Hell-Roaring Jim Reed emerges from the Missouri jungles in a dash for the White House. In dry-ish Oklahoma this distinguished wet lets it be known that bigger jobs than the liquor question demand the attention of the Democratic party. In Texas he bravely attacks the tariff. In Kansas, if he gets there, he will appreciate the woes of agriculture. It is his plan to be at hand, in the moment when the Al Smith squadrons falter at the wall, to assume command and go over the top—of his voice.

Senator Reed has done his country valiant service prosecuting the purchasers of senatorships. Where opposition is needed, there isn't a better opposer on the American stage. Unfortunately for him, a president has to be a pro as well as a con; and as a pro, Senator Reed is a total loss.

His con momentum has led him in these presidential speeches to direct his old fury against such pro-things as the Washington arms agreement, the world court and the debt settlements and the pro-peace efforts to prevent an international navy race. Senator Reed's hell-roaring at the Insulls, the Vares and the political traffickers in general is beneficient; his hell-roaring, when carried into the field of diplomatic relations, makes him a first class bull in a china shop. The final verdict on Reed as presidential stuff will stand in the words of the New York World:

> Above all, a president needs judgment and balance. For these qualities to direct his undoubted force, Mr. Reed is not notorious; and his latest speech suggests that, at an age greater than any American president when nominated, except William Henry Harrison, he is probably too old to learn.

While Senator Reed roars his vigorous way around the south, Ohio's own Big Voice starts the local welkin to rumbling. The all but voiceless Herbert Hoover happens to be the reddest of rags to both of America's loudest bellowing statesmen. Hoover, like William H. Taft and Charles E. Hughes, supported the League of Nations as long as politics would let him. It is Hoover Willis has to beat in Willis' own bailiwick, and at Youngstown Senator Willis ripples distant Lake Erie with a 500 per cent Americanism which would hang any man who ever ventured a kindly thought for any country but this glad and glorious land of ours.

Senator Reed had meanwhile begun to worry about what would happen to this dear land of ours "if our English friend Sir Herbert Hoover" were to obtain command; a dirty dig, considerably beneath presidential dignity, but probably sufficient to start Chicago into an avalanche for the burying of the hopeless Hoover.

The sight of Chicago suggests, of course, the third member of America's great loud-speaking political triumvirate. Mayor Big Bill Thompson belongs down in Texas applauding the termagent Reed, or if not there, then over in Ohio helping the healthy-lunged Willis save an imperiled country from a presidential pretender whose feet have been defiled by British mud.

But unfortunately Big Bill can't come. He is a prisoner in his own city. Worse, if the veracious Associated Press is to be believed, he is barricaded a prisoner in his own house. The story, as it filters out of the city by the lake, paints the worst case of human ingratitude since King Lear. For the mayor is not only a prisoner in his own city and in his own house, but it is by his own friends he is held in durance.

Mayor Big Bill, it will be remembered, was made mayor not alone with the help of the Chicago Party Opposed to King George; he had besides the enthusiastic support of the downtrodden and oppressed of all the underworld. The gentlemen of the bootleggers' guild knew him as their friend. He held out hope to gunmen and gangmen. They were to be free to go about the making of their honest livings unoppressed by pertinacious policemen. To all appearances, their hopes were not vain. Arrests for their kind of activity fell off in Chicago. Peace reigned as between Chicago above and Chicago below.

In return for all this kindness, what does Mayor Thompson get? A shower of bombs upon the city, with particular reference to city officials. The gangmen and the bombmen, with an utter lack of grateful discrimination, have put in peril not only the mayor, but State's Attorney Crowe, the city comptroller and others too numerous to mention. The gangmen whom the mayor warmed in his bosom have begun to sting him. At last reports, he was trembling in his home, surrounded by policemen to protect him from his political underworld friends.

For the present, accordingly, Mayor Big Bill cannot range abroad with the resounding Reed; nor can he come over into Ohio Macedonia to help the war-whooping Willis. But in spirit these three still go up and down in the earth together looking for some King George or other outlander at whom they may fling a vocal boulder as big as a balloon; for, bless you, those strangers across seas whose heads these three so bravely crack can't vote over here at all.

Learning at Yale

Of the merits of the necktie-makers' strike at New Haven, seat of Yale university, we know nothing save what the two sides say, and what each says the other denies. What we can say with confidence is that it marks progress in education at Yale. Those students are taking studies close to the fire.

The boys became interested, as students and American citizens, in the contest. They studied the situation, printed a report of the facts as they viewed them, and started to pass out their pamphlets to the public. Their justification for this course was the failure of the local press to print the facts or discussions of the facts. As a result of their efforts, about a third of their number were rounded up by the police and toted off to jail. They must now stand trial for disturbing the peace.

Of the 60 students involved in this venture into actual life, 57 were students of Yale Divinity school. If it is interesting to see ordinary college students taking enough notice of the conflicts of the world of affairs to get carted off to jail, to see Divinity students in the number is verily inspiring. It takes only the most casual reading of history to discover a close connection between religious vitality and jail. A John Bunyan who could keep out of jail wouldn't be a John Bunyan at all. If we now saw a few hundred American Divinity students getting down so close to where men live and fight as to get dumped into jail for irreverence for what they regard as vested wrongs, we should be sure that a great revival of religion lies just ahead.

We repeat that we don't know whether the 60 Yale students were distributing pamphlets for the wrong or for the right. But they thought they were right, and their getting into jail for trying to help out some necktie-makers is so much more creditable than getting into jail for throwing a brickbat at a policeman or wrecking a football goal post—the more common American student method of getting into jail—that we view the total transaction with an approach to enthusiasm.

Municipal parks and equipment in the United States represent a value of more than $1,000,000,000. It costs $100,000,000 a year to maintain them. A total of 1,681 municipalities own approximately 250,000 acres of parks and forests. Most cities of more than 25,000 population have found that parks pay real dividends on the investment.

Travel across the Sahara desert is to be facilitated by the construction of several new routes. It is now possible for a modern low-powered car to cross the desert, guided in some places only by the wheel marks of previous vehicles. That was done last year. The new routes will make desert travel more certain and less hazardous.

Canada produced $29,563,000 worth of machinery in 1926, a 31 per cent increase over the output value of 1925, exclusive of household and office machinery. American industrial methods appear to be contagious.

All cigaret production records in this country were shattered in 1927, when a total of 97,000,000,000 were made, 7,000,000,000 more than in 1926. Another achievement for America's vocalists.

The National Capital

By RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—One of the most absorbing performances which the two political parties are about to offer a mildly interested nation in their quadrennial competition for the spoils of office and such perquisites as those may entail is that in which the Democratic party will appear as a magpie and the Republican party will take the role of a clam.

That is to say, one party is going to talk and act like a magpie very angry about something and the other will talk and act like a clam.

This strange stunt may be enacted several times, but it is sure to be observed as Democratic orators disembogue at their best and loudest against the oil scandals of the Harding administration. It will be recalled that when this issue arose in 1924 the Democratic party followed the best traditions of magpiedom and the Republican party took its cue from clamdom.

In 1924 there were still some hard-boiled politicians—of the type that sent men to Montana to "get" Senator Wheeler—who still maintained that Fall was a far-sighted and conscientious official, while Doheny and Sinclair were super-patriots who had taken the navy's oil merely to save us from the yellow peril. The supreme court has spoken since then, however, and has denounced those involved in very strong language.

In 1924 Harding was dead and Coolidge, the candidate, had been a mere vice president when the oil gang got the oil and Fall got the money.

Whether or not the oil scandals and the new charge that Sinclair helped pay the party debt about the time the administration gave him Teapot Dome will have any effect in November, it is probable that election day will come without mention of the oil scandals by any important Republican. The G. O. P. attitude is that although it may have been a skeleton in the closet and although the Democrats may have been indecent enough to break down the door that hid it, a dignified silence is the best answer to those who still drag it around the streets or dangle it before them.

Not once has the administration expressed itself upon the subject, not even to pat on the back the two able lawyers who have recovered the navy's reserves and kept the bloodhounds close at the coattails of Fall, Sinclair and Doheny. It has been as if no highly placed official or member of the congress, except he be a Democrat or a Republican of independent stripe, was at all interested. Of course, in the light of recent charges that corrupt oil money helped pay party campaign debts, it was only human for the gents in power not to be especially enthusiastic over further prosecution and investigation.

Being always subject to the attracks of of the minority party, the G. O. P. will also receive plenty of abuse in connection with the Vare and Smith scandals. Here, too, it will maintain dignified silence, for a party is only as strong as its political bosses, and any attempt to weed out the corrupt ones might be disastrous.

Signs are that the Democrats will also paint as a scandal the current unemployment. Secretary of Labor Davis says the estimates of the unemployed army are exaggerated, and the voter, who frequently knows what's going on about him even if not what happens higher up, can size up that situation for himself.

But again, as concerns unemployment, the Democrats will be by far the most voluble. President Coolidge, who learned long ago that silence was an excellent defense, has furnished the party's keynote.

Enroute to Europe

By O. O. McINTYRE

AT SEA, Feb. 27.—The good ship Paris plows sturdily through a calm sea for Havre. It cruised off with one of those hectic midnight sailings so popular these days, with passengers in evening dress, as though going to a grand ball. Many had wobbly sea legs before they went over the gangplank.

The voyage began annoyingly. At breakfast a slightly catarrhal British lady with a long neck sat across the aisle, inspecting me through a lorgnon! It was the vacuous, idle stare of one looking at nothing, but like a drowning man, it seemed to make my miserable life swim before me.

As a downright snooty sneer at a tricky digestion, I began the day with calf brains swimming in brown butter. Embarking on the 14th crossing, I have come to believe precautions against sea sickness are as futile as telling a movie star he is not so hot.

Anyway, if you have to cross the ocean sipping weak tea, propped up in bed, straining a feeble mentality, thinking up a three-letter word meaning a tar container, you might as well stay home and have your fling doing home work for the children.

There are a number of who's whosers aboard. Kathleen and Charles Norris—Charlie with golf trousers evidently designed by Urban, featuring black knee tassels. Ray Long, off to England to interview authors, as though they were not all in America lecturing. Edith Gould and her husband. Tod Browning, a movie director. Vincent Youmans, the composer.

Myron T. Herrick, who is returning to the ambassadoring business in Paris. Claire Luce, who gavottes on suspended mirrors for Ziegfeld, who, I hear, is doing well in the show business. Bruce Reynolds, who authored "Cocktail Continentale," and also sponsers milk white spats with pale blue buttons.

And Mr. Collis. I must tell you about him. He came up the gangplank with a waddling trained sea lion, known affectionately as Herbert. My dog took to Herbert immediately, nipping him near a forward fin and receiving a nice tail slap in the face which sent him spinning across the deck into a puzzled squat.

There is a gentleman from Peru in an adjoining cabin who is the spit image of the late Valentino. He seems amiable enough, having up to date borrowed three articles of a necessary toilet equipment, a fountain pen and a shirt stud. When he asks for my tooth brush, I'm going to display a bark that is not Peruvian

I seem fated to be assigned French cabin stewards with changing voices. This is the third one to snap from deep bass into high soprano with surprising agility. He can skip an octave with a pleasant "Bon Jour." But somehow you grow fearful that with a long sentence he might tear something.

In the smoking room this evening one of those tweedy pipe-smoking voyageurs was explaining to a lady who didn't seem much interested that mental concentration was necessary to avoid sea sickness. She was a joyous flapper with rolled stockings, a lot of bangles and a wind wave bob, and when he suggested she practice concentration by knitting, it was rather amusing to hear her reply: "But I'd rather be ill than knit."

The most conspicuous book among passengers is "The Bridge of San Luis Rey."

The mystery lady—there's one on every ship—walks decks with a shepherd's crook. She also wears a harem veil. Her manner is queenly and the tip goes around the boat she is a duchess incognito. My guess is she is one of Sam Scribner's burlesque girls.

Three gentlemen whose wives went softly on their shoulders at the New York dock occupied a table for four at breakfast. A thoughtful chief steward inquired if he might be of further service, and it was suggested he could provide a dazzling blonde for the empty chair. At dinner she was there, all merry, bright and everything. And that, messieurs et madames, is service.

AN APOLOGY

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

I have often read stories of Indians who proved
Too stoic to quiver or quake,
When their ears were clipped off or their scalps were removed,
Or their families burned at the stake.
I have heard that they hated all semblance of fear,
With a passion profound and intense,
And the Red Man I therefore could hardly revere,
For I felt that he hadn't much sense.

I never could see why a man shouldn't wince,
If he happened to stand on a tack,
Or some tangible sign of annoyance evince
If a bumblebee jumped on his back.
To pretend you're not hurt by a kick in the shin,
Or to laugh off a punch in the nose,
At trouble and pain and affliction to grin
To me seems ineffable pose.

But now I discover that story and song,
By poets and novelists wrought,
Together have done the brave Red Man much wrong;
He is not as hard boiled as I thought.
By human reactions poor Lo is impelled,
Which was recently proved beyond doubt
By the case of an Indian who hopped up and yelled
When he had an incisor pulled out.

He didn't by silence refuse to admit
He'd been suddenly knocked for a loop,
He made no display or pretension of grit,
He let out an agonized whoop.
I have hated the Indian, it must be confessed,
But I'll make such amends as I can
By stating, that when he is put to the test
He really can act like a man!

The klan will seem just as ridiculous without those hoods.

Having to listen to Heflin is another form of Capitol punishment.

THE PEOPLE'S COLUMN

"THE DESIRE OF ALL NATIONS"

Editor Miami Daily News: The desire of all peoples, in all ages of the world, has been a perfect government, and the concerted efforts of the wisest men have been toward the attainment of this goal. And what is man's conception of a perfect or ideal government? Is it not one in which the chief ruler possesses absolute power and exercises that power for the benefit of all, with partiality toward none, and granting to each individual his full rights and privileges? An ideal government means one of everlasting peace, in which the people will have plenty, will be contented, and enjoy life, liberty, and uninterrupted happiness. But to man, such an ideal has seemed impossible, because of repeated failures of attainment. Yet the Kingdom of God and of His Christ will secure to man not only the foregoing, but also countless other blessings.

What say the Holy Scriptures about this kingdom? In them, we are assured that the Lord Jesus will be in absolute authority, for He shall be king over all the earth (Zechariah 14:9); that He shall have dominion from sea to sea (Psalm 72:8); that the government shall be upon His shoulders (Isaiah 9:67); that His power and authority shall be absolute (Matthew 28:18); that this great king shall rule righteously, i. e., without partiality (Isaiah 32:1); that wars shall cease, the people dwell forever in peace (Isaiah 2:4; 9:6, 7); that the inhabitants of the earth shall have abundance and feast to their heart's content (Isaiah 25:6); that the earth shall yield her increase, so that all needs shall be supplied (Isaiah 30:23; Psalm 67:6); that there shall be no beastly organizations to oppress the people, for the Lord shall destroy all these (Psalm 72:4); that every man shall own his own home, and none shall be afraid of the landlord or the sheriff (Micah 4:1-4); that the obedient shall return to the days of their youth, their flesh becoming fresher than that of a child (Job 33:25); that none shall be ill or even fear sickness of any kind (Isaiah 33:24); that full restoration to perfect life shall be the reward of the obedient, because Christ gave His life that all such might live (John 3:15; John 10:10); that those who keep His word shall never die (John 8:51; Revelation 21:4); that the whole earth shall become like the Garden of Eden, that even the deserts will blossom as the rose (Isaiah 35:1); that every human being that ever lived or died, and those now living, shall know about Jehovah God and understand His glorious plans and purposes to be accomplished by the Lord Jesus Christ, and that all mankind will dwell eternally in happiness, and sing their hymns of praise unto Jehovah God for ever and ever (Isaiah 11:9; Psalm 150:6).

I quote from the writings of the foremost Bible student of this century, a description of the perfected earth and the glory of restored humanity:

> "Close your eyes for a moment to the scenes of misery and woe, degradation and sorrow, that yet prevail on account of sin, and picture before your mental vision the glory of the perfect earth. Not a stain of sin mars the harmony and peace of a perfect society; not a bitter thought, not an unkind look or word; love, welling up from every heart, meets a kindred response in every other heart, and benevolence marks every act. There sickness shall be no more; nor an ache nor a pain, nor any evidence of decay, not even the fear of such things. Think of all the pictures of comparative health and beauty of form and feature, and know that perfect humanity will be of still surpassing loveliness. The inward purity and mental and moral perfection will stamp and glorify every radiant countenance. Such will earth's society be, and weeping, bereaved ones will have their tears wiped away when thus they realize the resurrection work complete (Revelation 21:4).
> "And this is the change in human society only. We call to mind also that the earth, which was 'made to be inhabited' by such a race of beings, is to be a fit and pleasing abode for them, as represented in the Edenic paradise, in which the representative man was at first placed, paradise shall be restored. The earth shall no more bring forth thorns and briers, and require the sweat of man's face to yield his bread, but 'the earth shall (easily and naturally) yield her increase.' 'The desert shall blossom as the rose;' the lower animal creation will be perfect, willing, and obedient servants; nature will all its pleasing variety will call to man from every direction to see, seek, and know the glory and power and love of God; and mind and heart will rejoice in Him. The restless desire for something new, that now prevails, is not a natural but an abnormal condition, due to our imperfection, and to our present unsatisfactory surroundings. It is not God-like restlessly to crave something new. Most things are old to God; and He rejoices most in those things which are old and perfect. So will it be with man, when restored to the image of God."

But some may ask, "How is this ideal government to be brought about?" In the past, many schemes have been launched by the wise men of the earth, by which these hoped-for conditions were to be attained. We have had the various suggestions of communism, equal suffrage, Henry George's single tax theory, prohibition, and last, but not least, the League of Nations.

Again, let me quote from one of our most eloquent radio broadcasters of today:

> To the League of Nations, or any other human organization for the promotion of international peace will not go the credit of outlawing, abolishing, and suppressing wars on the earth. To the Lord Jehovah alone will go the glory of this grand achievement. But first must come His fearful works of desolation in the earth. No power aside from Jehovah's can now avert Armageddon, and He will not use His power to avert it. The devil's organization must fall to make way for the Kingdom of Righteousness; His war-machine must be desolated. Then, the Prince of Peace in charge and with the government resting upon His shoulders, there shall be an end of war, but no end of peace. Then shall the people be led forth with peace, and they shall rejoice and be glad (Isaiah 55:12."

And last, but most glorious message of all, to a weary, sin-sick and dying world, is the announcement that this Kingdom of Heaven is nigh, "even at our doors." The prophecies regarding the establishment of this kingdom are being daily fulfilled before our eyes.

Oh! that the kings of the earth would be wise! Oh, that they would kiss (obey) the "King of Kings and Lord of Lords," the beloved Son of God, whom Jehovah hath now set upon His throne, to judge the world in righteousness and bless the people with everlasting peace (Psalm 2)!

Then would the transfer of the "kingdoms of this world" from the dominion of Satan into the hands of earth's rightful King take place without the firing of a gun, the lifting of a sword, or the shedding of a drop of blood! But the Scriptures clearly indicate that the "kings of the earth" (financial, political, and ecclesiastical) will not render their allegiance, and therefore the world must undergo its final and terrible "time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation" (Daniel 12:1; Matthew 24:21); the great Battle of God Almighty, the Battle of "Armageddon," for which the nations are all so madly now preparing.

But cannot "the common people" do anything to avert this calamity? No, nothing, except to "seek meekness, seek righteousness," follow the Golden Rule, that they may be "hid in this day of the Lord's anger" (Zephaniah 2:3).

When the smoke of battle has cleared away, and "the kingdoms of this world have become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ" (Revelation 11:15); when "the tabernacle of God is with men and He will dwell with them, and they shall be His people, and God himself shall be with them and be their God" (Revelation 21:3-5); then "the desire of all nations shall come" (Haggai 2:7), the perfect government on earth, the Kingdom of Heaven, for which the Lord's people have prayed so many centuries, saying "Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth, even as it is done in heaven!"

GERTRUDE W. SEIBERT,

Miami, Fla., Feb. 16, 1928.

FROM A 40 AND 8 OFFICIAL

Editor Miami Daily News: In Thursday's Daily News there appeared an article, "General Sherburne quits 40 and 8." This with a Boston date line from Associated Press. This action on the part of the general being in protest against a clause in our constitution which prohibited membership of the negro veterans.

Quite true; our constitution plainly reads that only white male members of the American Legion are eligible. No doubt for the same reason that the Masonic Order, Shrine, Elks and kindred fraternal orders limit their membership to the white race.

There is no intended reflection by the 40 and 8 upon the colored man who gave his services during the World war, but, we learned early in our experiences, that close intimacies of fraternalism would be impossible in the 40 and 8 with the admission of the Mongolian or colored races.

Inasmuch as the privilege of membership is by invitation only, and this in recognition for worthwhile services performed for the American Legion, few colored men, if any, would be able to earn the necessary invitation.

The question of striking the word "white" from our constitution has been injected into our national conventions for several years, but always coming from one state. Last year as Chef de Chemin de Fer, I visited this state several times to conduct a personal investigation. My impressions and conclusions are, that the issue is more political in which only a few are interested, though these few, for the time being, are quite influential. For the vast majority of our members, and our officers in this state, I want to say they are loyal to the fundamental principles of our order and its constitution, even to the point that they last year urged the opposition to bring the matter before the national legion convention in Paris. It is needless to say the matter was not brought up.

La Societe des 40 Hommes at 8 Chevaux is an independent order, fraternal the same as any other orders. We derive our membership from the American Legion, by selection only. Our initiations are severe, never to be forgotten. We exact service, and as a special charge we set aside part of our dues for the widows and orphans of our comrades, distributed by direction of the American Legion. No questions are asked by us whether these widows, orphans, husbands or fathers were members of the American Legion or whether they are white or black.

I am sorry that a man like General Sherburne, even though he commanded colored troops, is unable to see the real purposes of the 40 and 8 and how impossible it is to have a fraternal order with a mixture of races.

We are a white man's organization, and will always be, notwithstanding General Sherburne's withdrawal.

Chef de Chemin de Fer Passe.

Announcements

Deaths 1

DAVENPORT—Funeral arrangements are being made by the Combs funeral home for Thomas R. Davenport, 89, retired painting contractor of Indianapolis, who died Wednesday afternoon at the home of his son, F. J. Davenport, N. W. 60th st. and 23rd ave. Mr. Davenport, who had made his home in Miami for three years, resided at 6001 N. W. Orange Ridge court. Besides his son, F. J., Mr. Davenport leaves two other sons, R. E., Detroit, and Burton James, Indianapolis.

DENNISON—Body of Mrs. Winifred Dennison, who died May 21, was sent Wednesday night to Reading, Mich., by the Gautier funeral home for burial, accompanied by the husband, Charles P. Dennison.

HALL—Funeral services were held at 2:30 p. m. Thursday in the Van Orsdel funeral home for Mrs. Jessie Emma Hall, 71, of 6728 S. W. Fourth st., who died Wednesday. The Rev. G. W. Watson officiated. Burial was in Woodlawn Park cemetery.

HUNT—Miss Isabella Hunt, 1250 S. W. Second st., died at 7:45 a. m. Thursday at a Miami hospital after a brief illness. Funeral arrangements, which are being made by the Gautier funeral home, are incomplete.

PHILLIPSON—Funeral arrangements are being made by the Philbrick funeral home for Cyril W. Phillipson, 38, automobile mechanic, 716 E. Third ave., Hialeah, who died Wednesday night in a Miami hospital after a short illness. He had lived in Miami five years, coming here from Brooklyn, N. Y. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Lavina Phillipson; a son, Harold; a daughter, Evelyn; and a brother, Elmas Phillipson, Jamaica, British West Indies.

WEATHERFORD—Services for Frank Weatherford, 36, of 38 N. E. Fifth st., who died Monday night, were held at 3:30 p. m. Thursday in the Combs funeral home by the Rev. J. F. Seibert. Burial was in Miami Memorial park, where members of the Modern Woodmen of America conducted special services.

SEIBERT—Services will be held at 8 p. m. Thursday at the Gautier funeral home for Mrs. Gertrude W. Seibert, 63, Bible student and writer, who died Wednesday noon at a Miami hospital following a month's illness. Mrs. Seibert, who had lived in Miami 12 years, resided at the Columbus hotel. She was the widow of Robert Samuel Seibert, Scranton, Pa. A brother, Byron Woodcock, Scranton, survives her. Mrs. Seibert, author of a number of poems collected in the volume "Sweet Briar Rose," was a member of the League of American Pen Women, a graduate of Wellesley college and a member of the International Bible Students association for 34 years. Following services by the Rev. J. P. Montz, the body will be sent to Mount Union, Pa., Friday night, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Johnson, 5869 Pine Tree drive, Miami Beach. Burial will be in Mount Union cemetery.

GLADES BONDS ARE ATTACKED ON NEW ANGLE

Another Suit Just Filed Hits Ad Valorem Tax Levy Made

Another suit to enjoin sale of the $20,000,000 bonds authorized under the Martin drainage act was filed in the circuit court here Thursday. The complainant, Rose Lawn Realty Co., names the board of commissioners of Everglades drainage district and Bob Simpson, Dade tax collector, as defendants. The suit is filed by the Miami law firm of Evans & Mershon, the same that Wednesday filed a similar suit for another plaintiff in Leon county and the original federal suit that will be listed shortly for argument on the U. S. supreme court calendar.

The Rose Lawn Realty Co. not only seeks to enjoin sale of the bonds, but asks an injunction against the collection of ad valorem taxes of one-fifth of one mill levied by the state board for 1927.

The new bill alleges that the state drainage board in making assessments "willfully discriminated against muck lands, in that these lands were valued at more than their actual market value, while other improved lands in the Everglades drainage district were valued at less than their market value."

These suits also seeks to show that the state board "unlawfully failed to assess lands belonging to the Florida East Coast railway and used for station and right-of-way purposes and failed to assess a great deal of other property in the district without giving any reason for its failure to so assess same."

It is alleged that under the law the board is required to make an appraisal of the full and just value of all lands and improvements within the district before selling bonds; that the assessment made by the board was illegal because the board unlawfully exempted certain lands which were not exempt by law and unlawfully over-valued other lands, and that, therefore, the entire assessment is void.

CITY BRIEFS

Dr. and Mrs. M. C. Wilson left Miami Thursday for a short visit to Boonshill, Tenn., the home of Dr. Wilson's parents.

George Edward Holt, attorney with offices in the City National Bank building, has been named a master in chancery by the four circuit judges.

Florida Poultry & Egg Co., Coral Way and S. W. 27th ave., reported to Miami police Thursday that stock valued at $150 was stolen from its store Tuesday night.

E. J. Brown obtained a building permit Thursday to erect a one-story residence and garage at 3722 Cornelia drive, Coconut Grove, at a cost of $4,500. A. V. Peacock has the contract.

Clinton B. Clark is in Toronto, Canada, attending the annual convention of the International Association of Display Men. He expects to spend a few days in New York before returning to Miami, where he is connected with the display department of Burdine's department store.

Announcements

Deaths 1

CURRAN—Funeral arrangements are being made by the Northside funeral home for Charles F. Curran, 45, Dixie hotel, Little River, who suffered a heart attack and died while he was attending a Little River theater Thursday night. He had lived in Miami eight years and was a former resident of Scituate, Mass. He was a member of the Elks lodge in Quincy, Mass.

DAVENPORT—Services were held at 3:30 p. m. Friday in the Combs funeral home by the Rev. W. E. Craig of the White Temple for Thomas R. Davenport, 89, of 6001 N. W. Orange Ridge court, who died Wednesday. Burial was in Woodlawn Park cemetery. Members of the American Legion auxiliary attended the services in tribute to the work Mr. Davenport has done for the organization.

HUNT—Funeral arrangements are being made by the Gautier funeral home for Miss Isabelle Hunt, 28, 1250 S. W. Second st., bookkeeper and stenographer of the Dade County Security Co., who died Thursday morning in a Miami hospital after a short illness. She is survived by a brother, William Hunt, Richmond, Ind.

PHILLIPSON—Funeral arrangements for Cyril W. Phillipson, 38, will be announced by the Philbrick funeral home when word is received from his brother, Elmas Phillipson, Jamaica, British West Indies.

SEIBERT—Body of Mrs. Gertrude W. Seibert, 63, Columbus hotel, who died Wednesday night in a Miami hospital will be sent Friday night to Mount Union, Pa., for burial, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Johnson, Miami Beach. Services were held for her at 8 p. m. Thursday in the Gautier funeral home.

IROQUOIS TAKES MANY MIAMIANS

Several of Passengers Plan to Spend Vacations in Europe

Several well known Miamians were among passengers on the Clyde liner Iroquois when that ship sailed Friday afternoon for Jacksonville and New York. The ship arrived in the morning from New York and brought a number of summer vacationists.

Northbound passengers included Prof. and Mrs. Angel Del Rio, who are going to spend the summer in Spain. Professor Del Rio is head of the Spanish department of the University of Miami. Also going to Europe is Miss M. M. Collins of the Alhambra hotel.

Bound for a summer in Ontario, Canada, is Mrs. R. D. Walker, 1876 S. W. 11th terrace. Mrs. Charles Zaring is going to New York. W. F. Bull, 1043 Obispo ave., Coral Gables, is bound to New York to sail on the yacht Song of the Wind in a race between New York and Bermuda, which will start June 23.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Pye are returning to New York after a tour of the south. Mr. Pye is passenger traffic manager of the Clyde line. Mrs. Ila Watkins of the editorial department of the New York World is returning to New York.

Other passengers were J. H. Gill, general manager of the Florida Power & Light Co.; E. D. Dodge, manager of the Dade County Abstract, title, Insurance & Trust Co.; N. L. Pancoast of the Pancoast hotel, and Jack Murray of the United Tours.

FITZGERAL CASE IS NEARING JURY

Robert Fitzgeral, charged with second degree murder of Jesse Stanley, Feb. 13, 1928, was the last witness to take the stand at his trial in criminal court Friday. Fitzgeral described their fight in Stanley's house at N. W. 69th st. and 13th ave. and asserted that in a dying statement, Stanley said:

"You got me, but it was my own fault."

The defendant, who had been rooming at the house, was packing up to leave because of a disagreement with Stanley, he said, when the latter rushed into the room with a pistol and threatened to kill him. In the scuffle over the gun, Fitzgeral said, it was discharged and the bullet struck Stanley in the back. Fitzgeral escaped but was captured in Broward county. There were no eye-witnesses to the fight.

The case is expected to go to the jury late Friday after argument by counsel.

STRANGE LIGHT IS SEEN AGAIN

Reappearance of the strange light in the sky that has puzzled Miamians for the last two nights was reported at 8:30 p. m. Thursday by Clark Thompson, 982 S. W. Third st. Several families in this neighborhood observed it. The light remained visible for about 10 minutes. Unlike its appearance on the previous night, a distinct black line was visible across the center, as if it were separated. Richard W. Gray, U. S. meteorologist at Miami, said that if it were a celestial body, it would have been reported from observatories by this time and that it probably was a reflection on a cloud from a searchlight, which remained stationary for that period.

HOOVER HEARS OF NOMINATION IN HOME STUDY

net officer constantly on exhibition, but yet remaining an inscrutable figure. He is a bulky man, big particularly as to his hands, with a round face, relieved only by the long rise of his forehead. He is customarily garbed in quieter shades of blue.

While politicians usually reach automatically for the personal contact, Mr. Hoover, after years in the atmosphere, withdraws quite obviously when the personal note is introduced. Nevertheless, he is a man of warm friendships and of magnetic personality.

A Hoover asset is the fact that, practically always working himself, he meets other people in connection with the job and he deals undeniably well with the problem in hand, most always grasping others' points of view in advance.

Mr. Hoover works harder than most people, reads late into the night, and takes his writing most seriously, sometimes bringing out delightful humor. For fun, he fishes and is displaying an improving technique in the art. His family life—he has a wife and two sons—has been more successfully veiled than that of most political celebrities.

A faculty of Hoover is to attach men to his cause with bonds of steel. In every Hoover enterprise—and there are a myriad of them afoot since the secretary of commerce took his job—groups of enthusiastic volunteers work away at top speed, endlessly and happy.

He has created lieutenants, inspired, enthusiastic and prideful.

The ties he creates stand much strain, for behind his habitual impassiveness is most surely a sensitive and tempered nature.

Outwardly, the open acknowledgement of his presidential aspirations in 1928 made small difference in the Hoover routine and the campaign organization work was taken in the stride developed by years of piloting great human groups. One sign of the attention he was giving the subject, however, was a new restraint upon all his public expressions.

The assurance that "Hoover is no politician," so frequently voiced in the camps of his enemies, has now been tested by the roll call of a Republican national convention, but neither opponent nor friend can deny that the campaign disclosed a man with a deep-laid, sagacious and wide flung plan, supported by a legion of competent helpers grappling with fully comprehended and treated obstacles, for accomplishment on a great scale.

Hoover First Won Fame During Boxer Rebellion

Christened Herbert Clark Hoover, the Republican presidential nominee, since he has been in public life, has discarded the middle initial and signs his name "Herbert Hoover."

He was born at West Branch, Iowa, Aug. 10, 1874, son of a blacksmith and a Quaker mother. He was an orphan before he was 7.

He worked his way to a degree in mining engineering and geology at Stanford, then a young university in California, getting his degree in 1895.

As an engineer he saw the world, following his profession in Australia, China, India, Russia, Alaska and Mexico. An apprenticeship in the relief efforts that were to make him famous was served in Pekin during the Boxer rebellion of 1900 when he organized his first flood relief.

In London when the World war descended on thousands of Americans in Europe, scurrying about trying to find a way to get home, Herbert Hoover headed an American relief committee.

His success in getting the Americans out of the clutches of the war resulted in his draft for the task of feeding Belgium. He assisted in the organization of the commission for relief in Belgium and assumed its leadership.

When the United States entered the war, President Wilson appointed Mr. Hoover food administrator for the United States, although he remained in charge of the commission in Belgium.

In 1920 he was spoken of as a presidential possibility of both the Republican and Democratic parties. He wrote a letter declaring himself a Republican.

At the Republican convention in Chicago he was placed in nomination to the accompaniment of prolonged applause in the gallery but few votes on the floor. He was appointed secretary of commerce by President Harding and held the same cabinet post in the administration of President Coolidge.

His home is on the campus of Stanford university, Palo Alto, Cal., but he is at home only at infrequent intervals.

He married Miss Lou Henry, a schoolmate at Stanford, in 1899. They have two sons, Allan and Herbert.

When he was nominated for president he became a candidate for office for the first time in his life.

PLEA OF GUILTY DRAWS 20 YEARS

Charles Johnson, 37, negro charged with an attempted criminal assault on a 12-year-old white girl, was sentenced to 20 years in state prison when he pleaded guilty before Judge Tom Norfleet in criminal court shortly after noon Friday. Johnson was brought to the courtroom under heavy guard from the jail of another county, where he has been kept since his arrest last Wednesday morning, and was escorted from the courtroom to a waiting car by the same guard while spectators were ordered to keep their seats and make no demonstration.

Religious Thought

The Angel of Gethsemane.

'Twas midnight, and the Man of Sorrows took his chosen three,
And sought with weary step the shelter of Gethsemane
To pray, his soul exceeding sorrowful, e'en unto death,
And heavy laden with the sin and woe of all the world.
In agony of bloody sweat he fell upon his face,
And cried, with tears, "My God, my Father, if it be Thy will,
Oh, let this cup of shame and numbering with transgressors pass,
If it be possible! Yet, not my will, but Thine be done!"
And then his thoughts turned to the sacrifice, a fear bore down
With agonizing weight upon his heart, lest he comply
With every jot and tittle of the law, he might have failed;
He saw the priestly type, he knew eternal death awaited,
Should he seek to pass the second vail unworthily.
Eternal death! Oh, anguish inexpressible, to see
No more his Father's face! He sought his well-beloved three,
Perchance they might refresh his fainting heart with some sure word
Of prophecy. Alas! their eyes were heavy and they slept.
Three times he sought them, and three times in vain! Yet he was heard
In that he feared. The Father sent a heavenly comforter
To touch with tender, strengthening hand that dear, devoted head,
And whisper, "I, the Lord in righteousness have called thee. I
Will hold thy hand, and keep thee. Neither shalt thou fall nor be Discouraged. Lo, thou art a priest forever, and a king
Upon thy throne, like to Melchizedek. And thou shalt see
The travail of thy soul, and shalt be satisfied." His heart
Revived, he knew his Father's faithful word could never fail;
He knew it would accomplish that whereunto it was sent.
He rose, and from that dark hour went forth to trial and to death,
In peace—a calmness born of perfect confidence in God.

How oft, throughout the many-centuried "night" of this dark age,
The Father's "little ones" have knelt in sad Gethsemane
To pray! E'en now the Garden's shade re-echoes with the cry,
Of God's elect, "How long, O Lord, how long until we see
The travail of our soul? How long until Thou shalt avenge
Thine own elect, who cry to Thee, with tears, both night and day?"

Dear Lord, Oh use me as the Angel in Gethsemane!
Oh, fill me with Thy holy spirit of divinest love!
Oh make me sympathetic, wise, that every anguished heart
May come, nor seek in vain for consolation from thy word,
And strengthened, comforted, go forth to prison and to death,
To suffer patiently the cruel mockings of the tongue;
To bear the cross unto the better end, then calmly say,
"'Tis finished," and with faith unwavering pass beneath "the vail!"

May 6, 1906. —G. W. SEIBERT.

HIS HEAVENLY FATHER'S GOODNESS

The Experience and Faith of the Christian Converted the Pagan.

IN the province of Shan-si, in China, there dwelt a man named Li, who became the first Christian in the district in which he lived.

As every follower of Jesus should, he tried his utmost to tell others of the Saviour, and found opportunities for selling tracts and copies of the Scriptures.

Unfortunately, many of the Chinese are opium smokers and suffer very much in consequence. Knowing this, Li opened a home of refuge for such, and invited those who wished to give up the harmful habit to come and live with him.

Perhaps you wonder how he could feed such a big family?

Li was not rich, but his God had promised to supply his needs, so whenever he needed help he took the matter to Him in prayer.

Many of his neighbors gave him money. That was God's way of answering his petitions.

But Li had to be tested and tried, even as the faith of all believers is tried.

The funds were now exhausted. What would happen?

In a temple near by there lived a cousin of Li's, who sacrificed to idols. On bringing some vegetables and grain to Li, the latter would always exclaim:

"Thank you: it is my Heavenly Father's grace."

"How can that be?" answered the priest one day: "it is my gift. I bring it to you. If I did not, you would soon starve. How can it be your Heavenly Father's grace?"

"But He puts it into your heart to care for me," explained Li.

"Oh, does He? Well, we shall see what will happen if I dont bring you anything." And the priest acted on his threat by keeping away.

When Li's little store of food was finished and his last coin spent, he knelt down and asked his Father to send him food.

At that moment he heard a strange noise outside, like the flapping of birds' wings, and on going to see what it was, discovered several black vultures trying to snatch something from one of their number.

Presently the bird dropped—a piece of pork! Li picked it up and joyously exclaimed: "My Father's good ness."

Then on the ground he spied a large piece of bread, which another bird had dropped in its flight.

Lighting a fire, he proceeded to cook the meat by boiling it in a pot. During the process his cousin came. "Well, has your Heavenly Father thought of you and sent some food?" he asked somewhat scornfully.

"Yes, He has; His goodness never fails," replied the old saint.

"Where is it?"

"Look and see," he answered, pointing to the pot on the fire.

After some hesitation the priest removed the lid, and an unmistakable smell of boiled pork resulted.

"Why, where did you get it?" he gasped in surprise.

"My Heavenly Father sent it," replied Li earnestly; and looking straight at his cousin he added:

"He put it into your heart to send me the vegetables and other things, but when you stopped doing it, it was quite easy for Him to find another messenger."

That simple testimony to the goodness of God completely overcame the priest. He forsook his idols and his temple and became a Christian. Like Li, he worked for his Master, became in time a teacher and native pastor, suffered persecution for Christ, and in the end laid down his life as a martyr.

The Lord who sustained His servant Elijah in the days of old, was equally faithful to His servant Li in China; and He will never fail the youngest child who truly trusts Him.

While We May.

"If I should die, John, I suppose you would spend a good deal of money for flowers."

"Ah, yes, Anna; but who ever put that into your head?"

"Oh, nothing, only I thought that ten-dollar wreaths and fifty-dollar anchors wouldn't make any difference to me when I'm gone, and just a little flower now and then while I'm living would mean so much to me."

"Just a little flower, now and then, while I'm living." The reply of the young wife is eloquent of the heart hunger of thousands.

The relator of this says: "Why withhold the appreciative word, the loving look, the fervent handclasp until the pulses are stilled, the eyes closed, the ears unheeding? Why wait until flowers can no longer give pleasure to shower them upon our near and dear?

"The present is all we have. Then let us seize it. We can make it beautiful if we will; we can fill it with loving, tender acts and glorious words. Now is the time to gladden the hearts of those about us. Now is the time to give the 'little flower.' Tomorrow it may be all, too late!"

How to Grow Gold.

Among the lowest and most depraved characters there is always hope of salvation if we go forth with faith in Jesus Christ and scatter the right seed. Has not Christ saved many, who, like Paul, have been the chief of sinners? Cannot he then save others from their sins? An impressive parable found among the Hindus is the following: Many years ago, a thief was captured with stolen money in his hand and sentenced to die. The night before his execution he devised this novel plan for rescue: He called the jailer into his cell and said, "Go tell the king that if I can come to him I can tell him how to grow gold." The news was carried to the king and he said, "Let the culprit be brought before me." When the thief entered the royal presence he produced a piece of gold and said, "Your majesty, if this piece of gold be planted in the soil it will grow into a tree, every branch of which will be laden with gold as an orchard with fruit. But this golden seed must be planted by a hand which has never been stained by a dishonest act. Of course, I am a thief and cannot plant this seed. My hand is not clean, so I pass it to your majesty." The king looked at the gold a moment, then he said, "I would plant it if I could, but alas! my hand is not clean; I will pass it to my prime-minister." The prime-minister's hand was not clean, so he passer it to the governor of the citadel. The govenor's hand was not clean and he passed it to the high priest. The high priest's hand was not clean, and he passed it on to another.

Thus the golden seed went from hand to hand. Then the thief said, "Your majesty, if no man's hand is clean, why should I alone die for the crime." "You are right," said the king. "If you are to die then I must die also." Then the conscience-stricken king pardoned the culprit, because he and his officers were all sinners alike. Is the story a mere legend, a fable? I think not. We say certain men are degenerates and beyond the pale of Gospel hope. Are they? Are our own hands morally clean? Have we always been pure? O my Lord and my God, if thou canst save us, the chief of sinners, canst thou not save even the lowest and the vilest with whom we come in contact in our daily life. Yes, even the lowest and the vilest the Lord Jesus can save. "Cast they bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it after many days."—Christian Herald.

Praying for what is not Wanted.

I hear men praying everywhere for more faith, but when I listen to them carefuly and get at the real heart of their prayers, very often it is not more faith at all they are wanting, but a change from faith to sight. "What shall I do with this sorrow that God has sent me?" "Take it up and bear it, and get a strength and blessing out of it." "Ah, if I only knew what blessing there was in it, if I saw how it would help me, then I could bear it like a plume!" "What shall I do with this hard, hateful duty which Christ has laid right in my way?" "Do it, and grow by doing it." "Ah, yes; if I could only see that it would make me grow." In both these cases do you not see that what you are begging for is not more faith, although you think it is, but sight. You want to see for yourself the blessing in the sorrow, the strength in the hard and hateful task. Faith says not, "I see that it is good for me, and so God must have sent it," but "God sent it, and so it must be good for me." Faith walking in the dark with God only prays him to clasp its hand more closely, does not even ask for lifting of the darkness so that man may find the way himself. Mary is all faith when she says, "Do what he tells you, and all must come right, simply because he is he." Blessed the heart that has learned such a faith and can stand among men in all their doubts and darknesses and just point to Jesus Christ and say: "Do his will and everything must come right with you. I do not know how, but I know him. God forbid that I should try to lead you, but I can put your hand in his hand, and bid you go where he shall carry you!"

The Man at the Wheel.

We were steaming down the Hudson—the vessel had just taken the pilot on board, and the captain laughed as he said: "I'm not bossing this show any longer. Pilot's boss now."

"Yes," replied the pilot, "twenty-five years up and down this channel gives some right to a little bossing."

"Ah!" said one us, sauntering up to the man at the wheel. "It strikes me you must know every sandbar, or rock, or shallow, in these waters by this time."

"Not a bit of it," was the reply: "I don't need to know them."

"Well, I thought that was your chief concern," said the passenger. "I should like to enquire what you do need to know, then?"

"Ah!" said the pilot, slowly and surely, "there's only one thing I know which I've found worth everything else I know on this side—I know where the deep water lies."

So in our Christian course over the ocean of life we do not need to know the bars to progress, the rocks of offence, or the shallows of worldliness; we do not need to know where the deep water of Christ's bottomless love is, where we may steer our course in safety. That was a blessed knowledge he had who said: "One thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see" (John ix. 25). That was a heavenly progress which enabled another and a greater to say: "This one thing I do . . . . . I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus" (Phil. iii. 14). The man at the wheel was right—we need to know but one thing on this side eternity—"Jesus Christ, and Him crucified"

SCATTERING GEMS.

A good woman, who was well known in her circle for her simple and calm trust in the midst of many trials, received a visit from another woman who, hearing of her, said: "I must go and find out the secret of her strong, happy life." She went, and introduced herself by asking: "Are you the woman with the great faith?" "No," replied the other, "I am not the woman with the great faith: I am the woman with the little faith in the great God."

"One of the odd things about the place," said a resident in one of the new towns in the far West, speaking of its constant influx of strangers, "is that in meeting these newcomers on the street day after day, you know that they are all in some way failures. Their health has failed, and they hope to regain it; their business has gone down, and they want to start again; they have fallen into bad habits, or have been guilty of some wrong deed, and they are hoping to escape from old temptations and make a new record amid new surroundings. They all have failed somewhere else, either physically, financially, or morally, and I used to find the sight of the depressing until I began to think what a blessed thing it was that there was a place where they could have another chance." That is what God's world and God's Word are full of—new chances. Neither of them within its utmost bound is intended to bar the soul that would try again.

A Big Valley Party.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Hammond, Spring Run, Nov. 7th, a birthday surprise party was held in honor of their daughter, Miss Ruth, on her eighteenth birthday. Those present were Anna Hazlett, Lola and Lizzie Crouse, Sadie Reed, Margaret Robertson, Nellie Umbrell, Alda Coons, Stella Shoop, Effie Line, Bessie and Martha McCartney, Lottie Hammond, Margaret and Myrtle Price, Dora Celgn, Mary Hassel, Mary Flickinger, Emma Skinner, Lucy Coons, Stella Rhodes, Martha Bair, Carrie Devor, Lizzie and Oda Coons, Blanche Shaffer, Tuts Horton, Etta Wilson, Beryl Hammond, Martha Coons, Bessie Bair, May and Edith Wolff, Anna Alexander, Orphia Wilson, Clara Best; Ruth Mackey, Amelia Stitt, Elsie Johnston, Nettie Burk, Gail Hammond, Chame Goshorn, Blain and Roy Dunkle, Jamie Alexander, Raymond Downey, Bazil Zeigler, John Reed, Joseph and Leo Fegan, William Doyle, Frank and Elmer Hammond, Stark Piper, Frank Craig, Bertus and Stoey Funston, Clarence Funston, Alfred Shoemaker, Daniel Shoemaker, Earl Hammond, Ray Coons, David Skinner, Dwight Burk, Paul Walker, Victor Burk, Jacob and Thomas Robertson, Alvey and Elmer Price, Thomas Shoop, Corwin Johnston, Martin Harry, Morris Stitt, George Hammond, Eber Crouse, Elmer Varner, Roy Wilson, Cleveland and Charley McGee, Gilmore and Thomas Hammond, Daniel and Paul Stitt, Bert Skinner, George Brinley, Elton Miller, Mack Burk.

The evening was spent in various games and many delightful plays, and popular music was rendered by the phonograph and piano. At a late hour refreshments were served and all returned to their homes much pleased with the delightful evening and wishing Miss Ruth many more happy birthdays and may she be able to say at the end of each year "It has been the best year" of her life.

A coincidence of the celebration was the fact that as Stark Frank and Ruth are the same age and their birthdays come on the same day, all three spent the evening together at the party.

It's local testimony and can be investigated:

Mrs. Melissa John, of 625 S. Main St., Chambersburg, Pa., says: "I gave a testimonial in the summer of 1897 touching the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills and told how I had suffered from kidney complaint for seven years and during that time I had used a great many remedies but without the effective benefit which Doan's Kidney Pills gave. I was ofen so bad that I was confined to my bed, at one time for two weeks. The pain was mostly in the small of my back, extending into the lower abdomen with a cort of drawing down feeling. I read about Doan's Kidney Pills and so convincing were the statements of those who had used them that I was led to get a box at Greenawalt's drug store. I soon received relief and kept on taking the pills until I was cured. During the several years which have passed since then, my back and kidneys have never troubled me. My cure was lasting, proving conclusively in my case at least, that Doan's Kidney Pills certainly do what is claimed for them."

TEACHERS' WORTHY MOVE.

Berks County Instructors Resolve to Plant More Trees, Teach Agriculture and the Domestic Arts.

The Berks County Teachers' Institute adjourned a few days ago. Resolutions were passed recommending that a united effort be made to increase the usefulness of the country schools along one or more of the following lines:

By planting trees, flowers and shrubbery on school grounds.

By an enrichment of the course of study with reference to agriculture, manual training and the domestic arts.

By consolidating weak schools and transporting children, making possible the graded school and distinctly country high school.

By giving special attention to industrial subjects in the normal schools.

By using a better grade of music.

The teachers also urged that the salary law be amended by the next Legislature so as to make the minimum $40 instead of $35, and indorsed the teachers' retirement fund. Parents are urged to keep their children home evenings. Prof. Surface, the State zoologist, was commended for his work in the dissemination of knowledge among country people.

Crime Rampant in Pittsburg—Attempt to Crucify.

Pittsburg is now in the throes of a reign of terror, the like of which has never struck the city before. The influx of thieves, burglars, highwaymen and brutal murderers has caused great and general fear. Special policemen have been sworn in and the authorities are doing their best to ferret and combat.

But the crime of crimes, so far as unusual features were concerned, was an attempt at crucifixion, which actually went so far as to nail a woman's hands to a sink. This hideous outrage was brought to light by the screams of a woman in a tenement. Neighbors rushed in and found Mrs. Jean Mitchell, 19 years old, in the kitchen huddled in a kneeling position on the floor, with both hands nailed to the draining board of the sink, with the blood running down her arms. Alongside her hands lay a hatchet, the weapon which had driven the two big nails, and which was then used to draw them out.

The woman was unconscious, and was taken to a hospital. When she recovered she merely said that when she entered her flat in the morning something struck her on the back of the head and she felt herself drawn toward the sink, her hands pressed against the board and two nails driven in. Her husband was arrested at Canton, Ohio, on Monday, and claims that he had not been in Pittsburg for a year past.

The Tribune is always for Tampa and it is against anything that is hurtful or disadvantageous to Tampa—and the Tribune never hesitates to express its opinion when the interests of Tampa are at stake. Just at this time, the citizens of Tampa ought to diagnose the disease that is playing such havoc with the city's industrial health and, once satisfactorily diagnosed, they ought to apply the most heroic remedies.

The Postal Banks

Notwithstanding the smallness of the appropriation, it is reported from Washington that the trustees of the postal savings bank are arranging to install between twenty-five and fifty banks in as many sections of the country, by the first of November.

The service at first afforded will necessarily be limited, inasmuch as Congress appropriated only $100,000 with which to insugurate the whole system. Out of this sum the preliminary expenses, such as providing forms stamps and instructions, must be paid. There will be little left for any other purpose.

The trustees believe, however, that a few banks can be established out of this sum and these will be installed merely as experiments. As soon as it is determined how much additional help will be required in the various postoffices and how much will be the cost of operating, Congress will be asked for more money.

In the course of time it is arranged that the whole system shall be self-sustaining. Only 2 per cent interest will be paid on deposits and the banks and trust companies, acting as depositories for the funds collected by the government, will be required under the law to pay 2 1-4 per cent interest. The quarter of 1 per cent will represent the total profit the government will make and this will go toward maintainance and reserve.

Instead of locating the first twenty-five or fifty banks in the twenty-five or fifty largest cities in the country, the trustees will probably pick out twenty-five or fifty sections of the country where industrial conditions are varied. This will be done for the purpose of testing the efficiency of the new banking system and of determining the response which may be expected from the different classes of people served.

An improvement in the continental system of issuing pass-books to depositors will be adopted by this government. Instead of the book, as provided by the private banks, a card will be issued to the depositor showing by perforation the amount of money deposited. This card will be a duplicate of a similar one perforated at the same time and kept in the postoffice, the latter to furnish an absolute record of the funds receipted for. Should a card be lost by a depositor a duplicate can be obtained by reporting at the office issuing the original. It will be made perfectly plain that these cards are non-transferable and non-negotiable. They cannot be traded in or passed about as legal tender. They must be held by the party making the deposit and presented by that party when it is desired to withdraw any or the funds deposited.

A machine similar to a cash register, in operation ,will be used to punch the deposit cards. This means that the record will be mechanically accurate, and since both the depositor's card and that held by the government are punched by the same act, no discrepancy can possibly exist.

The committee of postal experts is still meeting day and night at Washington in its effort to perfect the new system. The experts expect to be able to lay most of the details before Postmaster General Hitchcock when upon his return to Washington next month. He will, in turn, call an early meeting of the trustees to approve of the preliminary work.

A New Reason for Matrimony

Marriage is a good thing.

Any married man knows that.

Oh, of course, the man who doesn't find the right sort of mate will not agree to it, but generally it will be approved by married men.

Marriage is good for various reasons.

It gives to man a love, sympathy and encouragement which he finds helpful in the uphill climb to prosperity and happiness.

It tends to make him unselfish when he is asked to divide his earnings with his so-called "better half."

It keeps him home at night, especially if the wife is the monarch of the fireside.

It is the means to good living—that is, well cooked food and plenty of it.

And now the secretary of the employers' liability commission of Illinois, one Edwin R. Wright, advises marriages for this new reason:

Young man, marry. You'll be safer."

Reports show that in Chicago unmarried men, especially manual workers, are more often hurt than married ones. Mr. Wright thinks married men are more careful, being mindful of those dependent on them. Which may be true.

There is novelty at least in this new reason why a man should marry.

If it is not convincing, there are five or six hundred other excuses for a man who contemplates matrimony.

No More Straus Milk

Because of personal attacks made upon him by a certain newspaper in New York City, Nathan Straus, the merchant and philanthropist, has definitely decided to abandon the pasteurization work done there during the last nineteen years, says the Savannah Press. Mr. Straus has devoted his wealth and his time to the most effectual mean of reducing infant mortality and his success has been so pronounced that the death rate has decreased one-half. It is estimated that four million bottles of milk are distributed yearly and Mr. Straus is supposed to have contributed a quarter of a million dollars yearly to the crusade for purer milk. The attacks reached such a pronounced state Mr. Straus decided to discontinue his personal connection with the charity in order that they may stop and by this means not hurt the beneficial results which have accrued to infants. The milk trust in New York also fought the philanthropist with bitterness.

The ultimate aim of the workers in the pasteurization of milk has been accomplished under the guidance of Mr. Straus. This method of avoiding disease, and especially in the young, has spread not only throughout America, but into foreign countries, and the work has been highly commended by the most eminent scientists. Mr. Straus is unselfish enough to remove himself at a time when he feels his presence will deter the excellent work he begun so splendidly. Those mothers who know how their babes have been alleviated will long remember Nathan Straus, as will the infants upon reaching the age of gratitude.

Writing to the Papers

Why is it, asks North Adams (Mass.) Herald, that four of every five persons who address communications to the newspapers prefer to sign fictitious rather than their real names to the articles? Even to the best letters whose subject matter is timely and efficiently sensible, the writer modestly avoids credit for his suggestions under some non de plume.

This custom is so common as to occasion no comment and is, of course, proper enough, but reflection will show that any article loses something of its value by being subscribed by any one of the hundred names familiar to the press.

To put an article in the papers without going sponsor for it by signing the right name is to cause the article to be regarded with suspicion, while a letter of less merit which is signed by the writer will often carry far more weight and have greater influence.

If, therefore, one wishes to advocate some plan or policy, or to suggest some improvement or urge some reform, his chance of succeeding by means of a communication in the press will be considerably greater if he attaches his right name to what he writes.

This does not mean that articles signed by a pen and accompanied by the author's real name ought not to be published, but what is here set down is rather to urge correspondents to do their utmost toward having their letters accomplish the purpose intended by giving to them the influence of the author's signature and the benefit of the reputation which he enjoys in the community.

There are many men whose names signed to a communication half a dozen lines in length would have more influence than a page of unsigned letters.

Growth of the South

The latest issue of the Manufacturers' Record contains a statement of the population of eighty-eight cities and towns. During the decade between 1900 and 1910 these had increased in population from 5,566,102 to 7,628,766—a gain of 1,962,664 or 35.4 per cent.

Twenty-seven of these cities and towns were in the South, not counting six others that were in Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Missouri. These showed an increase in population from 257,987 to 535,638, a gain of 277,651 or 107.6 per cent.

Counting Wilmington, Del., Washington City, Cumberland, Md., and St. Louis, Kansas City and Windsor, Mo., with the Southern cities their increase was from 1,370,833 to 1,913,608—a gain of 542,775 or 39.6 per cent.

Few of the larger cities of the South have as yet been reported. The reports so far received, however, show surprising gains for this section. It is not improbable that the census will show for the South including Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Missouri, a population of 35,000,000.

Tampa's population figures are, as yet, unreported but it is expected that they will be forthcoming in a few days. This city will more than maintain the percentage of growth recorded by other cities of the South.

Appreciates Them

G. W. Seibert, a Philadelphia reader of the Tribune, writes as follows:

I am much pleased to note your publication of Pastor C. T. Russell's fine sermons. I have been a close Bible student for nearly twenty years and have never found any other writings so satisfactory to heart and head as Pastor Russell's expositions of Scripture. God bless you in your good work. I hope you may see your way clear to continue publishing the sermons.

Some readers have expressed their disapproval of these sermons but the great majority of expressions received by the Tribune are favorable to their continuance. Outside of any Biblical consideration or particular trend of religious belief, they are pronounced helpful and inspiring deliverances and the Tribune does not see where any one can be harmed by perusing them.

FLORIDA SANCTUMS

Now Will You Laugh?—
Lake City Index: We do not laugh enough. There is nothing more pleasant to the ear than the merry laugh of a happy, joyous person, and nothing drives away gloom and care like a good, hearty laugh. Laughter and good humor make a happy, pleasant home and a cheerful bright home is the greatest safe guard against the temptations for the young. Parents should guard against this and spare no pains to make home a cheerful spot.

There's Only One Kissimmee—
Kissimmee Gazette: As an evidence that Kissimmee is as well known as New York, Baltimore, Washington or Chicago, a letter addressed to the "Osceola Hardware Company, Kissimmee," the name of the state being omitted, was delivered promptly to the firm in this city to which it was sent, even though it was mailed in a state to the north of this one.

Thought It Was Against The Law—
Miami Metropolis: There was some heavy betting on the Smith-Brown race for Governor of Georgia. One man is reported to have won twelve thousand dollars, and an Atlanta newspaper man garnered in $2,600. This is at least one instance that a newspaper man had a run of real luck.

More Editorial Pleasantries—
Tallahassee Democrat: Because the True Democrat has let its readers know of some of the beautiful things being said by its brethren of the State press of the editor of Florida, that worthy and distinguished combination of low billingsgate and grog shop slang proceeds to designate us as a "cowardly dog." We might retort that his big carcass contained all the multiplied characteristics of a hundred skunks, since his latter day odor has driven away most of his former friends but this would not be argument. He snorts around much because we decline to stoop to his level. We have too much regard for our readers to afflict them with the vile language it would be necessary to employ to discuss ths question with one of his ilk. His ravings do not offend us, because we recognize the source. We have not yet gotten nearer than a pole's length to a skunk and even then it was horribly offensive.

To Tag Lobbyists—
Gainesville Sun: They are going to tag lobbyists in Georgia and compel them to register. What a bunch of tags it would take to fit out the Indian land and other lobbyists at Washington. But there is no fear of Congress following the lead of Georgia.

A Safe Offer—
Punta Gorda Herald: The Gainesville Sun offers $100 for a rattlesnake ten feet long captured within ten miles of that city. It might safely extend the territory to include the whole state, for we doubt if there ever was a rattlesnake anywhere that measured as much as eight feet in length.

No Success Without Work—
Orlando Reporter-Star: At the present prices of chickens and eggs we can think of no more profitable business than that of poultry raising. It only takes a little capital to begin with and not much time need be devoted to the chickens as they can be left to run in a large enclosure and feed off of nature's product.—Dunnellon Advocate. This looks easy, but like truck raising, orange growing, or anything else, one expects to derive a profit or livelihood from, some experience and considerable work will be found necessary. Nature will not do it all. Until a suitable feed can be raised here profitably the chicken raiser will find it up hill business trying to feed his flock off of nature's product.

TRIBUNE TOPICS

Nay! Nay!—
Pensacola Journal: Anyway, Stovall's stenographer is not named Pauline.

Maybe He Isn't Trying—
Pensacola Journal. Mr. Bryan is still unable to satisfy the Tampa Tribune.

Her New Gown.—
St. Augustine Record: The Tribune announces that its famous stenographer is having some new clothes made, that turban that she was wearing last not meeting with the approval of the State press. Hobble skirt next?

She Can't Be Spared—
Bradentown Journal: When you have a place for an efficient stenographer say so in a Tribune want ad.—Tampa Tribune. Does the above mean the Tribune stenographer? If it does and you will make it definite all the pages of your paper will be filled with want ads for a stenographer. Why, even we—but not at our age such thoughts are vanity.

Only a Swallow For Tampa—
Miami Metropolis: "Let's take in Six Mile creek, too."—Tampa Tribune. Gee! What a thirst.

Accustomed to Big Things—
Bradentown Journal: A Tampa business firm recently made a $5,000 contract for advertising with the Tribune of that city. The average newspaper, if it should get a contract of that size, would put on airs, but the Tribune is accustomed to doing big things in more ways than one.

TOLD IN TAMPA

A Serious Mistake—
The girl with the sunburned nose and the brown arms sat back in her chair at the office and said emphatically, "Everybody makes a mistake somewhere about vacation. I know where I made mine and I shall profit by it."

Every one looked interested, so she went on, "You see I had planned to visit a number of cities and resorts and I was worried about carrying the money, so I divided it up and sent a little money to the general postoffice addressed to myself every place I was going. So that whatever happened I would have enough to gt along on."

"Bully idea," said the manager coming in, "but where may I ask did you make your mistake "

"I forgot," said the girl, demurely, "to address some to myself at home to carry me along when I got back. Has anybody got a quarter to lend?"

Defends Pastor Russell.

ORBISONIA, PA.,
Nov. 22, 1912.

To the Editors of the Herald,
Peabody, Kansas.

My Dear Sirs—

I found on my desk a copy of your issue of November 14, and was especially interested in the letter from H. Gough Birchby of La Jolla, Calif. Having lived in California for a number of years I am always considerably attracted by any news or communications from that part of the country.

I feel sure, Mr Editors, that your keen sense of justice will permit me the use of a small space in your esteemed columns for an examination of the charges made by Mr. Birchby against that widely known defender of the Bible, Pastor Russell.

First, let me ask, is it a crime for any up-to-date business organization to use several names to represent the various branches or departments of their work? Is this so unusual as to call forth Mr. Birchby's severe criticism? Do not the Holy Scriptures give a number of different names to the true church of Jesus Christ, such as "The Church of the Living God," (1 Tim. 3:15); "The Church which is His Body," (Eph. 5:23); "The House of God," (1 Tim. 3:15); "The Church in Nymphas' House," (Philemon 2); "The Pillar and Ground of the Truth," "The Bride, the Lamb's Wife," etc., etc? Was the Apostle Paul guilty of attempting to "allay suspicion" in thus using these various names to indicate the different locations or characteristics of the church. Surely not! Is not such a charge against Pastor Russell's methods of work a manifest absurdity?

Secondly, in re the headings of the sermons, although these heading are sent out in advance, they do not necessarily imply a "prophetic office," as suggested by Mr. Birchby. The incidents mentioned in them are the constant accompaniment of every meeting at which Pastor Russell speaks, such as "Auditorium filled to overflowing, hundreds turned away," etc, etc, and are thus but a statement of the usual features of such gatherings. The people flock to hear him because "there is a famine in the land," not for bread and water, but "for hearing the word of the Lord," (Amos. 8:11.) They are hungry for spiritual food and they go where they believe they will find it. And thousands testify to the fact that they have not been disappointed.

Permit me, Mr. Editors, to tell you that, after having studied almost all known religions for years, in the hopes of finding a reasonable answer to my many perplexing questions, at last, through the mercy of God, every question was answered, every doubt forever settled, by a careful re-studying of my Bible, using Pastor Russell's writings simply as "finger-boards" pointing the way out of my confusion of creeds and man made theories into the marvelous light of divine truth as it began the shine forth from the wondrously illuminated pages of God's blessed word. And I have met thousands of Christians, whose faltering faith has been strengthened, whose consecration has been renewed and deepened, and whose feet have been so firmly reset upon the "Rock of Ages" that nothing can avail to remove or ever cause them again to falter; infidels who have been brought to a solid faith in the word of God, who have been led to the feet of Jesus, and have taken up their cross to follow Him, who is "the way, the truth, the life," through the study of Pastor Russell's "divine plan of the ages," which is so reasonable, so scriptural, so God like, so wise, so just, so loving, so merciful.

Mr. Editor, I feel confident that you will be glad to render this justice to the character and work of one who has been grossly and cruelly misrepresented by your correspondent, Mr. Birchby, who, I doubt not, has written in "all good conscience," but who, I am certain has never read Pastor Russell's "Studies in the Scriptures." or given these matters the critical and almost unceasing study of nearly nineteen years, as has been done by yours in the love of justice and the service of the truth, G. W. SEIBERT.

Obituary.

Mrs. Nancy M. Lovesee died at her home in Catlin Township, Marion County, Kansas, Nov. 20th 1912. Funeral services were held at home Saturday morning conducted by Rev. Peoples of Aulne, and the body was laid to rest in Prairie Lawn cemetery beside her father.

Nancy M. Baxter was born at Andes, Delaware Co, N. Y. May 1st 1831 and when fourteen years of age moved with her parents to Winnebago Co, Ill.

She was married Oct. 9, 1849 at Beloit, Wis. to Robert Lovesee who survives her. Six children were born to them, one son dying in infancy. In the year 1878 they moved to the present home near Peabody Kansas, Geo. W. died Feb. 10th 1880, and Philo E June 3rd 1906. Two sons Lorenzo D. and Alfred R, with one daughter Mrs. Nettie Larsen with six grandchildren and two great grandchildren remain, also two brothers and one sister, Mrs. Juliett DeGroff, who with her granddaughter Mrs. Pratt came from Roscoe, Illinois to attend the funeral services.

Let not your tears be many.
Be not by grief oppressed,
She, who has ministered unto us,
From suffering is at rest.

CARD OF THANKS.

To all the friends who have given sympathy and help in our hour of bereavement, and for the beautiful flowers we extend our heartfelt thanks.

Old Settlers' Picnic.

Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Roberts entertained their clerks and a few other guests last Wednesday evening at what was termed an old settlers' picnic. Each guest came in costume, wearing something as old as they could find. Miss Beulah Frame wore a dress over eighty years old that had belonged to Ed Brewer's greatgrandmother. Mrs. O. J. Roberts wore one seventy-five years old belonging to Mrs. B. Pinkney. To further carry out the idea the evening was spent in tacking comforts. A nice three course supper was served by the host and hostess, assisted by Miss Dorothy Bauslin. The guests were: Misses Lena Timmons, Helen Morrill, Mary and Grace Hale, Louie Russell. Beulah Frame, Mina Fitch, Lutie Kelley, Ella Clithero, Bessie Guinn and Nora Gilchrist, Mrs. Ed Kern and daughter Gladys, Mrs. Ed Brewer, Mrs. W. E. Combs, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Nusbaum.

Peabody Boy Scouts.

There is being some interest manifest in Peabody in the Boy Scout movement To give our boys a little idea of what is being done in other places we publish the following from the Downs News: "Five more of the scouts have ordered suits, which will arrive within the next two weeks. This will make a total of fifteen boys in uniform, A procession of scouts. led by a patrol of boys on their bicycles and a carriage loaded with boys, moved down to Waconda Springs and took possession last Saturday. Scoutmaster Bloom introduced the boys to Dr. Abrahams, who very kindly led them through the institution explained the system of bottling, gave them a short lecture on the care of the human body. The boys listened with great interest, and received many valuable suggestions. The expedition was pronounced by all to be the best yet.

The Cricket on the Hearth.

The cricket on the hearth is still a welcome guest in many English households, for the cricket is believed to bring good luck to a house, while his departure is a certain harbinger of evil tidings. It is unlucky to kill a cricket. A Lancashire correspondent of the London Notes and Queries records a local superstition "that crickets are lucky about a house and will do no harm to those who use them well, but that they eat holes in the worsted stockings of such members of the family as kill them." The writer adds that he was assured of this "on the experience of a respectable farmer's family."

JOTTINGS FROM SOUTH CAMDEN

Budget of Chat From The Lower Section of The City

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL ITEMS

PREPARING FOR SHOW.

The members of the Tabernacle Glee Club, an organization from the Tabernacle Baptist Church, are a busy lot these days practicing for a minstrel show to be given in the Y. M. C. A. Hall Thursday evening, February 27. From all accounts it is going to be a complete success. There seems to be a rivalry among the members to see who shall sell the most tickets, which are selling rapidly. Although this club is only a young organization being not yet two years old, it has appeared in two or three entertainments of its own. Mr. Paxson, the leader, deserves great credit for the good work he has gotten out of he members and for the faithfulness for which they have kept together. Only one member has dropped out of the club in the two years, while several new members have been added. This is a record any organization might be proud of. Any one wishing tickets for the minstrel show may procure the same from any member of the club.

A BUSY PAIR.

Two of the busiest salesgirls at the big police carnival and industrial show held this week at the Armory are Misses Marie Wetherby and Mary Levy. The two South Camden yound ladies are doing a rushing business in peanuts and other edilbes, For amateurs they certainly know how to handle the hungry crowds. Some of the boys say the peanuts are no teht main attraction at the booth presided over by the young ladies.

LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY.

The school children downtown are enjoying the holiday which comes to them by reason of the celebration of the birthday of Abraham Lincoln. Many of the schools had their Lincoln Day exercises yesterday and today the youngsters are enjoying a full holiday. Many homes and business houses are decorated in honor of the day.

A PRETTY TABLE COVER.

Mrs. Milton Osmund, of Broadway and Line street, has presented the police carnival through Officer Frank Crawford, a handsome embroidered centre piece. The hand work piece is attracting unusual attention at the big armory meeting, and some flattering offers have already been made for it. The work required a long time in the making and should bring a high price when finally disposed of.

DEATH OF JOHN LUNDBERG.

The funeral of John Lundberg who died on Monday, will be held tomorrow afternoon from his home at 665 Morgan street. Members of the machine shop Yearly Beneficial Association and the New York Ship Building Company's Relief Society, will attend the service. The interment will be made in Evergreen Cemetery. The funeral arrangements are in charge of Undertaker Blake.

GIRL HELD MEETING.

The members of the Girls' Friendly Society of St. John's Episcopal Church, held an interesting meeting in their rooms at the Paris house last evening. The members of St. Anna's Guild of the church held their meeting last evening at the home of Mrs. George Moffett, at 425 Haddon avenue.

MRS. HARTMAN BURIED.

The funearal of Mrs. Eleanor Loretta Hartman, who died on Sunday, was held this morning from her parents' home, at 746 New street. A requiem mass was held at the Church of the Immaculate Conception and interment was made in Calvary Cemetery.

FUNERAL ARRANGEMENTS.

The funeral of Mrs. Sarah Steel who died on Sunday, will be held tomorrow afternoon from her home at 1924 South Sixth street. The interment which will be private will be made in Evergreen Cemetery.

SICK MAN BETTER.

The many friends of Eldred I. Hibbs, of 1146 Broadway, will be glad to hear that he is recovering from a severe spell of sickness. While on the mend it will be several weeks before he will again be able to be about.

STORK A VISITOR.

The stork recently paid a short visit to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Knox, at 828 Pine street, and left with the couple a fine baby boy. The members of the family are receiving the congratulations of friends upon the health of the new arrival and his mother.

DIED YESTERDAY.

Mrs. Laura Wood, of 450 Mechanic street, who died yesterday morning will be buried on Friday afternoon. Members of Rising Star Lodge No. 5, Shepherds of eBthlehem will attend the service in a body. The interment will be made in Evergreen Cemetery.

CHILD WELFARE MEETING.

Meeting for the purpose of discussing child welfare subjects will be held at the Dispensary building tomorrow afternoon and evening. The meetings will be conducted under the auspices of the Visiting Nurse Society.

REVIVALS SUCCESSFUL.

The series of revival meetings being held at Emmanuel Church are being well attended, and the pastor and others interested in the work report the accomplishment of a great deal of good.

NEW OFFICERS.

At a recent meeting of the Outing Club of the Y. W. C. A., a new set of officers were chosen to serve for the present year. The new officers are President, Miss Florence Mansel; vice president, Miss Alice Morton; secretary, Miss Florence Baylie; treasurer, Miss J. Myrtle Scull.

PLAN ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Young Women's Christian Association will be held on Friday evening. The principal address will be delivered by ev. Joseph B. Kulp. A special musical program will be a feature of the evening.

OLD CEMETERY POPULAR.

During the past few weeks no less than eight persons have been buried in the Old Camden Cemetery on Haddon avenue. This is a most unusual number of funerals for the burial ground located so near the business section of the city.

LOST BUCKLE.

Miss Stella Cross, of 728 Division street, is mourning the loss of a handsome gold buckle, the gift of a brother who died some time ago. The buckle was lost by the young lady last evening while on a visit to the big show at the Armory.

INJURED MAN BETTER.

John Murray, of 569 Line street, who fractured his ankle in a fall from a hoymow yesterday is slowly recovering from the effects of his fall. Mr. Murray was badly shaken up as a result of his tumble.

ENTERTAINED GUESTS.

Miss Susie McDermot, of Bridesburg, and Miss Janet Strafford, of Frankford, recently spent several days as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Price, of 607 Cherrier Place.

HAS HEAVY COLD.

Alfred P. Marts, the genial treasurer of the local Union of Bricklayers, is confined to his bed suffering with a heavyt cold. Mr. Marts of gold fish fame lives at 916 Haddon avenue.

TRUSTEES TO MEET.

The members of the Board of Trustees of Camden cemeteries will hold a business meeting at the City Hall this evening. Only routine business will be transacted.

WILL PLAY PINOCHLE.

Members of the Seventh Ward Republican Club will hold their regular weekly pinochle contest at their clubhouse at Eighth and Walnut streets on Friday evening.

VICTIM OF FALL BETTER.

James Layton, of 713 Carman street, who sprained his ankle in a fall over a week ago, is rapidly recovering from the effects of the accident.

WILL PLAY PINOCHLE.

Members of the Thirteenth aWrd Republican Club will hold a pinochle contest at their club house at 1313 Haddon avenue this evening.

DOWN WITH PNEUMONIA.

Ervin J. Kruck, of 561 Pine street, is suffering with a well developed attack of pneumonia. His many friends wish him a speedy recovery to health.

HOLDING MEETING.

SICK MAN BETTER.

Samuel McLaughlin, of Fourth and Emerald streets, who has been seriously ill for some time past, is reported to be slightly improved today.

LENTEN SERVICECS.

This evening and Friday evening lenten services will be held in St. John's Episcopal Church, Broadway and Royden streets.

HAS SPRAINED WRIST.

Mary Kirk, of 806 South Sixth street, is suffering with a sprained wrist.

WESTVILLE AGAINST PURCHASE OF PIKE

Refuses to Join Woodbury in Securing Control of Gloucester Road

WILLARD MEMORIAL SERVICE TODAY

Westville, N. J., Feb. 12.—After a consultation with the members of the Deptford township committee, Mayor Cattell and Councilman Martin, of Woodbury, were turned down on their proposition to secure control of the Gloucester turnpike from Red Bank avenue, Woodbury to Timber creek. The members of the township committee, Cooper Beideman, Oscar Stern and Jesse W. Hendrickson, argued that as the expense would be much greater than the benefit would be to the taxpayers of Deptford, they were unanimously against the proposition.

One of the prettiest affairs held here for sometime was that of the pink tea given by Mrs. Elizabeth Whetston, at her home, on Silver Lake avenue, in honor of her nephew and his bride, of Monmouth terrace. With the chandeliers draped with smilax and the orchestra hidden behind a bank of potted plants and decorations discoursing classic music, the dining room presented a scene of splendor while the guests were daintily sipping their tea. The table decorations were ferns and pink roses. Each guest was presented with a favor of a white satin heart-shaped box of French bon-bons.

Evangelist Ackley preached one of the best sermons in his series of revival meetings when he appeared as the principal speaker before the mass meeting for men held in the Methodist Protestant Church on Sunday afternoon. The meeting was made the more interesting through the presence of a male quartet which rendered a number of choice selections. Mr. Ackley spoke on "Snow White Men." The evangelist is drawing great crowds every night at the revival meetings in the Methodist Protestant Church and Pastor Stultz is of the opinion that great good will come of his work here.

The February monthly meeting of the Men's Club of St. Luke's parish was held last evening and was well attended. The program was along different lines from that of former meetings in that instead of having a visiting speaker the meeting was entirely of musical and literary character. The interesting program was made up of readings, recitations, songs, violin and piano selections. The sessions were held in the parish room. A number of visitors enjoyed the meeting with the members.

Members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union from all over this section turned out in large numbers here this afternoon to attend a Frances Willard Memorial service in the Methodist Protestant Church. A very interesting program was prepared for the service which began at 2.30 o'clock. An added feature of the meeting was that of a special part being taken by the members of the Loyal Temperance Legion.

Funeral services over the late Mary Gaunder, aged 85 years, will take place to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock from the residence of John Redfield, on Elm street. The remains may be viewed this evening. Interment will be made at Mt. Laurel Cemetery. Mrs. Redfield died on Monday after a lingering illness of general debility.

Prosperity Lodge will send a large delegation to-morrow evening to attend the eleventh anniversary of Energetic Lodge, Ladies' I. O. M., in their lodge rooms in Prosperity Hall. A very atractive program has been arranged for the celebration.

Members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Newbold Baptist Church are making arrangements to give a Martha Washington Tea on Saturday night, February 22. This is an annual event under the auspices of this hustling band of workers and a gerater success than ever is asured on this occasion.

The vital statistics from the Deptford township just forwarded to the State bureau show there was one death and six births in the township during the month of January.

By reason of an outbreak of scarlet fever the Westville school building has been closed for fumigation.

MERCHANTVILLE LINCOLN SOCIAL

Delightful Entertainment By Ladies Aid Society Last Night

PERSONAL AND PERTINENT ITEMS

The Lincoln social which was given last evening in the Chapel of the Presbyterian Church, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society, was a delightful affair. The room was beautifully decorated with flags for the occasion and was rendered quite home-like by those having the arrangements in hand. A very interesting program was prepared which was greatly enjoyed by the large number present. The church and congregation and their friends were present and a pleasant social hour was engaged in by all. The following persons took part in tne program of entertainment: Miss Katherine Leeds sang a solo. There were recitations by Miss Margurite Smith and Miss Marion Sleater, a vocal solo by Miss Ethel Rudderow, a violin duet by Mrs. Rico and Miss Edyth Rudderow, Miss Helen Atkins gave a sketch of the life of Abraham Lincoln. A string orchestra of six instruments renered several selections during the evening, closing the program with all singing "America." The ladies served refreshments and a good social season was enjoyed by all present.

"The Religion of Abraham Lincoln" will be the subject of the address by the pastor, Rev. I. Mench Chambers at the mid-week service of the Presbyterian Church which will be held in the chapel this evening at eight o'clock.

The local Board of Education held its regular meeting last night and transacted considerable routine business.

Ray Haines, of Fort Fairfield, Maine, has been the guest of Leon Collins for the past few days.

Mrs. George H. Barkley, of Philadelphia, is visiting with friends in this place.

Miss Frances Cole who has been suffering from a severe cold is much improved but still confined to the house.

Mrs. George Bedford has gone to Reading, Pa., to visit her mother who is ill.

A DAY'S EVENTS AT HADDONFIELD

Penn Charter Musical Club Give Concert For Visiting Nurse Fund

PROMINENT WOMEN WERE PATRONESSES

Haddonfield, N. J., Feb. 12.—Before an appreciative crowded house last night the combined musical clubs of the William Penn Charter School, of Philadelphia, rendered, what was probably the greatest event of its kind, under the auspices of the "Thirteen Club," in the Opera House for the benefit of the visiting nurse fund. The vocal as well as instrumental selections were thoroughly first class and were greatly enjoyed.

The audience was made up of Haddonfields most select residents and the following ladies were patronesses: Mrs. Wellington Bechtel, Mrs. L. W. Downing, Mrs. F. L. Fithian, Mrs. A. H. Gardner, Mrs. C. V. Graw, Mrs. H. D. Moore, Mrs. eGorge Sherrerd, Mrs. A. J. Super, Mrs. J. F. Tatem, Mrs. A. H. Allen, Mrs. S. B. Dobbs, Mrs. A. L. Fowler, Mrs. E. T. Gill, Mrs. M. D. Malin, Mrs. W. G. Mooke, Mrs. W. D. Sherrerd, Mrs. G. G. Sutliff, Mrs. Benjamin F. Whitecar. Following the entertainment the members of the Thirteen Glee Club and the Penn Charter Club had a dance.

Ralph Buchanan, of Chestnut street, was pleasantly surprised last evening when a score or more of his friends tendered him a party. The young fellow made merry until the early morning hours. Not least among other pleasant features of the occasion was a delicious spread in the dining room. Among those present were Misses Helen Sharp, Helen Murphy, Hazel Taylor, Stella Taylor, Miriam Shinn, Margaret Tomlinson, Blanche Davis, Ethel Dreyden, Katheryn Buchanan, Mary Buchanan, Messrs. Ralph Buchanan, Joseph Pedlow, Fireman Shaw, Wesley Anderson, Louis Shinn, Raymond Carson, Robert Taylor, William Dryden.

The new fire alarm and police call system recently ordered by Council is being installed this week by the Keystone Telephone Company.

Miss Etta Bossert, of Chestnut street, has returned after visiting relatives at Dublin, Pa.

A. W. Clement, of West Main street, will celebrate his eighteen birthday on Saturday.

Henry Sherred, of Highland avenue, entertained some of the Penn Charter boys who took part in the musical club concert in the Opera House over last evening.

HOW BERT SOLD THE TICKETS.

When asked how he sold so many tickets for the Police Carnival, Bert Archer told the following story to a Courier reporter at the Armory last night. He said:

"In glancing over the Pyne Poynt colmns of your paper, I saw where an officer of the first district had disposed over 150 tickets, and that was before they had been out forty-eight hours, and that he hoped to reach the 500 mark. Well, I thought that if one of my brother cops could sell that many, then so could I, or even go him a few better, so I at once mapped out my campaign. On my first day out, I visited practically every law office in the city, then to the banks, and before I had left the saving institutions, I had disposed of over five dollars worth of tickets i neach one. I next made a tour of the business houses, where I met with great success, then to private dwellings. Thinking at this period that every person in this city, had acalled themselves with tickets, I invaded the suburbs. In Gloucester I created much anxiety among the police force, who imagined that some one in the guise of a Camden policeman was trying to "pull one over" on the citizens of that peaceful hamlet. I visited several other suburbs, then crossed the Delaware, and sold $27 worth of tickets to Philadelphia department stores. And believe me, after having disposed of 2,370 tickets, I am about all in."

Bert, old top you certainly do deserve a lot of credit. The helmet of every cop in the city is off to you.

GLADYS GETS IN WRONG.

Outside of six windows and three heads being broken yesterday afternoon, including the loss of a set of false teeth and almost three wrappers, there was little doing on Battle Ax Alley.

The slight skirmish above announced took place in front of Gertie's mansion when a casual remark made by Googleeye Gladys was misinterpreted. Gladys was standing in her front door getting acquainted with the lady next door when Gertie emerged with a kettle. At that time Knock 'Em Dead Donnelly's wife's cat ran across the street.

"That cat's got fleas," remarked Gladys Gertie, hearing the remark, thought Gladys meant her.

It was all off with Gladys. One swing of the warlike Gertrude's mighty arm sent the kettle crashing through Glady's front window; a rush brought her upon Glady's person and a slam in the face sent the new lady's teeth across the pavement. It was not long before other affable housewives, who at the time were leaning out their second story windows, joined the melee.

No police were in the neighborhood at the time, for that's no neighborhood for the police at any time.

WAR NEWS.

Tooth-pick Pashaw has ordered forty thousand more troops to the front to bury the forty thousand he sent last week, which is considered a howling joke by Tooth-pick.

Chess-a-peek Bey has returned to Constantinople from the front. One of his four hundred wives "kicked off" yesterday, which makes him one-four-hundredth part of a widower.

Three hundred suits for divorce have been entered against Wayward Pashaw by his three hundred wives for monkeying around Warlike Pashaw's six hundred wives. Must have taken considerable monkeying.

Hebrew Pashaw has sold his property in Adrianople, which is considered very wise in Hebrew. He sold it to Bonehead Pashaw.

Bravo Pashaw was ordered to make an attack upon the Bulgarians and to return in an hour. He returned in fifteen minutes, but his men didn't.

That's about all the War News this mawnin'.

ERIE SMOKER POSTPONED.

The Erie social and beneficial society have postponed until after lent is over their smoker which was to have taken place this week. The Erie boys enjoy a marked prosperity with a membership of 100 or more. They have been reorganized for over three months without one cent having been drawn for sick benefits. After the lenten season is over they intend to run a surprise package party followed by a May hop.

DAVE SOMEWHAT BETTER.

It is with much pleasure that the many friends of Dave Simpson, the popular County Committeeman of the Tenth Ward, and janitor of the Read School, is rapidly regaining his lost health. Dave has been confined to his home for several days, and it is the sincere wish of many many friends that old reliable Dave will soon be back on the job again.

LEAVE FOR CALIFORNIA.

Mrs. William Coffin and her daughter Miss Nancy B. Coffin, of 203 Cooper street, and Miss Coffin, of Ashland, accompanied by Mrs. William Wood, of 312 Penn street, left to-day for a six weeks' trip to California, making their headquarters at Los Angeles. They will visit the Grand Canon of the Colorado on their outward trip.

GOOD LUCK TO 'UM.'

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Hollis, of 621 Vine street, announce the marriage of their daughter, Edna E., to Raymond E. Glover, of 130 Erie street. The happy couple were united in matrimony in Wilmington, Del., on the tenth of this month. Both parties are well known in North Camden and enjoy the friendship of a host. They are receiving the hearty congratulations of the friends to-day.

SEWELL VS. AQUINAS.

A great game of pionchle is anticipated when the Sewell Club clashes with a card team representing the Aquinas Club, at their headquarters, 207 Vine street, next Thursday night. Both clubs have several card sharps and consequently a great game is looked for.

NORTH END TO MEET.

The regular weekly meeting of the North End Club, will be held tonight at the home of Arthur Davis, of 527 Elm street. All members are urged to bep resent as ballots will be cast for the election of a secretary and treasurer.

MRS. FALKNER ILL.

Mrs. Fred Falkner, wife of Manager Falkner, of the Temple Theatre, has been removed to a local hospital and is in a serious condition. Mrs. Falkner has a host of riends in this city, all of whom wish the esteemed woman a speedy recovery.

LITTLE FELLOW ILL.

Little George Allen Tatem, of 329 York street, is confined to his home suffering with a serious illness. The little fellow has a host of friends, all of whom wish him a speedy recovery.

RETURNS FROM ATLANTIC.

Having spent several days in Atlantic City on important business, Frank F. Neutze, a popular law student of the Temple Building has returned to this city.

BENEFIT A SUCCESS.

Many uptowners, who are friends and members of the Molt Yearly Beneficial Society, attended the Temple Theatre last evening. It was Molt night, and quite a fair sum was realized from the benefit.

HELD ANNUAL BANQUET.

The annual banquet of the Daughters of the American Revolution, held their annual banquet in the banquet room of the Hotel Robeson yesterday afternoon. The women spent a delightful time.

LEAVES FOR WASHINGTON.

Miss Jeanette Schermerhorn, of 514 North Fourth street, left this city today for Washington, D. C., where they will remain for two weeks.

VISITING IN HARRISBURG.

FINICKY APPETITES PUT IN ORDER

You Can Sit Right Down and Eat Anything Served if You Get Acquainted with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets

With a most pathetic sigh the dyspeptic sits down and "views with alarm" his hungry companions. Now, the best doctrine for most people to hand out to suffering stomachs is to couple a square meal with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. To sit down to a good meal and eat whatever is served is getting back to the good old days when grand-dad craved the roast; when the family made a clean-up; and when good appetites with sound digestion produced the men and women that have made our nation what it is.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the dyspeptic's hope. They are a natural restorative of healthy action to the stomach and small intestines, because they supply the elements that the weak stomach lacks—pepsin, golden seal and other digestives.

If you are afflicted with any symptoms of stomach trouble, be assured that your digestive organs are losing power—they need help and there is no more sensible help to be given them than to supply elements which will do the work of digestion for them.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been found by test to have digestive powers, one grain of the active principle of these tablets being sufficient to digest 3,000 grains of ordinary food. It is plain that no matter what the condition of your stomach, or how far your disease has progressed, one of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets taken at meal-time will do the work—give your stomach an opportunity to regain its lost powers, the muscles will be strengthened, the glands invigorated, and you will be a new man.

ELDERLY FOLKS! CALOMEL, SALTS AND CATHARTICS AREN'T FOR YOU

Harmless, Gentle "Syrup of Figs" is Best to Cleanse Your Stomach, Liver and 30 Feet of Bowels of Sour Bile, Decaying Food, Gasses and Clogged-up Waste

You old people, Syrup of Figs is particularly for you. You who don't exercise as much as you need to; who like the easy chair. You, whose steps are slow and whose muscles are less elastic. You must realize that your liver and ten yards of bowels have also become less active.

Don't regard Syrup of Figs as physic. It stimulates the liver and bowels just as exercise would do if you took enough of it. It is not harsh like salts or cathartics. The help which Syrup of Figs gives to a torpid liver and weak, sluggish bowels is harmless, natural and gentle.

When eyes grow dim, you help them. Do the same with your liver and bowels when age makes them less active. There is nothing more important. Costive, clogged-up bowels mean that decaying, fermenting food is clogged there and the pores or ducts in these thirty feet of bowels suck this decaying waste and poisons into the blood. You will never get feeling right until this is corrected—but do it gently. Don't have a bowel wash-day; don't use a bowel irritant. For your sake, please use only gentle, effective Syrup of Figs. Then you are not drugging yourself, for Syrup of Figs is composed of only luscious figs, senna and aromatics which can not injure.

A teaspoonful to-night will gently, but thoroughly, move on and out of your system by morning all the sour bile, poisonous fermenting food and clogged-up waste matter without gripe, nausea or weakness.

But get the genuine. Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna." Refuse, with contempt, any other Fig Syrup unless it bears the name—prepared by the California Fig Syrup Company. Read the label.—Advertisement.

And when you stop to think that twelve million of these treatments are used annually in this country and Europe, can you wonder so many people know Dr. Burkhart, and that druggists everywhere are glad to handle his treatments on his honest basis. Be sure to ask for and see that you get Dr. Burkhart's Vegetable Compound—Adv.

HE DENIES CHARGES OF REV. G. Z. STUP

Editor Daily Courier:

I feel confident your love of truth and your sense of justice will grant me some space in which to deny the charges made in your issue of Saturday, February 8, by Rev. G. Z. Stup against Pastor Charles T. Russell, of Brooklyn and London Tabernacles. Not content with attempting to ridicule this man's wonderful exposition of Scripture (which none of the ministers can answer or gainsay) Rev. Stup has stooped to atack Pastor Russell's personal character.

In Rev. Stup's reference to the divorce trial, brought by Mrs. Russell, he shows his ignorance of the facts whe nhe states that in this case were "made definite and serious charges; naturally these particulars are not suitable to this narrative."

The court records plainly show that all charges made by Mrs. Russell as to cruelty, etc., were thrown out by the Court, and the veiled insinuation of immorality (shame to a minister of the Gospel that he should think such evil of a fellow-Christian, much less publicly state what he does not know to be the truth!)

So far as the woman, Rose Ball (whose name is implied in Rev. Stup's charge) ,is concerned, she was virtually an adopted child, and was referred to by Pastor Russell and his wife as "our daughter Rose."

It is the most preposterous of all absurd charges to even intimate improper conduct on the part of Pastor Russell with this girl, inasmuch as it is a fact (fully acknowledged, and indeed complained of by Mrs. Russell), that Pastor Russell lived an absolutely celibate life with her during the thirteen years of their marriage.

Is it reasonable to suppose that such a man would neglect a wife as attractive and accomplished as was Mrs. Russell in those days, to show undue familiarity toward another woman, and especially one so greatly her inferior in every respect?

Thanking you in advance for your anticipated courtesy, I am, yours for the truth in everything and justice towards all men!

Mrs. J. C. Schwyhart and daughter, of northeast of Belle Plaine, came down last Thursday to visit for a few days with her daughter, Mrs. C. A. Mason and family, southwest of town. —Monitor Press.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Kern, domestic art teacher at the Belle Plaine high school, was at headquarters Wednesday to see just what work would be suitable for the girls in her class to do for the Red Cross. They have been doing quite a good deal of Red Cross work, among it being refugee garments.—Beacon.

The Democratic editors of Kansas have been furnished a picture taken of Sen. William Howard Thompson as he marched in Washington in the parade in honor of the drafted men. As these postmaster-editors gaze in rapture upon this picture, until their eyes fill with tears, they will readily understand the feeling that impelled the soldiers of Napoleon to shriek with their dying breath, "Long live the emporer."—Beloit Gazette.

We received a picture also, but here is one editor who is not joining in the "gazing in rapture" stuff. Still, we were glad to note Kansas, as usual, was right out in front—when the picture was taken.

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Speer entertained for dinner, Monday, Dr. Frank Loveland and J. Byron Cain.

He was a fine looking, well fed man, prosperous and of good character, loyal to his country, though of foreign extraction, and yet he said smilingly, "Well, I killed my own hogs for meat, and I guess we shall eat what we want of it," Yes, and he grew his own wheat and has legal right to eat all the wheat flour he wants to. But if he had a son on the battle line in France—the fine boy whom he loved with a true father's love, and he had reason to believe that if this country did not save meat and flour, that son would go hungry while battling for our rights and liberties here at home, do you not think that man would feel that he just MUST save the things that are most needed and can be shipped to the battle front? Well, shall the people who furnish the boys, also be compelled to do all the saving that these boys may not go hungry, while the neighbors eat what they please and as much as they please, because, forsooth, it is their own? Had this good man and the others like him thought of it in just this light? We think not—otherwise, they would feel hot with shame and would choke on the food they might spare. It is only too true that this war has not "come home" yet to many of our people. But it is coming—and those who do not volunteer to help, will be drafted.—Oskaloosa Independent.

Geo. Guy Married.

A pretty Christmas wedding was solemnized Tuesday at 2 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Haugen, 548 East Platte avenue, when their daughter, Miss Anna Cora Haugen, became the bride of Mr. George Guy, formerly of Kansas. Miss Ida Haugen, the bride's sister, played the wedding music and preceding the ceremony Mr. J. Ernest Thompkins sang "O Promise Me" and 'A Perfect Day' The parlor was darkened and beautifully lighted by Christmas tree candles the holiday greens forming a pretty setting for the wedding. The bride wore a handsome white crepe de chine gown and carried a bouquet of bride's roses. The double ring service of the English Lutheran church was used, the Rev. Robert Bruce Wolf officiating. After the ceremony the bride's cake and other refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy are at home to their friends in their newly-furnished bungalow, which he had ready for his bride at 546 Sierra Madre.—Colorado Springs Gazette.

George is well and favorably known here where he used to make his home. He and his bride have the congratulations of all the good people of this vicinity.

THIRTY YEARS AGO

Items Taken From the Files of This Date, 1887.

Uncle John Burchfield and Mr. A. B. Epperson returned from a visit at Independence, Kansas.

Miss Birchie Pinkley gave a New Year's Eve party, to a number of her young friends. It was a pleasant affair.

Miss Ella Brown will open her painting class again next Thursday, Jan. 12th, and will continue Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoons of each week.

Married:—At the Presbyterian parsonage, Belle Plaine, Kan., Dec. 30th, 1887, by Rev. W. W. Curtis, Wm. Gunn to Miss Jennie Sutherland, both of Belle Plaine.

Mrs. Stephenson, of Pittsburgh, Pa., is here visiting her sons, J. B., John and Charles. She is accompanied by Misses Maggie Lewis and Mollie Powelson.

Capt. Reitz, county commissioner elect from this district, will take his seat Monday. We venture the prediction that the Captain will make a good commissioner.

The Misses Welter, who have been absent attending school, were home and spent the holidays with their parents. Miss Katie returned to school at Topeka Tuesday.

A masquerade ball was given by the Sons of Veterans Monday night and was the event of the season. Over 100 were present. The Leighton house furnished an excellent supper.

HELEN WEEDEN, Teacher.

The NEWS contributed another dollar and a half to the Red Cross last week. One of our former subscribers in ordering the paper stopped to his address said he would give the money to the Red Cross. They are welcome to it, only we would like to know for sure that the Red Cross really got the dollar and a half.

M. P. Hatfield came down from Wichita Saturday evening and remained over Sunday, visiting his mother, Aunt Lizzie Hatfield,

How Long, Oh Lord, How Long.

How long, oh Lord, how long
Shall weakness serve the strong?
How long shall Might make Right
And darkness hate the light?

How long, oh Lord, how long,
Till Truth shall crush the wrong,
Till darkness turn to day,
And sorrow flee away?

How long till wars shall cease,
This turmoil end in peace?
How long the sin-cursed Earth
Await her second birth?

How long, Lord, must I feel
The proud oppressor's heel?
I'm weary of the night,
I long for morning light!

I long to see Thy face,
I long for Thine embrace—
How long, Lord, till I come
To my long-promised home?

* * * * *

Not long, my child, not long;
Be brave, be true, be strong!
The Day-star doth appear,
The Kingdom draweth near!

Look up, my child, look up,
The last drop's in thy Cup!
Trust where thou canst not see—
I soon will call for thee!

Robbins Oil & Gas company on the Robbins farm in 28-28-1 east, due south of Wichita, resumed drilling yesterday at around 3075 feet. The company announces that it will keep on after oil until it gets it or runs out of hole. Five inch casing is now in the hole.

Union Oil company yesterday decided to drill the Banks test in 8-28-2, our miles southeast of Wichita, a hundred feet deeper. Bottom of hole is now 3,040 feet in a water sand picked up under a sandy lime, which is reported to have shown a trace of oil.—Eagle.

CLEARWATER CURRANTS.

Mr. and Mrs. Charley Harrington motored to Belle Plaine yesterday and brought back her brother, Wilbur Martin, who will make his home with them.

The plasterers finished their part of the work on the new bungalow of Charley Harrington's the past week, and they will soon be "at home", after varying successes in building.

Mrs. Emma McQuillan was brought back Tuesday from the hospital. It will be necessary for her to return in a couple of weeks to have an X ray picture taken of the broken bones of the shoulder.—Clearwater Courant.

Miss Helen Wade went out to Wilmore last Thursday to visit her sister Mrs. Sam Fausett. While there she was offered a position in a store which she accepted and will not return to Belle Plaine. Mr. and Mrs. Fausett have disposed of their interests at Wilmore and are moving to Argonia.

INCORPORATED

The Mayor is Commander.

The Governor has commissioned Mayor S. F. Field as Commander of the local company of Home Guards. The local bunch had elected E. F. Emery in that capacity, misinterpreting the rules of the order.

The Mayor has to give bond for any equipment that the state furnishes.

By the way, the Mayor is not stuck on this new job. He is not easily puffed up. And does not expect the people to Kowtow to him because of this new honor.—Mulvane News.

RICHARDSON BROS, AUCTS.,
J. L. ROSECRANTS, C'LK.

Mrs. Rhoda Matthews left Monday evening for a visit in western Oklahoma.

Manhattan, Kan., Jan. 8—Banding of shade trees for cankerworm should be done in January, advises George A. Dean, professor of entomology in the Kansas State Agricultural college It is important to get the bands on before the moths climb the trees on the first warm days of winter or early spring.

Canker worms are almost certain to prove a serious menace to trees next season in the localities where they were present last spring, believes Prof. Dean. Among shade trees the elm is most liable to attack, the trees being in many cases completely defoliated by the spring cankerworm.

The trees are damaged by worms or larvae of this insect which devour the foliage. The eggs from which these worms hatch are laid in sheltered places on the branches by the female moths. As these female moths are wingless they must crawl up the trunk of the tree when they emerge from the ground to lay their eggs.

"A simple method of protection, and one that gives excellent satisfaction in the case of shade trees or a few fruit trees, consists of banding the trunk of the tree with a sticky substance, tanglefoot, to prevent the ascent of the wingless females," said Professor Dean, "The best method is to smear this substance on bands of heavy paper, such as building or tar paper, bound to the trunk of the tree.

"The paper bands should be six inches wide and the tanglefoot smeared around the center. The bands should be put on in the first warm days, and the sticky substance renewed whenever the material hardens. Either cotton should be stuffed behind the band to close all crevices between the tree and the band or a strip of cotton batting two inches wide, the cheapest grade, should be placed around the tree, and covered with the band of tar paper. The paper should be drawn snugly enough to press the thick band of cotton into the crevices.

"The band can be easily fastened at the end with three sharp pointed tacks three-fourths of an inch long. If the paper is much wider than the narrow cotton one it will completely cover it, and thus avoid the unsightly appearance of cotton showing either above or below the edges of the paper. A number of substances of a sticky nature may be used, such as pine tar, coal tar, printers' ink, and dendroline but the best material for this purpose is tree tanglefoot."

We keep in stock at this office some heavy copying or carbon paper just the thing to transfer patterns. 10 cents per sheet.

PICKED DETECTIVES GUARD WATERFRONT

Inspector Underhill and Force of 100 Start Work.

Under instructions from Police Commissioner Enright, Inspector Underhill and a squad of 100 picked detectives started out today to protect the waterfront. The Commissioner said this number would be increased if found necessary.

The Commissioner also stated that Inspectors Dwyer and Boettler, who had been in charge of this branch of the department, had turned over to him valuable information and data which in turn had been placed in Inspector Underhill's possession. The Commissioner added that while the Army and Navy authorities could go just so far the Police Department could go further.

Inspector Dwyer will retain supervision over the marine division of the Police Department and will have charge of the steamboat patrol, police launches and munition ships. The Inspector has a master and pilot's license, and during the Spanish-American War was an ensign in the Navy. He is familiar with the work along the waterfront, having been in that branch of the department for a number of years.

In addition to these duties Inspector Dwyer will have charge of the Home Defense League, comprising 20,000 men, 10,000 of which can be called out to meet any immediate emergency.

Inspector Boettler will have charge of the Fifteenth Inspection District, vacated by Inspector Underhill.

Questioned relative to the articles appearing in the newspapers as to gambling in this city the Commissioner other than saying the police were co-operating with the District Attorney's office would make no statement.

The waterfront guard was arranged for at a conference among Commissioner Enright, United States Attorney Caffey, his assistant, John C. Knox; United States Marshals McCarthy and Power and Deputy Collector Henry C. Stuart, Inspectors Boettler and Dwyer, who have been handling the supervision of alien enemies, are to be relieved.

In a talk with the lieutenants yesterday Commissioner Enright announced that the "shoo-fly" officers would be sent back to other duties and hereafter all men of the department would be put on the honor system. No quarter is to be given the man who violates his honor. The "shoo-fly" squad has been used by all commissioners to report on the work of the officers from captains down, and it has been very effective in checking up and uncovering derelictions of duty.

Changes among detectives were forecasted by an order from Second Deputy Commissioner Lahey to the captains to report all first-grade detectives. A general shakeup is expected to follow the receipt of this information.

Governor Whitman said yesterday it was "foolish" to suppose that he would take a hand in the police situation. He added that he hoped Mayor Hylan's administration would be a success.

JEWISH SISTERHOODS WORK.

The Brooklyn Union of Jewish Sisterhoods have patrioticallly organized the Volunteer Hospital Garment Workers Auxiliary, No. 152, for American Red Cross, and general war relief work. The purpose of it is to knit for the soldiers and sew garments for the Red Cross. Teams have been organized, each in charge of a captain, and every day different groups of women numbering up to 50 workers, assemble. Their "workshop" is on the fourth floor of the Oppenheim-Collins Building on Fulton street, which has been donated by Michael Levy, the manager. The organization's officers are: Mrs. Jacob I. Gumport, president; Mrs. W. Abraham, Mrs. L. Streep, Mrs. H. Breslauer, vice president; and Mrs. L. Petchesky, secretary. Mrs. D. Gingold and Mrs. Simon R. Cohen are chairman and vice chairman of the "workshop."

WILLS FILED

SAMUEL CROOKS of 320 Eighth avenue, who died January 15, at the Long Island College Hospital, left an estate of "over $250,000," according to his will filed today. The real property is estimated at $50,000 and the personal property at over $200,000. His widow, Eleanor L. Crooks, receives all of the furniture and household effects in the city and country dwellings and the income from one-third of the estate until their son, Samuel Hugh Crooks, reaches the age of 28. The son gets the income from the remaining two-thirds of the estate until he is 28, and upon his arriving at that age the principal of the entire estate is to be distributed, one-third to the widow and two-thirds to the son. A contingency clause stipulates that if the widow remarries before their son becomes 28 she is to receive $100,000 outright as her share in lieu of her dower and the provision already made for her. The son, in such an event, is to receive the remaining part of the estate. Mrs. Crooks and Samuel S. Conover are appointed joint executors of the estate and are to be joined by Samuel Hugh Crooks as an additional executor when he becomes 21.

MRS. MARY M. BRAGDON of 3684 Bedford avenue, who died January 18, left an estate of over $20,000. Her son, Joseph H. Bragdon, receives all of her interest in the corporation of Bragdon, Lord & Nagel, Inc., and also the income from the residue after numerous bequests to relatives are deducted. Bequests of $500 are made to each of the following: Catharine M. Kirk, sister; William C. Waters, brother; Isabelle S. Muller and Anna M. Shaw, half-sisters, and John W. Shaw, half-brother. Bequests of $200 each are made to Abbie F. Hyde and Harriet N. Bragdon, sisters-in-law.

JOHN H. FLANNERY of 282 Eighty-third street left an estate of "more than $10,000," which is bequeathed to his widow, Esther Flannery.

SAMUEL J. PLOWMAN of 781 East Twenty-second street, who died June 5, 1916, left an estate of $500, which is bequeathed to eight children and eleven other beneficiaries.

MALCOLM ALEXANDER of 721 Sterling place, who died January 11, left an estate of $5,500, which is bequeathed to his daughter, Grace Alexander Parkin.

WOMENS' DEFENSE BOARD.

The list of women who will compose the Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense, announced at City Hall yesterday by Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, chairman, includes the following members from Brooklyn:

Mrs. Norman S. Dike, Mrs. John H. McCooey, Mrs. Frank Kendall Perkins, Mrs. Grace Strachan Forsythe, Miss Isabel A. Ennis.

ICE GORGE BREAKS AT CINCINNATI; BIG PACKET BOAT SUNK

Property Valued at More Than a Million Dollars Is in Danger.

KENTUCKY EXPECTS DAMAGE

Cincinnati, Ohio, January 30—The ice gorge at this point broke at 10:10 o'clock this morning and began slowly moving down stream. The first boat to be taken with it was the large packet City of Louisville. It swung loose from its moorings and crashed into the Government boat Ottawa. The Ottawa, however, did not break loose. The City of Louisville soon sank.

More than fifty coal barges, several of them containing the precious black lumps, swept by here shortly after the break came. A half hour after the first movement the river was a raging sea of tossing ice and soon picked the tug Hattie Brown from her moorings on the Kentucky side and swept her away.

Word reached here today that the big excursion steamer Princess had gone down at her moorings at Carrollton, Ky., at the mouth of the Kentucky River, and that little hope was held out for the safety of her sister steamer, the Island Queen, moored at the same place.

Every precaution possible has been taken to save the numerous packets, towboats, barges and dockhouses here. But the rivermen admit that large damage is almost certain to result when the ice goes out. Property valued at more than $1,000,000 is in danger.

Monongahela Flood Checked.

Pittsburg, January 30—A sudden cold snap in the mountains of West Virginia checked the flood in the headwaters of the Monongahela River early today and ice gorges at Brownsville, Pa., and Morgantown, W. Va., instead of moving out as the local weather bureau anticipated, held fast with the result that mills in the Pittsburg district were still short of coal. Water, the weather bureau expected, would seep through the piled-up ice, but not in sufficient quantity to force the masses out.

Towboats were sent into the third pool to try to force a way through the ice to the coal mines, but early reports were that little headway was being made. The fourth pool was said to be frozen solid. Whole gorges of piled up ice along the banks made the fifth and sixth pools impassable. Until these pools are freed of ice, or a channel wide enough to permit of the passage of towboats can be broken, there is little hope of getting coal to the Pittsburg mills.

Kentucky Towns Anxious.

Louisville, Ky., January 30—Cities and towns along the tributaries of the Ohio having their origin in the mountains of Southeastern Kentucky and Eastern Tennessee were today anxiously watching the progress of floods which carried on their crests great quantities of ice. Flood conditions were reported in practically every important stream in the State and extensive damage had been done by the grinding ice the water carried with it.

The Big Sandy was gorged at its mouth at Cattlettsburg and the water was backed up for many miles. The Kentucky River was rising along its lower reaches and ice was gorged just above the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad bridge at that place.

At Paducah, at the mouth of the Tennessee, the great gorge which had formed in the Ohio just above the city was being anxiously watched for signs of its breaking up. It is growing every hour, according to reports and the prospect is that if it breaks suddenly it will carry away all the river shipping still left unharmed in the Paducah ice harbor after approximately $1,000,000 worth of craft were swept from their moorings yesterday. Paducah citizens are also keeping an anxious eye upon the Tennessee River, down which stream an immense ice gorge is reported to be coming, and which is expected to reach there some time today.

REED TO BE RUSSIAN CONSUL GENERAL HERE?

London, January 30—Michael M. Oustinoff, the Russian Consul General in New York, has been dismissed, according to a Russian wireless official statement received here. John Reed has been appointed to succeed Oustinoff.

The John Reed referred to probably is the American newspaper man and Socialist. He has been in Russia since last November. He is now under indictment as one of the former editors of The Masses for violation of the Espionage act, and if he returns to this country and claims diplomatic immunity an interesting situation will be presented.

Reed is a graduate of Harvard University and first gained fame as a writer by a series of articles on the Mexican revolution. At the beginning of the war he went abroad for the Metropolitan Magazine and wrote about various phases of the conflict. He is the author of a book containing picturesque descriptions of the situation in Russia and Serbia in the second year of the war.

Reed has always been a fierce radical and would doubtless find himself in hearty sympathy with Bolsheviki theories. He has learned to speak Russian during his several visits to that country.

NEW G. H. S. OFFICERS

This afternoon Florence Burger, the president of the Girls High School Self-Government Organization, is entertaining the present senators and self-government officers at her home, 360 Quincy street. The members of the self-government board presented Miss Burger with a book as an appreciation of her work and loyalty.

4B — President, Gladys Wolcott; vice president, Flora Salowitz; secretary, Marion Hule; treasurer, Dorothy Knudsen; senators, Lillie Taylor and Hazel Long; faculty adviser, Miss Lulu M. Stone.

FIND LEFERTS' HOUSE

After leaving its former site two weeks ago to be removed to Prospect Park, the old Lefferts homestead was located today on Washington avenue and Malbone street. The house was moved past Malbone street on Friday night and it is expected that in a week's time the homestead will be placed on its new foundation on the side of the park facing the botanical garden. The old dwelling will be transformed into a children's playhouse and will be preserved intact. On account of bad weather the moving has been very slow. New supporting foundations have already been prepared for the homestead.

War Pageant by Women, To Help Work of League

Plans for a war-time pageant, to be given at the Academy of Music, February 28, March 1 and 2—a pageant which will rival in beauty and stupendous scenic effect the "Merry Whirl" of last year and the preceding year—were discussed today at the Brooklyn Woman's Club, 114 Pierrepont street.

The pageant represents the gigantic effort on the part of the National League for Woman's Service, of which Mrs. Walter Gibb is chairman, to raise funds to successfully carry on the war work, which though now only in its inception, has proved so effective. Miss Lila Stewart calls her pageant the "Road to Victory," and has divided it into four episodes. Egypt, Greece, Rome and China with a central figure of Might are portrayed in dances, song and beautiful pictures in the first episode, entitled "Might." "Light," that part which Miss Stewart says will be carried alone by its marvelous beauty, recreates the manger with the birth of the Christ child. A Metropolitan singer, it is expected, will sing the "Virgin's Lullaby" from "The Nativity," and the "Pilgrims Chorus" will be sung by the male voices of many members of the Brooklyn and New York Choral societies. A host of 390 angels will be used in this scene singing the Christmas carols. Uncle Sam is to be the central figure in 'Service" and canteen maids, knitters, and an army of Red Cross nurses will offer to him their help and assistance for the prosecution of the war. Food conservation, with its concrete illustrations will furnish the touch of comedy, which appears in this scene, and a number of songs will add to its attractiveness. The closing episode is "Peace," assembling all the nations of the world robed in white and gold with the olive branch in a grand finale in which war is downed and victory has joined with peace.

Hundreds of persons are to take part in each scene, the total cast numbering far over 1,000 and including many well known professionals and a host of prominent society folk.

Mrs. Gibb greeted the large gathering which had assembled to hear about the big pageant and told of what the National League for Woman's Service had accomplished within the time she had been chosen chairman. The work at Bensonhurst, with the commencement of the building of the hostess house next week, has been most gratifying.

After Miss Stewart had sketched the idea of the pageant, Mrs. Samuel T. Trowbridge, state chairman of the league, told of the canteen work, the kitchens for aenemic children, the Woman's Land Army now being organized, and the numerous other activities of the league.

The meeting was concluded by a few concrete suggestions by Mrs. William Beecher as to how to begin assuring the financial success of the pageant.

ROBERT A. FORDHAM STRICKEN IN OFFICE

Well-Known Real Estate Man Dies Suddenly of Heart Failure.

HEAD OF FIRM OF FRY & LYLE.

Veteran of the Twenty-third Regiment and Many Years in the Uptown Real Estate Field.

Robert Austin Fordham, 57 years old, of 394 McDonough street, a well-known real estate dealer, died suddenly yesterday afternoon from heart failure in his office at 1550 Fulton street. He was taken ill shortly after 4 o'clock and expired before medical aid could be summoned. The funeral arrangements will be made to await the arrival of one of his sons from Spartanburg, S. C.

Mr. Fordham was at the head of the real estate firm of Fry & Lyle at the Fulton street address. He was the son-in-law of the late J. M. Lyle, and since the death of the two partners had carried on the business under the old name for the past thirteen years. He started out in the real estate field as the head of a branch office of the firm on Broadway near Halsey street. He was a member of the Brooklyn Board of Real Estate Brokers.

Mr. Fordham was born in Brooklyn and was a member of the St. Mark's M. E. Church during the time that he lived in Flatbush. He had a summer residence at Saxton's River, Vt., and was a member of the Congregational Church in that town. He was a Free Mason affiliated with a Jamaica lodge. Mr. Fordham had served a full term of enlistment in Company I, Twenty-third Regiment, N. G. S. N. Y., and was a member of the Veterans Association of that regiment. He is survived by his wife, Annie M. Lyle; two sons, Austin L. and Ellsworth W., a member of Company A of the 104th Machine Gun Battalion, Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg, S. C.; a daughter, Mrs. Clarence B. Coleman, and three sisters, Mrs. Charles A. Gilbert, Mrs. James S. Wright of Freeport, L. I., and Miss Abbie E. Fordham.

DUKE OF CHEVREUSE KILLED IN AIRPLANE FLIGHT

Paris, Tuesday, January 29—The Duke of Chevreuse was killed today while making a test flight in an airplane. He was 26 years old, son of the Duke of Luynes and grandson of the Duchess D'Uzes.

NO. 12 TO HOLD EXERCISES

Much to the disappointment of the graduates of Public School No. 12, Adelphi street, near Myrtle avenue, Principal Frederick Schoedel announced that there would be no graduating exercises this term because he could get no adequate auditorium with heat. The boys and girls discussed the matter and decided to see whether they couldn't secure some place for the occasion. Then Ardele Mohl, who is also a student at the Young Women's Christian Association, announced that she had been successful in getting permission from that association to hold the exercises in Memorial Hall at 10 o'clock Friday morning. Now everyone is happy.

A Call From Brooklyn Boys In the Service.

Many requests for newspapers from Brooklyn boys in the service are received by The Eagle—soldiers and sailors, who cannot afford to subscribe for themselves, whose folks at home feel the pinch of the cost of living and are unable to make the sacrifice necessary to send papers regularly to them.

From time to time generous offers have been received from Eagle readers to send The Eagle to some Brooklyn boy who has asked for it. The Eagle makes a special service rate of 50 cents a month for Daily and Sunday edition by mail (one-half the regular rate).

Answering the call of these boys, who are away from home, who miss their home associations, and to whom it means much to hear regularly from their home city, is surely a most satisfying and praiseworthy way of further "doing your bit."

Will you be responsible for a subscription to one of these boys for one month or longer? You will be notified who the boy is and he will also be advised of your generosity. Address communications to Service Subscription Dept., Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

FRANKLIN SOCIETY ELECTS

The Franklin Literary Society held a meeting last night, at the Brooklyn Democratic Club, Fulton and Nevins streets. After the election of officers, a series of enlightening talks on the coal situation were given by the members. George H. Frye interested his audience by explaining "The Philosophy of the Attack on Secretary Baker." Mr. Frye blamed big business for the adverse criticism Mr. Baker has received.

Following this, a debate was held. The question was: "Resolved, That women should have unrestricted opportunity for employment in gainful occupations."

The re-elected officers are: Charles W. Morhous, president; T. E. Crossman, corresponding secretary, and L. J. Somerville, recording secretary. Plans were made for a social meeting, to be held on February 8, at the residence of Franklin Taylor, 1199 Ocean avenue.

T. R. MAY BE AT DINNER

(Special to The Eagle.)

Albany, January 30—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, whose activities at Washington are rapidly pushing his name to the fore as a possible Republican candidate for President in 1920, may be the guest of honor of the Albany Correspondents at the annual dinner this year. The Governor of the State is usually the guest of honor, but this year it has been strongly intimated here that the Governor, in view of the war, will not attend. He has persistently declined to attend many other public functions.

Church in Manhattan, but recently became affiliated with the Christian Science faith. Her funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon in the Funeral Church, Broadway and Sixty-sixth street, Manhattan.

HEIRESS TO $150,000; CAN'T PAY EXPENSES

Daughter of Freeborn G. Smith Says Trustees Hold Up Income.

ASKS COURT TO INTERVENE.

Trustees Claim Payment Now Is Not for Best Interests of Mrs. Lewis.

Reciting that she has not even sufficient money to pay necessary household expenses and that she has not been able to pay the taxes on her home at 6 St. James place, because the trustees of the estate of her father, the late Freeborn G. Smith, the piano manufacturer, have held up payment of her income, Mrs. Lillian Smith Lewis today asked Supreme Court Justice Aspinall, through Edmund F. Driggs, to require the trustees to pay over more than $2,000 of accumulated income. The money is due from a trust fund of $150,000 left by the piano manufacturer. The trustees against whom the action is directed are David F. Butcher and Adoniram J. Powell. Justice Aspinall reserved decision.

In the papers submitted on the motion it is asserted that Mrs. Lewis has received no income from her $150,000 trust fund since last September, the trustees having withheld it pending the outcome of an action brought by Mrs. Lewis in which she objects to the deduction of $1,262 as attorney's fees on the accounting. The attorney's fees arose out of the action before Supreme court Justice Benedict in 1916 in which Justice Benedict directed that the trustees must get back from Freeborn G. Smith the money from his sister's trust fund that had been advanced to him. Nearly all of the fund was loaned to the brother on his notes.

Mr. Driggs, with John T. McGovern, who is guardian ad litem for Mrs. Lewis's two children, Charles E. F. Lewis Jr. and Everett Smith Lewis, disclosed that there is much feeling among those involved in the case because of the charge for attorney's fees in the earlier litigation. Mrs. Lewis, said Mr. McGovern, was "very much surprised" to find a charge of $1,262 because it had been expressly directed, he said, that there should be no such charge. Mrs. Lewis, declared Mr. Driggs, very properly objected and then the trustees, so the lawyer asserted, told her in effect:

"Very well, then; if you object, we can't pay you any money until this matter has been disposed of."

Because of their refusal, as the lawyer said and the papers stated, there is now in the hands of the trustees $2,097.96 of accumulated income, and Mrs. Lewis, without any payments since last September, is in actual need. This condition would continue, it was asserted, until March, when the accounting action is scheduled to come into court.

Counsel for the defendants stated, however, that after Mrs. Lewis had come to Mr. Butcher on January 25 and shown her need of money, the trustee had sent to her yesterday a check for $1,000. He urged that there could be no action by the court now on Mrs. Lewis' application, because Freeborn G. Smith Jr. holds a contingent interest in the estate and had indicated through his counsel that he will take exception to certain items in the accounting. A decision by Justice Aspinall, it was said, might prejudice the determination of the accounting action.

It was also shown by the defendant trustees that the trust fund had been left to them with the direction that they should pay the income from it to Mrs. Lewis at such times as they deemed best for the interest of Mrs. Lewis. Through counsel they assert they do not deem it for the best interest of Mrs. Lewis to make any further payments to her now.

FOR VOLUNTARY RATIONING.

"Hoover System" Inaugurated by Women of Wealth.

An "honor system" has been inaugurated among women of wealth in which they agree to accept and carry out a voluntary system of rationing. The program was approved by Mr. Hoover. Mrs. F. Gray Griswold is chairman of the organization and Mrs. Frederick B. Pratt is on the executive committee, of which Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt is secretary.

About 300 prominent women are enlisted in the work and they have termed their organization "New York's Honor System for Food Saving by Voluntary Rationing." The big and potent feature of the program as conceived by its initiators, is the moral example wealthy New York women will show to women throughout the country similiarly situated.

GARAGE OWNERS ELECT.

At the annual meeting of the Brooklyn Garage Owners Board of Trade, held at the Ormonde Restaurant last night, the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Fred W. Brecht; first vice president, Fred C. Kengetter; second vice president, A. L. Pastre; third vice president, F. H. Russell; fourth vice president, J. H. Waite; secretary, James E. Foulks; treasurer, Charles J. Potbury.

Charles F. Batt, who helped to organize the Garage Owners Board of Trade, was elected honorary president.

LATHROP BROWN ON R. R. WAGE BOARD

Two Other Men Also Named to Hear Complaints.

Washington, January 30—The Railroad Wage Commission today announced appointment of three of the four members of its board of examiners to hear minor wage complaints.

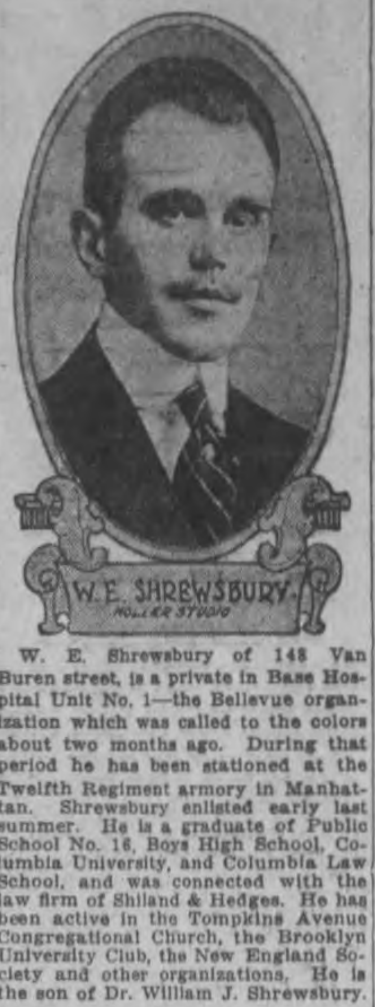
They are Edward J. Barcalo, Buffalo manufacturer and leader of the labor legislative movement in New York State; Riley Redpath, Kansas City business man, and Lathrop Brown of Long Island, former member of Congress and now a special assistant to the Secretary of the Interior.

Another member will be named in a day or two. The examiners will act virtually as deputy commissioners and will hear a large proportion of the wage demands presented to the commission.

The Board of Statistics recently appointed by the Railroad Wage Commission went to work today gathering figures on cost of living and wages paid railroad men in various classes of employment and different sections of the country. These will be analyzed by the board of presentation to the wage commission to be used in determining future increases in wages.

Maintenance of way employees today explained to the commission their demands for wage increases, which range as high as 60 per cent. in many cases.

W. E. SHREWSBURY SERVES IN BASE HOSPITAL UNIT



W. E. Shrewsbury of 148 Van Buren street, is a private in Base Hospital Unit No. 1—the Bellevue organization which was called to the colors about two months ago. During that period he has been stationed at the Twelfth Regiment armory in Manhattan. Shrewsbury enlisted early last summer. He is a graduate of Public School No. 16, Boys High School, Columbia University, and Columbia Law School, and was connected with the law firm of Shiland & Hedges. He has been active in the Tompkins Avenue Congregational Church, the Brooklyn University Club, the New England Society and other organizations. He is the son of Dr. William J. Shrewsbury.

SURROGATE'S COURT BUSY DURING 1917

Report Shows $358,119 to Have Been Deposited.

Surrogate Ketcham today made public his annual report of the proceedings of the Surrogate's Court of Kings County for the year ending December 31, 1917. It shows that the amount deposited during the year totaled $358,119, and the total deposits to the end of 1917 to be $1,127,888.

During the year there were 1,994 testamentary letters issued. The petitions in probate examined and filed numbered 2,265, while the guardianship petitions numbered 3,246. Among the bonds approved were 16 for executors, 2,811 for administrators, 243 for guardians and 18 for trustees.

The number of compromises for claims was 224. There were 2,265 wills admitted to probate uncontested and 49 wills admitted to probate after trial. There were 496 motions contested and 26 jury trials conducted by the Surrogate. The number of opinions written was 179, while the folios copied and compared numbered 68,216. More than 15,000 certificates were issued, and 6,700 searches were made in response to personal applications.

The financial statement shows the revenue for copies, etc., to have been $6,671.

There were 279 special guardians appointed to proceed against guardians and 1,759 notices were sent to guardians to file their accounts with the Surrogate. The number of petitions and orders examined and filed was 2,024, and the number of appraisers appointed exceeded 2,000. There were 336 orders signed for exemption from taxation and 609 tax receipts filed.

NO BUSH DINNER THIS YEAR

The Alumni Association of Public School No. 18, named by the Board of Education as the Edward Bush School, has decided not to have its annual dinner in honor of Mr. Bush this year. The postponement of the dinner was the result of general thought among the members and of Mr. Bush. When the war is ended the Edward Bush School Alumni Association is to have a peace dinner, a jollification dinner and a reunion of its members.

The association remembered Mr. Bush's eighty-sixth birthday by sending him a floral remembrance, a posy for each year of his life.

BRITISH TORPEDO GUNBOAT SUNK IN A COLLISION

London, Tuesday, January 29—The British torpedo gunboat Hazard was sunk in the English Channel on January 28 as the result of a collision, the Admiralty announced tonight. Three men were lost.

The torpedo gunboat Hazard was built in 1894 and measured 1,070 tons. She was 250 feet long and her normal complement was 115 men.

MISS BYRNS ARRIVES.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester J. Byrns of 140 East Seventy-ninth street are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter on January 28. Mrs. Byrns was Miss Mary R. Fitzgerald, daughter of former Justice and Mrs. James Fitzgerald. Mr. Byrns is associated with Joseph P. Day in the real estate business.

OPEN NOSTRILS! END A COLD OR CATARRH
How To Get Relief When Head and Nose are Stuffed Up.
Count fifty! Your cold in head or catarrh disappears. Your clogged nostrils will open, the air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more snuffling, hawking, mucous discharge, dryness or headache; no struggling for breath at night.
Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist and apply a little of this fragrant antiseptic cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothing and healing the swollen or inflamed mucous membrane, giving you instant relief. Head colds and catarrh yield like magic. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable. Relief is sure.—Advertisement.

EXPLAINS RUMANIA'S BESSARABIAN MOVE

Invasion, Which Caused Break, Made to Save Private Property From Looters.

BESSARABIANS APPEALED.

Rumanian Army Stores Also Menaced by Bolsheviki, Says London Times Correspondent.

London, January 30—The reasons which led to the invasion of Bessarabia by Rumanian troops, one of the causes of the rupture in relations between Rumania and Russia, are explained by the correspondent of the Times with the Rumanian Army, in a dispatch filed on January 21. He says the Bessarabian officials made repeated appeals to the Rumanians to restore order and save private property from looters, conditions having been greatly disturbed by the Bolsheviki regime. Another and more powerful consideration was that Bessarabia contained all manner of supplies belonging to Rumania, which the Bolsheviki threatened to destroy.

To save these stores and maintain communication with Odessa and Kiev was, the correspondent says, a matter of life or death, involving the question of Rumania's absolute isolation from her allies in Western Europe.

Describing the fight between Russians and Rumanians in Galatz, the correspondent says that but for the valor of the Rumanians the town would have been reduced to a mass of ruins. The Russians attacked the town with great energy on January 21. The Rumanians resisted stubbornly, but the situation became critical. Eventually the Rumanians gained victory by a counter-attack with bayonets and hand-grenades, aided by the fire of two small gunboats at the mouth of the Sereth River.

An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Petrograd says the Russian commissioners have ordered the removal of M. Koseovsky, chairman of the Revolutionary Inquiry Commission, and some of his colleagues, on the charge of bribery. They have appointed new members and ordered a careful investigation. The affair has caused a great sensation in Petrograd.

SHOPS CAN BE HEATED.

Shops employing members of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union may remain heated and lighted on February 22, Washington's Birthday, according to a letter from Fuel Administrator Garfield to Benjamin Schlesinger, president of the union.

"In view of the arrangement made by the Ladies Garment Workers in the early part of December," said Dr. Garfield in his letter, "to devote the entire earnings of that day to the relief of the Jewish War Sufferers in the Eastern War Zone, I beg to assure you that I shall regard it as entirely within the spirit of the purpose of my order, if the shops are heated and lighted for the use of the Ladies Garment Workers on Washington's Birthday, 1918."

RESTORED TO CITIZENSHIP

(Special to The Eagle.)

Albany, January 30—Governor Whitman yesterday restored the citizenship of Arthur Levy of 11 Kister court, Coney Island, convicted of perjury in 1915, and sentenced to a term of one and a half years in Sing Sing. The case was based on testimony in a suit for damages against William H. Reynolds, the former State Senator. Assemblyman Kenneth F. Sutherland of Coney Island made the appeal for Levy before Governor Whitman.

WON'T CLOSE HEALTH STATION.

Astoria women who have been working on petitions asking the Department of Health not to close the health station at 114 Fulton avenue, Long Island City, received word yesterday that the station would remain open. Dr. Amster, head of the department of Health, said that the department had no intention of closing the station and that the report that it would be discontinued was without foundation.

CORRIDOR CLUB NOW IN ITS NEW HOME

Members Hold House Warming and Hail Possession of State Charter.

GOOD PROGRAM PROVIDED

Non-Partisan Organization Is Now Planning to Increase Its Membership.

For the first time in the twenty years of its existence the members of the Corridor Club have deserted thier old meeting room in the Hall of Records, and last night opened new headquarters at 348 Fulton street. It also marks the first time in its existence that the club has received a charter from the Secretary of State.

The club receives its name by reason of the fact that the majority of the members were usually found at various times of the day in the corridors of the Hall of Records discussing topics of the day. It was organized by Timothy J. Dady, Transfer Tax Appdaiser of the State Controller's office; James C. Dorner, former custodian of the County Court House, who died on November 11, 1917, and George Buchanan, former custodian of the Hall of Records, who passed away on November 29, 1917.

With the securing of the new quarters it is expected that the membership will increase, it now totaling 150. The club is non-partisan in the sense that both Democrats and Republicans are to be found on its rolls; it nevertheless wants it distinctly understood that only regular organization men need apply, and its membership is closed to Independence Leaguers. It also intends to install a visiting membership.

More than sixty of the members were present last evening and enjoyed the entertainment which was provided by local talent. The evening was termed by many "as a pleasant evening being spent by good fellows for a heart-to-heart talk."

Main Light "Tim" Dady was a proud man last evening, due to the opening of the new headquarters and also by reason of the fact that he had in his pocket the articles of incorporation, which were issued on January 22, 1918. The charter members are: Timothy J. Dady, M. J. Joyce, Michael J. Dady, former Republican leader of the First Assembly District; Henry P. Erwin, treasurer of the Brooklyn Edison Company; Joseph Turner, Robert Riordan, Harry Dalton, Michael McMahon, Captain John Buchanan, Alderman Michael J. Hogan, Thomas Cahill, Edward F. Duffy, Thomas Fox, Thomas Devaney and James McAvoy.

Those present were:

Deputy State Controller William Boardman, Frank McCaffrey, Harry Friedman, Samuel Sloan, George Adams, Eugene Marriott, Joseph McGarry, Dietrich Hartje, Charles K. Hall, William Heenan, John Siegel, Peter Bleiman, Martin Keyes, John Flynn, Thomas Shields, James Williams, John Mackin, A. Waddenberger, Thomas Richter, Robert Mitchell, Louis Solomon, John Lohrmann, John Mannix, Joseph Hyland, James Campbell, Eugene Lawrence, Joseph Boden, Ralph Husson, John Watson, Charles M. Hall, Bart Schneider, J. Francis Brennan, John Hurley, Charles Hynes, John J. Crowley, W. J. S. Ryall, Frederick Singer, Peter Derby, Charles Blatchford, John Downey, John W. Tammany, Joseph Turner, Joseph Oppenheimer, William Brock, Timothy J. Dady, M. J. Joyce, Michael J. Dady, Henry P. Irwin, Joseph Turner, Robert Riordan, Harry Dalton, Michael McMahon, Police Captain John Buchanan, Alderman Michael J. Hogan, Thomas Cahill, Edward F. Duffy, Thomas Fox, Thomas Devaney, Buddy Campbell, Edward Mackin, Eugene Engeman, Paul Smith and Louis Miller.

300 Naval Reserve Graduates; Daniels Lauds War's Heroes

Annapolis, Md., February 1—The United States Naval Reserve force, now embracing 69,000 men and 7,500 officers, "is larger than the regular Navy when war was declared and three times as large as in the Spanish-American War," Secretary Daniels declared today in addressing the special graduation class of 300 reserve officers at the Naval Academy.

"This is a wonderful record for a service authorized eighteen months ago," the Secretary continued, "and its creation has made possible many phases of the diversified work the Navy has been called upon to do."

Mr. Daniels told the young officers, who have successfully completed the prescribed fourteen weeks course, that when they left Annapolis today they would find important assignments awaiting them and their achievements would depend upon themselves.

The ideal of the Navy in war, the Secretary said, was contained in Benjamin Franklin's order to the Navy's first captain, John Paul Jones, to show at all times a "tender regard for non-combatants."

"If you wish to find the difference in America's method of warfare and Germany's it is embodied in Franklin's instructions to Jones," Mr. Daniels said, "for the American regards war as a tragedy."

Much of the Secretary's address was taken up with a recital of the brilliant achievements of the American destroyer flotilla in the war and the bravery of American gun crews aboard merchantmen.

"Read the story of the Cassin," he said, "which, though struck by a torpedo and seriously crippled, refused to return to port as long as there appeared to be a chance of engaging the submarine. The whole country was thrilled by the account of the exploit of the Fanning and the Nicholson in destroying a German submarine and capturing its entire crew. The British Admiral, in commending officers and men, said: 'The whole affair reflects credit on the discipline and training of the United States' flotilla.'

"The first officer lost in the present conflict, Lieutenant Clarence C. Thomas, after the Vacuum was sunk, cheered his freezing men as they were tossed about in an open boat far from land, and he at last perished from cold and exposure. After the Jacob Jones was sunk Lietuenant (junior grade) S. F. Kalk, though weakened by shock and exposure, swam from raft to raft, to equalize the load and keep afloat the men who were awaiting rescue, and in the night, before succor arrived, perished.

"Let us not forget those two gunners of the Antilles who stood by their guns until it was too late to escape. The contests of the Silver Shell, which sent down the submarine which attacked it; of the Moreni, on which the men stayed at their guns until the flames flared up to the top of the smokestacks; of the Campana, whose gunners fought for hours until their ammunition was exhausted; of the J. L. Luckenbach, hit nine times and temporarily disabled, fought a submarine for four hours, before aid arrived, and later managed to reach port under her own steam; of the Armenia, and a dozen others, are notable enough to be recorded in Naval history."

ROSALIE MILLER'S RECITAL.

Mme. Rosalie Miller's song recital last night in Aeolian Hall was her only local recital of the season. New songs made interesting moments for the audience. All th enations of the Allies were represented in the songs, which included for the Italian group lyrics by Puccini and Bononcini, Mozart's "Misera Dive Son," and "La Siciliana," and Sinigaglia's "Montanina." Two Rachmaninoff songs in English made an appeal, Cyril Scott's latest songs "At Night," and "Osme's Song," and Gladys Greene's "'Neath the Willow Boughs" instanced the best-liked lyrics of the final group of songs. Walter H. Golde played the accompaniments well. Mme. Miller's fine voice showed to advantage in all the songs.

L. I. C. HOSPITAL AIDED

The annual concert, euchre, bridge and dance for the benefit of St. John's Long Island City Hospital was held last evening at the Waldorf-Astoria. Following the games "The Star Spangled Banner" was played, after which the orchestra gave an overture. The musical program that followed consisted of a violin solo, "Serenade,"; 'cello solo, "Some Day," and two piano selections, "Leave It to Jane" and "Maytime," and was enjoyed by the large audience. Many valuable and beautiful prizes were donated.

Among those present were:

The Right Rev. Charles E. McDonnell, the Rev. J. A. McGoldrick, the Rev. J. H. Casey, the Rev. J. Delaney, John Whalen, Maurice E. Connolly, Joseph Kenny, W. J. Kelly, Martin Metzner, Mrs. Katherine T. White, S. Richman, George C. Boldt, George J. Ryan, Alex Williams, Miss Mary Burke, G. Steiner, Miss Mary Dowd, Albert Eaton, W. J. Matheson, Richard Williams, B. C. Vanderwater, John Delaney.

RICHMOND HILL IS READY

The new term opens on Monday with many changes in Richmond Hill High School. The second and third-year classes of the commercial department, which have heretofore been carried on at the Annex at Public School No. 90, have been moved into the main building and the first-year generals have been sent to Public School No. 90. The school is still crowded and the biological laboratory and the lecture room are being used as classrooms.

Principal Irving A. Hazen has made some changes. One of them is in the system of program making. On Wednesday afternoon "tryout" day was observed, when the students ran through their new programs on twenty-minute periods. New books were distributed and work was assigned for Monday, when the new term will open without delay. The length of the school day has also been shortened from 1:15 to 3 o'clock. This is greatly appreciated by both students and faculty.

BATTLEPLANE TOUR OF LONDON'S OUTER AIR DEFENSE WORKS

Inspection Made at Height of 2,000 to 8,000 Feet—A Wonderful Voyage.

PERFECT DEFENSE SYSTEM

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

London, January 10—Flying at a speed of 80 to 140 miles an hour and at a height of 2,000 to 8,000 feet in one of the latest and fastest British battleplanes, a correspondent of the Associated Press inspected the outer air defenses of London on a crisp morning recently.

Few Americans have any adequate idea of the magnitude of these defenses and their present high state of efficiency. Millions of pounds have been spent on them and an army is constantly employed in manning and maintaining them.

A motor car took the correspondent to "Somewhere in the outskirts of London," where it passed through roads camouflaged by shrubbery to a great airdrome, one of the finest in England. This airdrome boasts several Americans among its most efficient flyers, but it is not permissible to give their names.

Upon the party's arrival England's crack daredevil flyer put on a "show." This man, who looks more like a meek, mild-mannered dry-goods clerk than a wizard of the air, put the machine through a series of performances that made even some of the veteran flyers who watched from below hold their breath. Looping the loop, nose diving, banking, volplaning to within a few feet of the earth and then pointing the nose of the machine skyward for a rise at express train speed, were but a few of the moves this pilot went through with his observer. When he came down the correspondent was taken up in the same machine, but with another pilot, for a ride through the clouds and a bird's eye view of the outer defenses of this particular part of London.

This machine was a fighter. This type of machine mounting a synchronized machine gun, has earned the reputation of being perhaps the most reliable of the fighting planes turned out by the British manufacturers. The pilot on the trip was a young member of the Royal Flying Corps who was to go to France the next week. The night before this flight he had been up fighting with German Gothas at a height of between 11,000 and 12,000 feet.

Up 8,000 Feet in Ten Minutes.

The machine rose to 8,000 feet in ten minutes. It started off the ground with a tremendous rush the instant it was released. There was a brisk wind —the pilot said it was blowing between 25 and 30 miles an hour—and the sky was full of fast moving clouds.

The best view of things below was had at 2,000 feet. Airdromes with battle planes ever ready for the German raiders could be seen dotting the landscape. Batteries of anti-aircraft guns could be discerned here and there.

The flight around the outer city was made at an average speed of eighty miles an hour, over factories and suburbs, a great arsenal, a famous school and a town best known for its American colony. Up aloft the weather was typical of the New York autumnal day. There was just a hint of frost on the roof tops which made them show up more plainly than usual through the light mist. All was quiet and peaceful in an area which the presence of the Goths would in an instant transform into a battlefront, encircled by the barrage from the anti-aircraft guns thousand of feet below.

After completing the circle of the metropolis the fighting plane slanted back to earth at 140 miles an hour. "That's not really fast," remarked the pilot. "In actual fighting we often have to make 300 miles an hour and the plane is built to stand that speed without the slightest danger."

PROBE GAMBLING BY WOMEN

District Attorney Swann of Manhattan and Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith announced today that they would be ready to proceed with the John Doe investigation into gambling Mondaq, or as soon thereafter as Judge Wadhams indicates.

Among the first things to be investigated according to the District Attorney, will be luxurious gambling places run exclusively for wealthy women.

Much information regarding several gambling houses of this character has reached the District Attorney's office, Mr. Smith intimated. It is stated that Mr. Smith has "specific information" in the case of one place where "the wife of a prominent man in New York lost $10,000 in a two-hour sitting."

HEBREW ASSOCIATION BALL.

The eleventh annual ball and cabaret of the Coney Island Hebrew Association was held last night at Stauch's. There was a large attendance. The association was formed in 1911, with Emanual Dreese as the first president. The present officers are: Ex-Assemblyman Charles Joseph, president; Emanaul Dreese, vice president; Isidor Feuer, treasurer; Max Aarons, recording secretary; Herman Marx, financial secretary; Jerry Barnett, sergeant-at-arms. Among the more noted present were: Borough President Edward Riegelmann, Sheriff Griffin, Judge Voorhees, Judge F. Cronin, Judge Cornelius Furgeson, Joseph Rose, Judge Morris, Alderman Green. A flat-footed waltz, one of the contests, was won by Bennie Feltman, a sailor.

FRENCH PEASANTS REAL PATRIOTS

Premier Clemenceau Relies on Their Love of Country—Will Give Everything.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

Paris, January 10—Georges Clemenceau, the Premier, told a little story to the Chamber the other day to illustrate his own confidence in the peasants of France. He had just told the House that, as the commander-in-chief had urgent need of some thousands of men to do certain work just behind the first lines, he would have to call out men of the classes of 1890 and 1891; that is, men of 46 and 47, who had been released from military service to work on the land. They would be needed for January and February, when their work at home was of less importance.

"Brought up in the midst of peasants," he said, "I know their devotion, courage and great souls. I have seen peasants in my native Vendee who have had four sons killed, a fifth made prisoner and a sixth still at the front. One of them came to me with tears in his eyes and said:

"'Monsieur, is it all going to end well?' And when I said that I was sure it would, he said: 'Then I will give everything.'

"It would be an insult to such peasants," continued M. Clemenceau, "to suppose that they would haggle over the six or seven weeks' work that we demand."

The number of men wanted is understood to be 200,000, and their work is generally thought to be preparing defenses against the expected great German offensive in the spring.

FINDS WAR MESSAGE IN LINCOLN'S WORDS

Rev. J. P. Huget Says Gettysburg Address Warns Us Against Inconclusive Peace.

SPEAKS AT REPUBLICAN CLUB

Prof. A. B. Hart Says Central Europe Policy of Germany Menaces Destiny of U. S.

The Rev. J. Percival Huget of the Tompkins Avenue Congregational Church, at the luncheon of the Republican Club in Manhattan yesterday afternoon, quoted Lincoln's Gettysburg address in support of his assertion that there rested on the governments of the United States and its allies an obligation not to make a peace with the Central Powers which will fail to secure the ends for which the millions of men who have fallen in the war fought.

Mr. Huget quoted that portion of the Gettysburg address in which Lincoln urged the Union forces to resolve that the war would be prosecuted to a successful conclusion so that the men who died at Gettysburg would not have died in vain. The minister called to his audience's attention Lincoln's address in Cooper Institute in 1860, in which Lincoln urged the nation to "believe that right makes might and with that belief to do our duty as we understand it."

This speech of Lincoln's, he said, should inspire us to meet the challenge of the German military class with its belief that might makes right and justifies the overriding and overruling of the rights of small nations. Mr. Huget also quoted from Lincoln's speech at the Republican convention in 1856 to emphasize the necessity for complete obliteration of all party strifes and divisions and self-seeking in the prosecution of the war.

The theme of the afternoon's discussion, which was presided over by Arnon L. Squiers, was "What Have We Against the Central Europe Policy of Germany?"

Professor Albert Bushnell Hart of Harvard University declared that "the empire guided from Berlin is an accomplished fact," as there is only one central government in the Teutonic powers, Austria and Turkey being now only dependent states of Germany. This empire, he declared, "is unexampled since the Roman empire."

"Belgium will take a generation to rebuild. Serbia has been murdered," he said. "Germans are obsessed and insane about their right to trample on other people. The four powers gathered in the international conspiracy seek the life of our country.

"I am one with two sons in the war and speak as one who holds the life of his country greater than the life of my sons. You cannot separate the German Government from the German people. Unless we fight and persist, we shall find on the other side of the world a tremendous power which will menace the destiny of our country."

Dr. Robert H. McElroy declared that to make the world safe for democracy we must not only defeat Germany but also show that free democracy can do all that a government like that of Germany can give. A "great intellectual reconstruction" with "education in terms of American citizenship, not as individuals but as a nation." Dr. Vladislav R. Savic, a Serbian commissioner, said Austria now has 7,000,000 Serbian prisoners. He predicted the success of the Allies and the freeing of his country.

"GIVE US TROTZKYS," SAYS RABBI MAGNES

Tells Woman's Peace Party America Needs Spirit of Bolsheviki.

The two days conference of the Woman's Peace Party, held at the Hotel Breslin, was brought to a close last night with a dinner held at the Hotel Grand, Broadway and Thirty-first street, Manhattan. The purpose of the conference was to form a State branch of the party, which is an international organization.

Six hundred women from all parts of the State attended the dinner, after which there was discussion on the aims of the party. There was also a noticeable sprinkling of men present. At the guest table at which Dr. Gertrude M. Kelly presided as chairman, were the following speakers: Rabbi Judah L. Magnes, Lincoln Steffens, Amos Pinchot, Mary T. Shaw, Carrie H. Creighton and Crystal Eastman. The subject discussed was "How to Build a World Without War."

Rabbi Magnee spoke in part as follows:

"If you ask me in a word how I should like to build up a world without war I would answer you in this way—give us more Trotzkys and Lenines, let the spirit of the Bolsheviki permeate not only Russia, not only the dark and backward countries of Eastern and Western Europe, but also this great intelligent democracy of America as well."

The next speaker, Lincoln Steffens, gave to his hearers his impressions of the conditions of Russia from the inside as they appeared to him last summer during the revolt which set up the Kerensky regime.

Mrs. Henry Villard was made honorary chairman of the State branch and Miss Crystal Eastman of New York was elected chairman; Mrs. Frank F. Williams of Buffalo, Miss Emily Greene Balch of New York and Miss Lucy Watson of Utica, vice chairmen; Miss Jessie Wallace Hughan of Brooklyn, secretary, and Mrs. Henry G. Leach of New York, treasurer.

LEGION MEETS AT 8 TONIGHT

Many Plans on Foot, All Are Requested to Be Out.

The executive committee of the Tampa post met Sunday afternoon and completed arrangements for holding the memorial service on Sunday, May 30. The program as arranged by the committee was adopted.

In connection with the memorial service plans, committees are at work on the coming re-union and convention.

Officers.

Harry C. Culbreath.....Commander
Ed Scott ....Vice-Commander
Peyton Jordan ....Adjutant
Carl Epping.....Financial Secretary

The following have been appointed as chairmen:

Reception, Oscar P. Hilburn; quarters, Roger Watkins; invitation, Joe Grable, jr.; entertainment, J. W. Morris, jr.; parade, F. M. Williams; convention, Byrd Sparkman; woman's auxiliary, Bill Stevens; transportation, S. L. Lowry, jr.; publicity, Peyton Jordan; program, Curtis Sparkman; badges and banners, Nick Palaveda; automobiles, Al Phillips.

Following is the executive committee: Harry Culbreath, chairman; J. W. Morris, jr., Byrd Sparkman, Asher Frank, Dr. F. A. Cameron, Joe Grable, jr., C. M. Neilson, A. D. Lopez, Peyton Jordan, Carl Epping and E. B. Priest.

The big membership "push" also received considerable discussion. James McCants was put in charge of this work. He is chairman of the finance committee for the convention in June. Peyton Jordon has been appointed publicity chairman and it is up to him to see that the reunion gets the desired publicity.

The legion meets at 8 p. m. tonight in the criminal court room and every member is requested to be present.

GREAT MEMORIAL BEING PLANNED

San Francisco Post, California, has just started a campaign for the construction of a huge community war memorial, a group of classic buildings to house the activities of the California School of Fine Arts, the San Francisco Musical association, the American Legion and other organizations. The memorial group is to cost $2,500,000. The fifteen thousand San Francisco Legionnaires will work with a citizens' committee on the project. Title to the buildings will rest with the University of California, to assure that they will always be for the use of the community and all the people. The popular campaign for the funds will be conducted between May 19 and May 29. A mass meeting will be held in Exposition auditorium May 19.

D'OLIER GIVES GOOD ADVICE

In recent weeks, while the officers and committees of the Legion have been bending all their efforts to carry out the broad legislative and other programs outlined by the National conveniton and the national executive committee, their efforts frequently have been embarrassed by minority elements and individuals within the Legion who have vociferously condemned or opposed them. The opposition of this minority has not been serious. It has been merely bothersome.

Following one instance of such opposition, National Commender Franklin D'Olier expressed his sentiments thus:

"I have not a great deal of patience with the new type of 'conscientious objector' who feels his responsibility to such an extent that he is stating what he personally believes his membership ought to do and ought to think, rather than what they really do think and do desire.

"While the small minority have every right in the world to be heard and to express freely their personal convictions, and we must all admire the manner in which they stand up for their personal convictions, still I believe that having repeatedly given voice to those personal convictions they should then play ball with the overwhelming majority."

The minority, of course, has its rights. It has all the right in the world to voice its opinion to the limit, to raise the roof, to fight until the last second before a decision is made. But once the decision is made its rights become obligations. It is obligated to abide by the decision of the majority, and it should loyally bend its efforts toward the accomplishment of the purposes of the majority.

The good loser loses neither his temper nor his head. He doesn't whine and he doesn't quit the game. He plays ball with the gang.

NEWS FROM ALL OVER THE LAND

How Many Goats Had the Kaiser?

The navy's conduct of the war inquiry is still covering a lot of ground. The conduect of the British navy, the work of the marines at Belleau Wood, and the operations of Gen. Pershing take up a great deal of time each session. Flocks of admirals and experts are adding their opinions. Most of them agree that the navy did great work and helped win the war. For example, Admiral McKean brought out that the navy "got the kaiser's goat" and that the final break in the Hun's morale occurred in Kiel, the home port of a large number of German submarines.

Uses G. O. 41 to Secure Higher Rank.

Do you remember G. O. No. 41 that provided that noncommissioned officers who were transferred did not lose their rank? A marine noncom, who was wounded in France and broke when placed into another outfit, got by with an appeal for difference in back pay. The comptroller decided that G. O. No. 41 should govern and that he should have the higher pay for the balance of his time.

Watch Your Foot When Abroad.

Lay off the American uniform if you're going abroad and are out of service. The wearing of the uniform by discharged soldiers in Europe is unlawful, says the war department, and citizens found guilty will be punished according to the laws of the country in which the offense is committed. In some countries you can be jugged for wearing a uniform when you're not in the service.

One Year Ago.

Hoboken, U. S. A.—Nearly home. Still S. O. L. Was picked out to clean up the ship. Uncle made money on me this trip. Worked my passage, so maybe I'll get my commission. Got a job bossing the clean-up gang. Imagine me, a third looie, being bossed by a gob.

Was up on deck and saw a cafe—I should say a saloon, now—and wondered if I could get some vin blink. Saw a lot of soda stores. We are staying on board tonight and go to camp tomorrow.

Wonder how long it takes to get the old discharge. I'm going to sport that Sam Browne belt on Broadway if I get the chance. Wonder what happened to the other officers on board—they don't wear their belts.

Will soon be discharged, then fini la guerre pour moi!

LADY CONDEMNS SPIRITUALISM

Says Thousands Are Insane From Its Study.

Editor Tampa Daily Times.

Dear Sir: Judging from the numerous articles in newspapers and magazines of the day, the civilized world is rapidly going mad over spiritualism, or more properly speaking, spiritism. Indeed, some of our most noted alienists have predicted that the whole human race will be insane within two years, unless something shall intervene to oppose the tidal wave of insanity now threatening to engulf us. Within the past two years it has been estimated that 100,000 persons in Great Britain alone have lost their minds because of spiritualism.

I feel, herefore, impelled to sound a note of alarm. I appeal to your readers, if there be any Christian men and women among them, who still believe the Bible to be the inspired word of God, and whose faith has not been utterly destroyed by present day teachings from both pulpit and platform along the lines of Higher Criticism, Evolution and "Science, falsely so-called," to harken to the word of Lord in this matter, if they would keep their reason on its throne and save their souls from death.

Any person who throughly understands the actual condition of the dead, as clearly set forth in the Bible, will be absolutely convinced that communication with the dead is utterly impossible. The Bible teaches that man is mortal, that he has sinned and is condemned to death and that he can never see life again except by a resurrection from the dead through the power of his Redeemer, Christ esus, at His Second Advent.

The doctrine of man's inherent immortality is the foundation of all the deceptions of spiritualism. I challenge any person to produce a single text from the Bible which teaches man is immortal and cannot die. This false doctrine was first taught in the Garden of Eden by "The Father of Lies," Satan the Serpent, when he declared to Mother Eve: "Ye shall not surely die" whereas Jehovah God had said: "In the day thou eatset thereof, thou shalt surely die!" Genesis 3:1:4; 2: 16-17. Shall we believe God's truth or Satan's lie

It is not within the scope of this short article to give the countless Scriptural citations which prove that the dead are in their graves, not in Heaven, Purgatory, or in a Hell of Eternal Torment, that they are actually dead, out of existence until the Lord shall awaken themg out of death, but to those who sincerely desire to know the truth from a Scriptural standpoint, I shall be pleased to send proof-texts upon request.

If any be not convinced by the Scriptural definition of death, let him consult a Webster's dictionary, which declares death to be "cessation of life."

As to who and what it is that is responsible for the various spiritualistic rappings, materializations, voices, Ouija board messages and undoubted communications received by Sir Oliver Lodge and other prominent members of the Psychological Research societies of this country and Europe, I will send the necessary information to any who may request it.

Verily, the dead shall live again, in the Resurrection of the Dead, at the Second Advent of the Lord, but in the meantime, they are dead, "asleep in the dust of the earth."—"in the graves." Daniel, 12:2; John, 5: 28-29.

Respectfully,
GERTRUDE W. SEIBERT.

SEE PLANS OF SUNDAY SCHOOL

Plans of the Sunday school addition to the Hyde Park Methodist church, recently received from Dr. Baylor, architect of the Southern Methodist chuch, were displayed to the congregation of the Hyde Park church Sunday. The prints were tacked on the wall near the entrance so every member and visitor in the church might see how the Sunday school addition will look.

Counting the basement, which will be used largely for a banquet hall, kitchenette and gymnasium, the building will be three stories high, and will have seating accommodations for 700 Sunday school pupils. The structure is to be modern in every respect and will serve all the community purposes of a modern institution. The church has purchased another lot immediately south of the present church lot, on Cedar Ave.

The original plan of tearing the present church down from the Cedar Ave. entrance south, and making the new structure a part of the present building has been abandoned. The present building will stand as it is, and the new structure will be built so there will be several feet of open space between the two buildings, giving each more light.

LOWRY GIVEN A FINE RECOGNITION

S. L. Lowry, jr., local agent of the Aetna Life Insurance Co., has just been elected to membership in the Aetna club, for being one of the largest producers of accident and health insurance. Mr. Lowry, since his return from the army has been active in the insurance world and has been very successful. The fact of his being elected to membership in the Aetna club proves he is a business "getter."

Besides being an insurance agent, he is also department adjutant of the American Legion. Legion work and selling insurance keeps him rather busy.

Political Announcements

To the People of Hillsborough County, Florida:

I am a candidate for Sheriff of Hillsborough county, subject to the Democratic Primary in June next.

I am not a politician and have never before been a candidate for public office, but I know the difference between RIGHT and WRONG, and have had sufficient experience on the Tampa Police Force to partially equip me for some of the duties of the Sheriff's office.

If elected Sheriff of this county, my office will be conducted and maintained for the protection of the public, and I will have no dealings with either individuals or factions who would seek to prostitute it to any selfish or personal interest. I promise a fair, honest and impartial administration of its affairs.

Respectfully submitted,
WALTER F. WOOTEN.

J. W. DYKE
Candidate for the Legislature
Group 2, Hillsborough County.

Candidate for Sheriff.
My Platform:
The Laws of Florida.

I am a candidate for the nomination for sheriff in the Democratic primaries on June 8. If nominated and elected I shall do my best to give the county a clean, honest and straightforward administration of the office of sheriff. I shall appreciate your support.

E. B. PRIEST.

Candidate for Sheriff

A. J. WHITE.

I hereby announce my candidacy for re-election to the office of Sheriff of Hillsborough County, subject to the Democratic primary June 8. Your support and vote will be appreciated.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for County Commissioner for the Third district, subject to Democratic primaries on June 8.

I favor the paving of all roads with asphalt block, not less than 12 to 16 feet wide, each side to be planted with Bermuda grass 2 feet wide, and trees to be planted 50 feet apart.

While roads are in course of construction no detour shall be more than one-half mile long, and shall be as near the road as possible.

It will be my endeavor to have work done on the cheapest basis possible consistent with first-class work, and at all times to keep all roads and bridges in good condition.

Soliciting the favor of your vote and support, I remain,

Yours for service,
(Adv.) G. GOLDSTEIN.

FOR COUNTY JUDGE.

I announce my candidacy for county judge in the democratic primary, June 8. I am not a lawyer but I have gone to school in the great university of Common Sense for 48 years and I know that I have experience enough to serve you well in this position. I will promise only that I will give everybody a fair deal if I am elected.

GRAND JURY TO MEET TUESDAY

The grand jury for the spring term of circuit court will meet Tuesday Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. Judge Robles opened the spring term of court last Tuesday, when the present jurors were selected and charged. As several of the jurors found it difficult to investigate matters last week an adjournment was made until Tuesday. In the charge to the investigating body, Judge Robles called their attention to a shooting scrape on Central Ave., when Irving Sessions killed another negro, and the killing of Arbota by Bell at the Tampa Electric Co. dam, above Sulphur Springs, two weeks ago.

THREE GATES OF GOLD

Let every thought thy lips would utter pass three gates of gold;
But if through these it fails to pass,
let it not be told;
And over each gate, in silver letters written, thou wilt find Above the first one, "Is it true?" the second, "Is it kind?"
And "Is it necessary?" o'er the third
one and the last.
Then guard thy thoughts, let none escape, save those these gates have passed.

WHEN TO BUY THE NEW MACHINERY

The city council has on itself the responsibility of buying and installing the material for the extension of the water works and sewerage system and also the new machinery for the power plant.

Doubtless these members are busy studying conditions and markets so as to be fully informed as to all circumstances which have a bearing on the situation. It is a great task and a great responsibility. To make a mistake at this stage of the game would work a great injustice on the taxpayers as well as the public who for years to come will use these improvements.

The News-Tribune wishes to suggest that the council delay purchases and perhaps the selling of the bonds for the time being until the machinery can be bought advantageously and until the bonds can be sold to advantage.

It is true that the machinery market has been as slow in starting down as any market. The war raised the price of machinery to a perilous peak. The war was fought with machinery and domestic needs were shunted on a side track while the war department's orders were filled. This put the commercial market many months behind the demands. Since armistice day, the steel industry has been trying to catch up with the demand. Hindered with strikes and slow output, the rehabilitation of industry has lagged. Prices have not come down because the domestic market has been so keen.

At this time, however, there is a bearish tendency in the machinery market; prices have declined somewhat. There has been a decrease of about 10 to 20 per cent from the height of the price curve. And all indications are that the decline in price will be comparatively rapid in the next few (that is the summer) months. This being true the council will do well to hesitate before taking the final plunge.

If in the next four months, the market were to decline 20 per cent, the saving would be approximately $16,000. This is worth saving. Sixteen thousand dollars is $16,000, and is not to be sneezed at.

The plans for the installing of the machinery can go forward apace. All things can be gotten in readiness so that when the machinery is finally bought, it can be installed with the minimum of time and effort. Plans for housing the new plant, for placing the big mochines when they come and for attacking the new current to the worn system can all be worked out in detail and much of the work actually done.

The bonds, having been voted, there is no need to worry about rushing the buying through until markets are right. The News-Tribune feels that a delay of four months will have a salutary effect on the prices which the machinery houses will quote. If the city can be stampeded into buying, the first price made will be the top price.

But if the manufacturers find that the city is waiting for proper prices, and the houses be pitted against each other in competition, there will be a cutting of prices which will be to the advantage of the city. There is every reason to believe that the houses will cut their prices, because they will be anxious to land the contract. When these prices have been cut to the proper figure, the buying will be economical.

It is quite possible that the saving will be sufficient to pay for a water filtering plant—a thing much to be desired. If the $80,000 will pay for the machinery and a purifying plant four or five months from now, it is better to wait for a purifying plant will be of tremendous value to Fort Pierce.

Time was not many months ago, when $80,000 was not much money, but the rise in the value of a dollar has been so rapid that $80,000 is a lot of money now. It will be much more in a short time, probably.

Not only this but the council will have time to consider all the varying ins and outs of a very intricate situation. Judgment as well as sentiment will have a chance to be heard. In a matter as cold-blooded as buying machinery, judgment should have the place at the head of the table.

These suggestions are made in the hope of calling to the attention of the council some of the considerations which should and certainly will guide our leaders in taking up this matter.

It may be another time when haste will make waste.

SAY IT RIGHT

A few captious papers like the Miami Metropolis are stirring up eagles' nests by contending more or less anonymously that "It is me" should be used wherever desired on the ground that it is as correct as "It is I."

We dissent.

Nothing that is wrong can be correct, even if the Metropolis says so. As solid as any rule of grammar and as beautiful as any mode of speech is the musical expression: "It is I." For five hundred years, the English people have used it and the bars should not be lowered merely because a hurrying age hasn't time to drill itself in the use of dignified English.

Every user of English should count himself a committee of one to stand at the breach and prevent the muddy current of careless language from bulging into the pure historical stream of the King's speech. There is too great a tendency to overlook the beauty of speech and adopt the mannerisms of indifference.

If one is as correct as another, why teach the youth of the land the idiosyncracies of proper speech? The English language is notoriously involved. But there are good reasons for it. And as new words are built into the language, they should be shaved to fit into the well-known canons of right expression.

"The copulative takes the nominative, never the accusative." Have a care, for the sake of the thousands who have wrought well in the use of the King's English. Have a care! Dickens, Chesterton, Wells, Hopkinson Smith and Ben Johnson are good leaders. Better follow them than the Metropolis.

THE LEATHER ROCKING CHAIR

By One Who Has Sat In It

(Things said and done in and about Fort Pierce and written out by one who has lived here. The News-Tribune prints these articles because it believes that there will be much in them to interest people here. Many of the events told will be remembered by citizens, the people who will be described having been well known to some. In the main, we are assured, the facts are based on truth, and are therefore allowable.)

No one who has ever sat in the chair will ever forget it. It is such a soothing chair—big, roomy, soft in its upholstery—and large enough to lounge in.

It sits in the front room of the old rambling structure which overlooks the river and is within ear of the ocean when the breeze is in the east. Around this chair does the Chair Klan gather in the evenings.

If the time is winter and there is a slight tang of frost in the air, the small fireplace greets us with its merry beckoning, for Sambo knows what we like and never waits on instructions. It is something to remember—one of these evening with the Klan, when the comfort is shut in and the wild spume of the sea shut out. The deep diapason of the sea sometimes moans in the lulls of the conversation—which generally is likely enough to drown even the thoughts that the sea's moaning suggests—and joins the crackling of the driftwood fire in a miniature flute and trombone fugue. There were six members of the Klan to start with; no more. When others were present, the Klan was absent.

For the Klan is a spirit—a congeniality, and bond of association. Its genius is truth-telling. Any outsider dampens the ardor of the members for telling the truth—the whole truth and naught but the truth. In this case the Klan is not a Klan but a few congenial friends.

The Byrd is the acknowledged leader—not by virtue of any election but because he is such a princely good fellow. He is a singer, and we call him the Byrd, thought that is not his name at all. Dark complexioned, rather slow of speech, argumentative and capable of holding his own in any dispute, he sets the Klan at loggerheads. He is never happy unless he has some of the circle snatching at straws to keep from drowning in a jostling pool of words.

The Pest comes next; he is our soldier. His full name is Tempest, but Aryl in a pique at having the argument turned on her one evening called him the Pest—and such he has remained. Small, compact of stature, with sharp, far-seeing eyes, our lovable Pest has seen life at its worst and at its best—he has lived through the Gethsemane of Flanders Fields and the joyous resurrection of the armistice.

The Artist always sits at the right of the fire at the end of the circle. His quiet countenance, immobile and almost severe, fixed on the leaping flames. He speaks when he is spoken to and has such a fund of quiet humor and quaint philosophy that his words are never lost. They weigh like golden bricks.

Two ladies grace our circle. Odd, I'll admit, for ladies to be such good fellows. But they are there and the circle would not be complete without them. Aryl and Emerald, the wives of the Bird and myself—genteel and self-sufficient. Lovely nature never made more lovely products.

Such is the membership of the Chair Klon. Coming from the ends of the earth and meeting by a happy chance one evening in the big room, the five with myself found that recreation never assumed such a green place in our lives before. We have met with weekly regularity ever since.

It was misfortune that first brought out the fellowship. We had nearly drowned the Byrd. For half an hour we had been swimming in the surf. The Pest had proposed a swim out beyond the breakers; Aryl and Emerald declined on the ground of expediency and struck out for the beach. The four of us dived through a breaker and started for Northern Africa; that was our mistake, for the Byrd was tired and we did not know it. When we had completed the outward stretch and started back, the Byrd startled us by calmly announcing:

"I'll never make it. Get a surf boat!"

As he spoke he sank.

The Pest was after him like a porpoise. When he came up, he had the Byrd around the neck and was floating on his back. Commanding us in his authoritative soldier voice to swim alongside and to be "ready to take him when I give out," he started shoreward swimming on his back. The Byrd lay quiet.

It was this quietness of the Byrd that saved his life and perhaps the lives of the rest of us, but we did not know until we laid him out on the sand, amid the excited exclamations of the two ladies, that the Pest had mercifully slammed the Byrd on the point of the chin and knocked him senseless, so putting an end to his perilous struggles.

"Stand back!" commanded the Pest. "He's all right; directly you'll see him come around, mad as a wet hen."

After supper that evening, the Artist calmly asked:

"What did it feel like, Byrd, to drown?"

The Byrd had gotten back his usual equanimity by this time and wanted a dispute. He was not sitting in the big chair, but I was and took out my note book.

"Didn't feel like anything, you muttonhead. I was seeing everything I had ever done. Guess it's all true—what they say about a man living his life over in a minute. I did. Saw things I had not thought of in years; say, quite an interesting bit of things I saw! I've lived more than I thought. And the end of the picture was a blissful dreaminess, a sweet languor—ended by lightning and thunder when the Pest slammed me! If this is dying, it isn't such a job! Only, I don't want to end the trip at the Pier where the Pest stands with his fist doubled up."

"The only way I'd have got you ashore, old top. So don't be sore. I'd have slammed one of the ladies just as quickly."

"You might have told me to lie quiet," retorted the Byrd. "I would have done it; I knew I was all in."

"Just the reason you would not have done it. No, sir! I don't take chances—"

The Artist squared around and looked at the two wranglers. Both stopped. It was a habit that grew on all of us—that of stopping to hear what the Artist had to say.

"Five years ago in October," said the Artist, looking in the fire and speaking as if he were alone, so calmly and dispassionately, "I was cruising in the South Seas looking for local color for the picture that went onto the Louvain exhibition the following year. The yacht was a small affair, belonged to Crews of Philadelphia. The old gentleman wasn't along but the son was. You remember the Junior—headstrong, spoiled and as fine a sailor as ever stood by a rail. The yacht was perhaps a hundred feet long and well built, but something went wrong with the rudder one morning. We hove to under the lee of a small coral island and the crew set about fixing the rudder.

"It was a hot morning. I stood at the rail with Crews and saw the gulls circling in the steely heavens; in the distance a strange murkiness arose. At that instant the ship trembled in every timber, just as if some one had hit her stern post with a tremendous hammer. Crews staggered, spun around and raced for the stern.

"'Get aboard here! All of you. What was an earthquake!'

"The crew swarmed aboard, and one of them pointed toward the coral island. It had been raised many feet. I will not attempt to say how many. The sandy beach had lengthened out until it was as wide as a boulevard, whereas before it was a ribbon.

"I heard Crews' voice at my elbow saying in an awstruck tone:

"'God send the wave doesn't come from the open sea and send us on the islands!'

"What wave? I asked. For you must know I am not much of a sailor. For answer Crews pointed to the south. A dim line, slightly darker than the sea stretched across the sea from horizon to horizon, and as I looked it grew in size, took a bone in its teeth and raced toward us with the speed of an express train. As it hit us it must have been ten feet higher than the deck.

"Rode it? Of course, for Crews had the wheel and had the courage to take her side on. The wave would have broken over the bows and swamped us. The trough of this wave made the wall of another higher wave—and believe me or not, this wave carried us clean over the island! There we were on the other side and right side up.

"All but the Portuguese cook, a big swarthy fellow, who by some chance had been washed overboard. He was an excellent swimmer but frantic as we could all see. And before Crews could get a boat lowered the third wave, larger than the others, came sweeping toward us, towering and toppling like a thing athirst with vengeance. Its noise was not a rumbling but a hissing, threatening sibilance that cut into one's consciousness like a whistle at midnight. I never want to hear that sound again.

"Just before the wave struck, Crews shouted to his men to lower a boat and even as he shouted he seized a life preserver and leaped overboard. He reached the Portuguese as the wave struck. There was not a sign of either when the wave had passed. For perhaps a minute we searched the sea, and then we saw the swarthy arm of the Portuguese as it raised itself frantically above the water clutching, clutching! The boat got to them and we brought Crews around after half an hour's hard work. The Portuguese was none the worse twenty minutes after his rescue.

"The first thing Crews said was: 'Let me die for a fool! Why didn't I take a belaying pin to hit him in the head with? The dang idiot climbed all over me. I couldn't do a thing with him and he like to have drowned us both.'"

The Artist lapsed into silence; he had not raised his eyes from the fire as he talked and when he finished he simply ceased talking.

But the Byrd quit complaining because the Pest had hit him on the point of the chin. And I took particular pains to notice that the Pest was too much of a gentleman to steal a triumphant glance at the Byrd.

This was the first of many evenings that the Chair Klan spent together What transpired at these meetings and how they ended is the subject of this series. The Klan is now scattered to the four winds of business enterprise but every member bears indelibly impressed on their memories the grave and happy hapepnings that subsequently transpired. But for the kindly influence of the leather rocking chair, there might have been tragedies to tell.

Maule's Rock is Hard Rock

"Test It With A Hammer."

A Conclusive Argument Against Soft Rock and surplus fine material.

Highway Engineers universally agree on the following specifications of rock for Highway purposes.' (Copied from "Manual of Highway Construction.")

"Broken stone for road work should have the qualities of HARDNESS, TOUGHNESS and freedom from lamination or cleavage planes. Avvording as it excels in these qualities it is valuable. The cementing quality, or that property which will make the particles bind together when rolled, is also of considerable value, but THIS PROPERTY IS DUE TO THE QUALITY OF THE STONE, WHICH IS DIRECTLY OPPOSED TO HARDNESS.

"A GOOD QUALITY OF STONE, will furnish about 75% of its product larger than ¾-inch in size, and the remainder in screenings and dust."

CHALK—has greater cementing qualities than any rock, but will not build a Highway.

MAULE'S OJUS ROCK IS HARD AND TOUGH, and more than 75% of our quarry run and crusher run rock is ¾-inch and larger in size.

THE TRUE TEST of a paving material, is the life of the pavement of which it is built.

Practically all the best roads and streets on the East Coast are built of MAULE'S OJUS ROCK. NONE HAVE WORN OUT.

GOVERNMENT TEST at the Watertown Arsenal of concrete made of MAULE'E OJUS ROCK, 1-2-4 mixture, 28 days, [illegible]740 lbs. per square inch.

Rock from the Fulford Quarry is being called "OJUS ROCK," which is not fair, as the Fulford rock is so soft that it is dug without drilling and blasting, and is so much softer than the rock so well known on the East Coast as "OJUS ROCK."

NOTE:—DADE COUNTY is hard-surfacing its roads with MAULE'S OJUS ROCK, because the soft pit rock will not stand the heavy traffic.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia: Showers Wednesday and probably on Thursday.

Florida: Showers Wednesday and on Thursday, except fair in northwest; moderate variable winds.

Alabama: Partly cloudy Wednesday and Thursday; cooler Thursday in the north; light to moderate variable winds on the coast.

Mississippi: Partly cloudy Wednesday, cooler in the north portion and at night in the south portion; Thursday partly cloudy; moderate variable winds on the coast.

Louisiana: Partly cloudy Wednesday, cooler by night; Thursday partly cloudy; moderate winds, mostly northeast to east.

A church in Syracuse, N. Y., is a believer in advertising. They not only carry notices of their services in the daily papers, but have a soda fountain in the lobby of the church, and an electric sign over the door which flares the name of the church, that pews are free, and the word "Welcome." There is no question but what the passer-by will be impressed.

* * *

The Tribune is always for Tampa and it is against anything that is hurtful or disadvantageous to Tampa—and the Tribune never hesitates to express its opinion when the interests of Tampa are at stake. Just at this time, the citizens of Tampa ought to diagnose the disease that is playing such havoc with the city's industrial health and, once satisfactorily diagnosed, they ought to apply the most heroic remedies.

The Postal Banks

Notwithstanding the smallness of the appropriation, it is reported from Washington that the trustees of the postal savings bank are arranging to install between twenty-five and fifty banks in as many sections of the country, by the first of November.

The service at first afforded will necessarily be limited, inasmuch as Congress appropriated only $100,000 with which to insugurate the whole system. Out of this sum the preliminary expenses, such as providing forms stamps and instructions, must be paid. There will be little left for any other purpose.

The trustees believe, however, that a few banks can be established out of this sum and these will be installed merely as experiments. As soon as it is determined how much additional help will be required in the various postoffices and how much will be the cost of operating, Congress will be asked for more money.

In the course of time it is arranged that the whole system shall be self-sustaining. Only 2 per cent interest will be paid on deposits and the banks and trust companies, acting as depositories for the funds collected by the government, will be required under the law to pay 2 1-4 per cent interest. The quarter of 1 per cent will represent the total profit the government will make and this will go toward maintainance and reserve.

Instead of locating the first twenty-five or fifty banks in the twenty-five or fifty largest cities in the country, the trustees will probably pick out twenty-five or fifty sections of the country where industrial conditions are varied. This will be done for the purpose of testing the efficiency of the new banking system and of determining the response which may be expected from the different classes of people served.

An improvement in the continental system of issuing pass-books to depositors will be adopted by this government. Instead of the book, as provided by the private banks, a card will be issued to the depositor showing by perforation the amount of money deposited. This card will be a duplicate of a similar one perforated at the same time and kept in the postoffice, the latter to furnish an absolute record of the funds receipted for. Should a card be lost by a depositor a duplicate can be obtained by reporting at the office issuing the original. It will be made perfectly plain that these cards are non-transferable and non-negotiable. They cannot be traded in or passed about as legal tender. They must be held by the party making the deposit and presented by that party when it is desired to withdraw any of the funds deposited.

A machine similar to a cash register, in operation ,will be used to punch the deposit cards. This means that the record will be mechanically accurate, and since both the depositor's card and that held by the government are punched by the same act, no discrepancy can possibly exist.

The committee of postal experts is still meeting day and night at Washington in its effort to perfect the new system. The experts expect to be able to lay most of the details before Postmaster General Hitchcock when upon his return to Washington next month. He will, in turn, call an early meeting of the trustees to approve of the preliminary work.

A New Reason for Matrimony

Marriage is a good thing.

Any married man knows that.

Oh, of course, the man who doesn't find the right sort of mate will not agree to it, but generally it will be approved by married men.

Marriage is good for various reasons.

It gives to man a love, sympathy and encouragement which he finds helpful in the uphill climb to prosperity and happiness.

It tends to make him unselfish when he is asked to divide his earnings with his so-called "better half."

It keeps him home at night, especially if the wife is the monarch of the fireside.

It is the means to good living—that is, well cooked food and plenty of it.

And now the secretary of the employers' liability commission of Illinois, one Edwin R. Wright, advises marriages for this new reason:

Young man, marry. You'll be safer."

Reports show that in Chicago unmarried men, especially manual workers, are more often hurt than married ones. Mr. Wright thinks married men are more careful, being mindful of those dependent on them. Which may be true.

There is novelty at least in this new reason why a man should marry.

If it is not convincing, there are five or six hundred other excuses for a man who contemplates matrimony.

No More Straus Milk

Because of personal attacks made upon him by a certain newspaper in New York City, Nathan Straus, the merchant and philanthropist, has definitely decided to abandon the pasteurization work done there during the last nineteen years, says the Savannah Press. Mr. Straus has devoted his wealth and his time to the most effectual mean of reducing infant mortality and his success has been so pronounced that the death rate has decreased one-half. It is estimated that four million bottles of milk are distributed yearly and Mr. Straus is supposed to have contributed a quarter of a million dollars yearly to the crusade for purer milk. The attacks reached such a pronounced state Mr. Straus decided to discontinue his personal connection with the charity in order that they may stop and by this means not hurt the beneficial results which have accrued to infants. The milk trust in New York also fought the philanthropist with bitterness.

The ultimate aim of the workers in the pasteurization of milk has been accomplished under the guidance of Mr. Straus. This method of avoiding disease, and especially in the young, has spread not only throughout America, but into foreign countries, and the work has been highly commended by the most eminent scientists. Mr. Straus is unselfish enough to remove himself at a time when he feels his presence will deter the excellent work he begun so splendidly. Those mothers who know how their babes have been alleviated will long remember Nathan Straus, as will the infants upon reaching the age of gratitude.

Writing to the Papers

Why is it, asks North Adams (Mass.) Herald, that four of every five persons who address communications to the newspapers prefer to sign fictitious rather than their real names to the articles? Even to the best letters whose subject matter is timely and efficiently sensible, the writer modestly avoids credit for his suggestions under some non de plume.

This custom is so common as to occasion no comment and is, of course, proper enough, but reflection will show that any article loses something of its value by being subscribed by any one of the hundred names familiar to the press.

To put an article in the papers without going sponsor for it by signing the right name is to cause the article to be regarded with suspicion, while a letter of less merit which is signed by the writer will often carry far more weight and have greater influence.

If, therefore, one wishes to advocate some plan or policy, or to suggest some improvement or urge some reform, his chance of succeeding by means of a communication in the press will be considerably greater if he attaches his right name to what he writes.

This does not mean that articles signed by a pen and accompanied by the author's real name ought not to be published, but what is here set down is rather to urge correspondents to do their utmost toward having their letters accomplish the purpose intended by giving to them the influence of the author's signature and the benefit of the reputation which he enjoys in the community.

There are many men whose names signed to a communication half a dozen lines in length would have more influence than a page of unsigned letters.

Growth of the South

The latest issue of the Manufacturers' Record contains a statement of the population of eighty-eight cities and towns. During the decade between 1900 and 1910 these had increased in population from 5,566,102 to 7,628,766—a gain of 1,962,664 or 35.4 per cent.

Twenty-seven of these cities and towns were in the South, not counting six others that were in Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Missouri. These showed an increase in population from 257,987 to 535,638, a gain of 277,651 or 107.6 per cent.

Counting Wilmington, Del., Washington City, Cumberland, Md., and St. Louis, Kansas City and Windsor, Mo., with the Southern cities their increase was from 1,370,833 to 1,913,608—a gain of 542,775 or 39.6 per cent.

Few of the larger cities of the South have as yet been reported. The reports so far received, however, show surprising gains for this section. It is not improbable that the census will show for the South including Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Missouri, a population of 35,000,000.

Tampa's population figures are, as yet, unreported but it is expected that they will be forthcoming in a few days. This city will more than maintain the percentage of growth recorded by other cities of the South.

Appreciates Them

G. W. Seibert, a Philadelphia reader of the Tribune, writes as follows:

I am much pleased to note your publication of Pastor C. T. Russell's fine sermons. I have been a close Bible student for nearly twenty years and have never found any other writings so satisfactory to heart and head as Pastor Russell's expositions of Scripture. God bless you in your good work. I hope you may see your way clear to continue publishing the sermons.

Some readers have expressed their disapproval of these sermons but the great majority of expressions received by the Tribune are favorable to their continuance. Outside of any Biblical consideration or particular trend of religious belief, they are pronounced helpful and inspiring deliverances and the Tribune does not see where any one can be harmed by perusing them.

FLORIDA SANCTUMS

Now Will You Laugh?—
Lake City Index: We do not laugh enough. There is nothing more pleasant to the ear than the merry laugh of a happy, joyous person, and nothing drives away gloom and care like a good, hearty laugh. Laughter and good humor make a happy, pleasant home and a cheerful bright home is the greatest safe guard against the temptations for the young. Parents should guard against this and spare no pains to make home a cheerful spot.

There's Only One Kissimmee—
Kissimmee Gazette: As an evidence that Kissimmee is as well known as New York, Baltimore, Washington or Chicago, a letter addressed to the "Osceola Hardware Company, Kissimmee," the name of the state being omitted, was delivered promptly to the firm in this city to which it was sent, even though it was mailed in a state to the north of this one.

Thought It Was Against The Law—
Miami Metropolis: There was some heavy betting on the Smith-Brown race for Governor of Georgia. One man is reported to have won twelve thousand dollars, and an Atlanta newspaper man garnered in $2,600. This is at least one instance that a newspaper man had a run of real luck.

More Editorial Pleasantries—
Tallahassee Democrat: Because the True Democrat has let its readers know of some of the beautiful things being said by its brethren of the State press of the editor of Florida, that worthy and distinguished combination of low billingsgate and grog shop slang proceeds to designate us as a "cowardly dog." We might retort that his big carcass contained all the multiplied characteristics of a hundred skunks, since his latter day odor has driven away most of his former friends but this would not be argument. He snorts around much because we decline to stoop to his level. We have too much regard for our readers to afflict them with the vile language it would be necessary to employ to discuss ths question with one of his ilk. His ravings do not offend us, because we recognize the source. We have not yet gotten nearer than a pole's length to a skunk and even then it was horribly offensive.

To Tag Lobbyists—
Gainesville Sun: They are going to tag lobbyists in Georgia and compel them to register. What a bunch of tags it would take to fit out the Indian land and other lobbyists at Washington. But there is no fear of Congress following the lead of Georgia.

A Safe Offer—
Punta Gorda Herald: The Gainesville Sun offers $100 for a rattlesnake ten feet long captured within ten miles of that city. It might safely extend the territory to include the whole state, for we doubt if there ever was a rattlesnake anywhere that measured as much as eight feet in length.

No Success Without Work—
Orlando Reporter-Star: At the present prices of chickens and eggs we can think of no more profitable business than that of poultry raising. It only takes a little capital to begin with and not much time need be devoted to the chickens as they can be left to run in a large enclosure and feed off of nature's product.—Dunnellon Advocate. This looks easy, but like truck raising, orange growing, or anything else, one expects to derive a profit or livelihood from, some experience and considerable work will be found necessary. Nature will not do it all. Until a suitable feed can be raised here profitably the chicken raiser will find it up hill business trying to feed his flock off of nature's product.

TRIBUNE TOPICS

Nay! Nay!—
Pensacola Journal: Anyway, Stovall's stenographer is not named Pauline.

Maybe He Isn't Trying—
Pensacola Journal. Mr. Bryan is still unable to satisfy the Tampa Tribune.

Her New Gown.—
St. Augustine Record: The Tribune announces that its famous stenographer is having some new clothes made, that turban that she was wearing last not meeting with the approval of the State press. Hobble skirt next?

She Can't Be Spared—
Bradentown Journal: When you have a place for an efficient stenographer say so in a Tribune want ad.—Tampa Tribune. Does the above mean the Tribune stenographer? If it does and you will make it definite all the pages of your paper will be filled with want ads for a stenographer. Why, even we—but not at our age such thoughts are vanity.

Only a Swallow For Tampa—
Miami Metropolis: "Let's take in Six Mile creek, too."—Tampa Tribune. Gee! What a thirst.

Accustomed to Big Things—
Bradentown Journal: A Tampa business firm recently made a $5,000 contract for advertising with the Tribune of that city. The average newspaper, if it should get a contract of that size, would put on airs, but the Tribune is accustomed to doing big things in more ways than one.

TOLD IN TAMPA

A Serious Mistake—
The girl with the sunburned nose and the brown arms sat back in her chair at the office and said emphatically, "Everybody makes a mistake somewhere about vacation. I know where I made mine and I shall profit by it."

Every one looked interested, so she went on, "You see I had planned to visit a number of cities and resorts and I was worried about carrying the money, so I divided it up and sent a little money to the general postoffice addressed to myself every place I was going. So that whatever happened I would have enough to gt along on."

"Bully idea," said the manager coming in, "but where may I ask did you make your mistake "

"I forgot," said the girl, demurely, "to address some to myself at home to carry me along when I got back. Has anybody got a quarter to lend?"

MEMORIAL DAY

The original significance of Memorial Day, which, falling on the Sabbath this year, has found a more general observance, has been extended. Adopted first to fix the custom of paying homage to the memory of those who fell in battle, it grew to encompass those who had engaged in conflict to support the cause of their land, until now loving hands lay wreaths and flowers on the graves of loved ones, regardless of military service.

It takes a great deal of planning and effort to impress the origin of Memorial Day in the succeeding years. Primary thoughts are, of course, with those who offered their all on the altar of service to their country; who made "the supreme sacrifice," as the phrase came to be during the World War. But while all honor is paid to military heroes there is equal thought to perpetuate the memory of those whose good deeds we knew in life; nor is our appreciation confined alone to friends. Just as a nation honors those who belong to it, so do all our people think of the good deeds of others who have passed on, whom they did not know in life.

Aside from the thought of keeping alive the memory of those who gave all they had to the nation they loved, there is benefit to be derived from taking part in the observance of a day set apart for thought of our dead. The things of life have grown so complicated and the demands of speeding time are so many that we are prone easily to forget. Things worth while to us pass from the mind in the hurly-burly rush unless sometimes we pause just to remember. And so in this annual visitation to our cemeteries where we lay flowers on the graves of the departed, we may pause to think of the good they did while living, or of the influence for good they cast upon our lives.

Memorial Day is still and always will be the soldiers' day; nothing can take away that thought regardless of how far its significance may be extended. But it is not a day for mobilization of military impulses; the failure to find response to make of it a Defense Day, indeed, the failure of the Defense Day idea has proved that. We want no more of war, least of all do those who know its terrible toll at first hand want it; some of us, indeed, seem not to want even to be prepared against aggression; others of us, not even wanting war, will not even aid to plan for peace. But all of us can gain an inspiration from the true meaning of Memorial Day which may lead us to resolutions against selfishness.

One who is utterly selfish will not take the time to decorate the grave of another or to think of the ways of the Creator, in which Life and Death have a part. Thus it would seem that a nation which observes so widely a day of memory for the dead is maintaining ideals of mutual endeavor—of brotherhood; and Memorial Day is, after all, a nation's monument to unselfishness.

WRONG VIEW

There is proof of a disgruntled son of a famous father in the statement by Richard F. Cleveland that "the American forefathers deliberately chose a form of government which has resulted in the most inefficient government in the world."

The man to whom the above quotation is attributed is the son of Grover Cleveland, twice president of the United States, and whose service gives him a large place in the history of this nation. Too young to know anything about governmental affairs when his parent stepped out of the presidency, or to sense the great principles for which Grover Cleveland fought so valiantly—and successfully—this latter-day critic of the motives of the forefathers, and the present condition of the government under which he lives, will scarcely attract applause by his utterance, save perhaps from that contingent who believe that all government is wrong.

It is true, there have been other governments more efficient than our own. Likewise, there have been many far less stable, and desirable. But ours has endured with time. It has come through crises, has endured for a century and a half, and is still a dominant factor in the affairs of the world, no matter what Cleveland or others of his way of thinking may have decided about it. The conclusion is forced that instead of offering such violent criticism, it would have been far better for Cleveland to have made some form of contribution for the betterment of the government, thus following in the footsteps of his illustrious parent.

Many appear to overlook the age-old fact that governments are no better than the people who create them, and they improve only as the people improve. If we are all that Cleveland hints we are, then the situation is simply this: This country must get along the best it can with the imperfect citizens given it. In any event, self-government of the masses is steadily improving, and it is perhaps well that Grover Cleveland is not here in life to be shamed by his son.

CONSOLIDATING SERVICE

In view of all the opposition that has developed since it was first broached by President Coolidge it is unlikely that any legislation will be passed to provide for compulsory consolidation of railroad systems along some plan devised by government functionaries. It would be even worse, however, to go to the other extreme, which is to relieve the Interstate Commerce Commission of the duty to approve voluntary consolidations which may be arranged by the railroads. The proposal is, perhaps, the outgrowth of the commission's disapproval of certain proposed mergers, but there is more reason to believe that this disapproval has conserved public rights than otherwise.

Compulsory consolidation does not meet the approval of experienced railroad men and in our opinion would be most unwise; but voluntary consolidation should be encouraged because its benefits have been shown where mergers have been effected. As a matter of fact it appears that the future of the railroads in this country depends on the unification of railroad systems, but it is something which may not be forced unless the country is willing to face the possibility of government ownership. Railroads have been working out their problems fairly well and they have learned that the way to profitable operation is in the reduction of cost of operation rather than in seeking constantly to increase rates.

One of the greatest causes of waste in railway transportation now is in the non-income way of box and freight car distribution. Here is a great business which has failed to adopt a method that would occur to the driver of a one-horse dray, who realizes that there is no profit if driving an empty wagon; but the railroads are cluttered up with empty cars, which frequently are sent entirely across the continent to the terminus from which they started originally with a load.

There is merit in the suggestion of Mr. S. Davies Warfield, President of the Seaboard Air Line Railway Company, which the railroads might easily adopt. It is simply that the railroads pool their box and freight cars, saving millions of dollars annually in avoiding hauling of empty cars in returning them to the owner railroad to save payment of per diem rental for them.

"The capital investment in engine and other equipment, cost of coal and other operating expenses in connection with hurrying back home empty an implement of transportation, such as a box car, instead of finding a load for it in territory nearest where unloaded, and when half its life is spent on the rails of railroads other than its owner's is a costly method of transporting freight in interstate commerce," says Mr. Warfield. "The ordinary box car, of which there are approximately 1,200,000, is legal tender among railroads as the bank note is among banks."

To follow out the suggestion to a logical conclusion would require standardization of cars, which is desirable from the standpoint of the shipper. This also would reduce cost of repairs and upkeep in standardized shops.

As one studies the question of railroad consolidation it appears that there are many ways by which service may be made better and cheaper, none of which require special legislation to accomplish.

TIMES AND CUSTOMS

The highest honor has just been paid to the memory of John Ericsson to whom a monument has been erected in the nation's capital, with ceremonies led by the president. It was a deserved honor and long delayed, for in the time that has passed for calm reflection, it may be recognized that the "cheese-box" which Ericsson gave to the world not only saved the United States as a nation, but made that nation powerful to extend its influence.

John Ericsson was a naturalized citizen of the United States when he built the Monitor for its defense. He had been here but relatively a short time after his invention had been rejected by Napoleon. But neither his foreign birth nor his brief residence detract from his heroic memory which the nation has done well to perpetuate.

One is inclined to wonder, however, about it all; and whether or not if Ericsson, the foreigner, would gain hearing today under circumstances similar to those which made him famous.

The wonder is inspired as there comes to attention the case of Raphael Morello, an Italian living in this country when we were drawn into the World War, who was drafted for overseas service. Before he left for service, his wife, overcome by grief, committed suicide. Morello could not speak English well, and at his trial, attempting to state his case, became confused. An incompetent interpreter translated his denial and explanation as an admission of guilt and Morello was sentenced to life imprisonment. Now, eight years later, he has gained hearing for the truth and has been released from prison. But the state can make no reparation for the wrong done him; it cannot restore the eight years it has taken from his life. Not only that, but he is a convict, and being foreign born is subject to deportation. After all his mental suffering and the contacts he made in prison, deportation probably does not matter to Morello.

No aureole of heroism surrounds Morello; perhaps, to the immigration authorities it would make no difference if it did. As an alien-born resident of the country he was good enough to call to the country's service; only the interference of a state which victimized him prevented that.

The error of the state in Morello's case may have been excusable though most unfortunate. It's too late to think of justice now in his case. But thought of Morello and of Ericsson prompts reflection why it is that we hold to the barbaric in hero-worship to be so refined in our ideas of justice as sometimes to be barbarous.

BRISBANE'S TWADDLE

Arthur Brisbane, in his daily comment, seems disposed to lay responsibility for the Polish revolution on the doorstep of the League of Nations. It would be just as inconsistent with the facts to charge the league with responsibility for the general strike in England.

When the question of entry into the league was being discussed in the United States, Mr. Brisbane consumed columns of newspaper space insisting upon domestic questions and so-called regional agreements, such as the Monroe Doctrine, being outside the purview of the league. And all of this was fixed in the original draft of the covenant.

This is but another illustration of intellectual dishonesty which makes Mr. Brisbane the most dangerous agitator in America, dangerous because he is not concerned about the truth. Assumption that he did not know better would be to charge him with senility.

DEADLY WIRES

Evelyn Brock, twelve years old, was going back to school from luncheon at her home the other day and walked under high-tension wires heavily charged with electricity. In some manner these wires were short-circuited and parted, falling round her.

"A big white light covered me," said the fatally-burned little girl on her way to the hospital.

Now Evelyn's dead. The wires are still there.

What caused the short circuit may never be known. Workmen employed nearby say the flash came immediately after a train had passed the crossing and the safety gates had been raised in close proximity with the wires. Others say a small boy had been flying a kite with wire and the wire may have come in contact with insulators and conductors. Which theory is true may not be determined.

Evelyn's dead. The wires should come down. Safety and progress both demand that all wiring should be underground.

The brevity of Mr. Edison's first speech over the radio, complete in ten words, no doubt was due to the fact he has been compelled to listen to longer-winded speakers.

CENTRAL HEATING

BERLIN.—One thousand one hundred coal carts now regularly engaged in supplying fuel to households will, it is expected, be driven from the streets of Charlottenburg as a result of a "long distance" heating scheme. The municipality, after many years' experiments, is about to put the scheme into operation. Berlin proposes to adopt it, and it is anticipated that in the next few years all the stoves in German apartments and offices will be scrapped. The scheme provides a supply of steam-heat from a vast central municipal furnace, housewives being able, by turning a tap, to regulate the supply, as gas and water are now regulated. Great economies in fuel and money will be made, and the Charlottenburg municipality alone expects to save a large yearly sum by adopting long-distance heating for civic buildings and schools. Doctors predict the disappearance of the smoke-pall now caused by fumes from thousands of chimneys.

MAYOR SOLVES RIDDLE

MUNICH.—The sequel to an accident at the German village of Rachelberg, near Munich, is reminiscent of the judgment of Solomon. A cyclist after running down and killing a prize goose, offered the owner two gold marks as compensation. The latter refused, but told the cyclist that he could take away the goose for five gold marks. The proposal met with a refusal, and after a violent discussion the village mayor was asked to arbitrate. "It is quite easy," said the mayor, "the cyclist has given you two marks, I'll give you the balance of three marks, and I take the goose. You have both obtained satisfaction."

WORLD'S BIG BOY

PARIS.—Paul Merlaud, who is being exhibited at fairs in the Paris district, claims to be the world's biggest boy of his age. Born at Vendee village in November, 1910, he now weighs 425 English pounds, and as he is progressing steadily at the rate of 6 pounds a month, and there's no knowing where he will stop, he bids fair to cast the late Mr. Daniel Lambert completely into the shade. There was nothing remarkable about his size until he reached the age of nine, when he began to grow, or rather, spread, to an alarming extent. He turned the scale at 260 pounds when he received his first communion. His height is only 5 ft. 6 in., a figure which gives some idea of his girth.

EDITORIAL DIGEST

RECOVERY OF BRITISH POUND.

Like a ray of sunlight through the clouds hanging in the wake of the general strike, news that British sterling had reached par for the first time since the war pleases and encourages the world.

Credit for the achievement is given by the Utica Observer Dispatch to well-known "English economic tenacity and sense." Why are not other European countries in the same happy position? This paper thinks "the difficulty upon the continent is due largely to the fact that the governments will not balance their budgets. The English assessed the severest of taxes," continues the Utica paper, "and the people paid them. The politicians on the continent do not dare to do the same. The people will not pay taxes as the English will."

That this economic rehabilitation records the "high water mark of British character" is the tribute of the Louisville Courier Journal. "It is character that has achieved this remarkable victory," continues the Courier Journal. "While other nations have 'gone the easy way' into inflation and bankruptcy and repudiation, Great Britain has kept faith with the British tradition of commercial integrity. Its people have sacrificed and suffered and worked their way out of the financial welter wrought by the war. Their character has commanded credit when credit was needed. On a scale never before known, the late J. Pierpont Morgan's dictum that the basis of credit is character and not capital—that men worth millions may not prudently be lent a dollar and that men without a dollar may very prudently be lent millions—has been exemplified."

John Bull is pictured by the Manchester Union as having "made good in his long fight against obstacles which well might have deterred a less determined man of business," and considers that he has set an example worth following. "The French have the opportunity to study British finance at close range" suggests the Union, and "it will be a pity, indeed, if they fail to take some hint from the islanders' stout determination to maintain national solvency."

England has taken the wind out of the sails of her detractors, in the opinion of the Chicago Daily News, which says: "Whatever some pessimists may assert to the contrary, England is not 'done.' It is facing the future with confidence. British faith in the gold standard has been vindicated by the course of economic and financial events." The News believes that "the recovery of the pound sterling should encourage other nations to take up in earnest the question of returning to the gold standard." Such action, it affirms, if taken by France, would assist in the "stabilization of the franc," and "economic questions, including the cost of living and the flight of capital, would be much simplified."

Convinced that "there must be a great reserve force concealed in the British Empire," the Chattanooga News expresses the judgment that "its vitality is entitled to a place among modern marvels." The Bellingham Herald, observing that France "has practically no unemployed, but its finances are demoralized," while Great Britain, "with its finances in perfect shape, constantly faces economic trouble that has resulted in an army of unemployed of more than 1,000,000 for years," suggests that possibly actual completion of the war-debt negotiations will help to turn the franc in the upward direction."

GROWED UP

Gee, but sonny's tickled pink. Every day he says, "Just think, I feel growed—ya know what for? I'm no baby any more. Only three, but, heaven sakes, what a change it always makes when ya seem growed up, somehow. Gotta baby sister now.

"'Course all things aren't as they were. Gotta keep my eye on her. Mom and pep don't seem so free. Sorta overlookin' me. Still, I'm willin' fer a while just to bear it all, an' smile; keepin' quiet as a mouse, fer the baby in our house.

"Not so long ago, dad said, 'come ta me, ya sleepy head. Cuddle close and don'tcha peep. Dad'll rock ya off ta sleep.' Sure, 'twas nice, but I don't mind—shucks, I've never even whined, since the rockin's stopped. Aw, gee, that's fer babies—not fer me.

"All the pettin' goes ta sis. Now and then I get a kiss, but the baby's 'daddy's dear'—Gee, at that, it's kinda queer. All the growth, and such, I've got may be nice—and maybe not. Kinda wish that things could be, so I was her—and she was me."

AUTHORS COMPARED

To the Editor of The News:

The English novelist of these times is not a story teller, but a compiler of words. He is such an A-1 highbrow that he must talk down to people who are buncoed into reading his works. Take the "Green Hat," that commences nowhere and ends nowhere. The author starts his story and then commences to pile up words which the reader wades through until he has forgotten what he read at first and has to go back and mull through it all again. The thread of the story is frequently broken in this manner. Yes, broken—smashed to bits. Our American writers beat them by telling a story that is interesting from start to finish. Tarkington, Leon Wilson, Fanny Hearst and many others are good, pure writers that can be read by anyone, young or old, without doing them any harm; in fact, it will help them if they should ever try to write a story. Read our own authors. Let the English keep their stuff at home until they give us something worth while.

CIVILIZATION AND SPIRITISM

To the Editor of The News:

In your issue of Sunday, May 16, I note account of an interview with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle on the subject of Spiritualism.

Probably no other subject (except, perhaps, the League of Nations) has occupied more space in the magazines and newspapers during the past few years, than Spiritualism.

The civilized world is rapidly going mad over Spiritualism, or more properly speaking, Spiritism. In fact, some of our most noted alienists have declared that the whole human race will be insane within the next ten years unless something intervenes to oppose this tidal wave now threatening to engulf us. It has been estimated that within the last two years more than 100,000 persons in Great Britain alone have lost their minds because of Spiritualism.

I feel, therefore, impelled to sound a note of alarm. I appeal to your readers, if there be any Christian men and women among them who still believe the Bible to be the inspired word of God, and whose faith in it has not been utterly destroyed by present-day teachings from both pulpit and platform along the lines of Higher Criticism, Evolution and "Science, falsely so-called," to hearken to the word of the Lord if they would keep their reason on its throne and save their souls from eternal death.

Any person who thoroughly understands the condition of the dead, as clearly set forth in the Bible, will be absolutely convinced that communication with the dead is an utter impossibility. The Bible teaches that man was created mortal (i. e., a condition in which death is a possibility, but not a necessity), that he disobeyed his Creator and was condemned to death, to destruction, and that the dead can never see life again except by a resurrection from the dead through the power of the Lord Jesus Christ at His Second Advent.

The doctrine of man's natural or "inherent immortality" (i. e., a condition in which death is impossible), is taught by all the heathen and pagan religions and is the foundation of all the deceptions and delusions of Spiritualism. I challenge any person to find in the Bible a single statement by Jehovah God to the effect that man is immortal, or has an immortal soul, or that he cannot die, or be destroyed, even by his maker, Almighty God, "who only hath immortality." (Read I Timothy, 6:16.)

This doctrine that man has a mysterious something (nobody knows exactly what) inside his body, which cannot die, was first taught in the Garden of Eden by Satan, "the father of lies," the Serpent, when he said to Mother Eve, "Ye shall not surely die," whereas the Lord God had said to Adam, "Thou shalt surely die!" (Genesis 3:1-4; 2:16-17.) Shall we believe God's truth or Satan's lie?

It is not within the scope of this brief article to give the numerous scriptural citations which prove that "the dead know not anything," their "thoughts have perished," and that they are not in Heaven, Purgatory, "Hell-fire," or hovering around in the earth's atmosphere, but that they are in their graves, dead, as completely out of existence as though they had never lived, and that the dead will remain in this condition until the Lord Jesus shall awaken them out of death.

If any be not convinced by the scriptural definitions of death, i. e., destruction (sometimes referred to as "sleep" because of the hope of an awakening by a resurrection promised in God's word), let him consult a Webster's dictionary, which declares death to be "cessation of life."

Thank God for the promise that the dead shall "live again," at the second advent of our Lord, although in the meantime they are dead, "asleep in the dust of the earth," "in the graves." (Daniel 12:2; John 5;26-29.)

NEW YORK LETTER

BY O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, May 29.—It is not a vaudeville wheeze, incidentally, that sailor boys on an afternoon furlough usually spend it rowing their girl friend around the lake in Central Park. Run up to the park any sunny afternoon and see. Incidentally a motion-picture critic was recently seen taking in the wonders of a Sixth avenue penny peep show.

It is one of the New York cliches for girls who marry titles finally to get down to hard work. A statistician has figured out that only two per cent of wealthy American girls who wed noblemen retain their fortunes after five years. The pace is merry and swift. Still they are leaving on every steamer hoping for the grand chance.

Waiting for the Fifth Avenue buses in the lower end of Washington Square is a prelude to the escape from cramped apartments for city folk. They clot there as the sun goes down, herded behind chains to await their turn to mount the spiral stairs to the top of the lumbering vehicle. They are mostly young girls and their beaux, for the bus company has issued their ukase in favor of "spooning." The conductors pass around their pistol dime slots and then discreetly withdraw below stairs. Moonlight nights bring capacity crowds.

I peeped into a shop window along the avenue and saw a shirt-sleeved young man dressing a beautiful wax model. He would give the dress deft touches here and there and then stand off a few feet to admire. I wondered in case his wife or sweetheart asked him what he was doing that evening just what he told them. Perhaps, however, there is a trade phrase that covers it but the fact remains that he was dressing a woman with all the blinds down. The gay rogue!

Life is full of discoveries. A well dressed New Yorker with a boil on his neck found he did not need a back collar button and has never worn one since. Adversity furnishing the usual compensation. Perhaps man will eventually shed other dressing accessories. For years suspenders seemed necessary. Then came the belt. Now a leading tailor says few men wear belts save when vestless.

The most embarrassed male I ever beheld came into a crowded room the other evening and adjusted a monocle to his eye. It slipped to the floor with a plink. He picked it up and made two other unsuccessful attempts. Then he tossed it in a waste basket, blushed furiously, turned and walked out. If it had been I, I would have kept on walking until I reached a nice friendly river.

Fifth Avenue after nightfall is the best policed section in town next to Wall Street. An instance came under personal observation the other evening. In one of the smart shops opposite the Vanderbilt home there was the scream of feminine anguish. It was a customer who had gone into the washroom at closing time and had been locked in when the store closed. In five minutes there were 28 city police and 11 private patrolmen. A janitor was called and the woman was rescued, looking a trifle foolish.

The impresario of an orange drink stand on 7th Avenue has at least a sense of the ridiculous. Against his back wall hangs one of those gay harbingers of Spring in the 90's—a Bock Beer Sign.

STORIES OF OHIO

BY J. H. GALBRAITH

OHIO'S FIRST NATIVE GOVERNOR

Among other distinctions to which Belmont co. may lay claim is that of having given to the state the first native governor,—Wilson Shannon. As in all new states, the officials must at first, and until a new generation has come forth, be selected from the ranks of the people who, born elsewhere, have come there to organize the new government.

Shannon was the son of a pioneer and knew the hardships of life on the frontier. He was born Feb. 24, 1802—the year of the organization of Ohio as a state, and his birthplace, Mt. Olivet, which is not even carried in the list of postoffices of the state now, having probably been wiped out by the establishment of rural delivery. A log cabin was the domicile of his parents.

When this baby was not yet quite a year old, in January, 1803, his father went hunting and while far from home in the deep woods, he was caught in a heavy snow storm, followed by severe cold weather. He lost his way and exhausted, sat down by the side of a large tree and froze to death. His body was found there several days afterward by a party of rescuers in search of him.

He was educated at Ohio university, Athens, and at Transylvania college, Kentucky, and had the advantage of studying law in the office of Charles Hammond, son of the most noted lawyers of early Ohio, and soon became eminent at the bar himself. Entering politics, he became the candidate of the Democrats for governor in 1838, and defeated Joseph Vance, the Whig candidate. Two years later Tom Corwin defeated him, but Shannon was no quitter. He demanded his right to a second trial and two years later was again elected governor.

In 1852 he was sent to congress and was one of four Democrats from Ohio who voted against the Kansas-Nebraska bill. President Pierce appointed him governor of Kansas, and resigning that office in 1857, he took up the practice of law at Lawrence, in that state, where he died in 1877. His grave is at that historical place.

RADIO REPORT INDICATES THAT MISSING BIRDMEN ARE SAFE IN NEW FOUNDLAND; UNCONFIRMED

ATLANTA, Ga., May 14—(UP)—A message which was picked up by the Amateur Radio operator here last night indicated the Trans-Atlantic Fliers Nungesser and Coli were safe but weary in Trinity, New Foundland. The message said the fliers were forced down there Thursday by lack of fuel after seventy hours in the air. The report was unconfirmed.

HARD WIND STRUCK CITY; NO DAMAGE

A hard windstorm struck the city last night about 8:40 and for a time had many people frightened into the belief that a cyclone was upon the city. But the wind abated within a few minutes and the storm was over. No damage is reported except a few trees blown down, and no serious damage was reported by any of the visitors.

Coming close on the heels of the terrific cyclone of Monday there were all kinds of rumors in circulation early this morning. Some were sure Pocahontas and Egypt were destroyed, but information from those points is to the effect that there was no storm. Pocahontas reported a heavy downpour of hail yesterday afternoon which severly injured the corps. It was announced over radio yesterday that a tornado would pass this way between the hours of eight and twelve last night, and this added to the uneasiness when the high wind struck the town.

M. P. WELSH IS APPOINTED COUNTY FINANCE CHAIRMAN INTERMEDIATE CREDIT BANK

M. P. Welsh has returned from Little Rock, where he attended a meeting of the state rehabilitation committee presided over by Harvey Couch. Mr. Welsh was appointed county chairman of finance to raise $33,500 as this county's quota of five million dollars being raised to establish an intermediate credit bank for the rehabilitation work in the flooded district and loans to farms to make a crop. Three hundred thousand has already been raised and the charter granted by the government. This means that Arkansas will receive ten times the amount subscribed from the government to be loaned to the farmers. The money loans will be handled through a local committee to be appointed by the state committee and all business will be transacted through the local branch of the bank. Mr. Welsh has called a meeting of the business men, bankers and farmers for Monday night at the Chamber of Commerce to discuss the proposition and the methods to be used in raising the fund.

KENTUCKY DERBY WILL BE RUN LATE THIS AFTERNOON BEFORE HUNDRED THOUSAND

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 14—(UP)—America's racing classic, the Kentucky Derby, was to be run late this afternoon with a muddy track in prospect, following more than an inch rain in the last twenty-four hours. It was clear and the sun was shining this afternoon with the prospect for one hundred thousand people at the tracks. The race is for a fifty thousand dollar purse added.

MANY FAMILIES ARE BEING FED AT TRUMANN

Miss Twente, Red Cross officer, returned last night from Poinsett County where she made a survey of the flood situation. She reports that 585 families, embracing about 2650 people are being cared for by the Red Cross and citizens of Trumann. The water is falling slowly at Trumann.

It was reported at the Relief Headquarters this afternoon that forty-two refugees were checked in at breakfast and it will probably be Monday afternoon before all are checked out and the camp closed.

Keller Brothers Feed and Grain Company donated three barrels of flour today and the Fletcher Furniture Store $15.00 in merchandise.

CHANCERY COURT ADJOURNED AFTER ONE DAY SESSION

Chancery court adjourned last night after a special day here yesterday. A number of divorce cases were heard. Judge Futrell rendered a decision in the case of Jonesboro Building & Loan Association vs. Causey in favor of the loan company. Causey, a resident of Marked Tree had become indebted to the amount of two thousand to the building and loan company but a Mr. Blanton of Marked Tree was claiming title to the property on a tax sale from Drainage District No. 7, Poinsett county.

STORMS AND FOG STOP OCEAN FLIGHTS UNTIL TOMORROW

NEW YORK, May 14—(UP)—Storms and fog over the Atlantic Ocean today held three impatient airmen to the ground, delaying at least until tomorrow the start of the First American attempt to fly from New York to Paris, and thereby increasing the chances for the great air derby.

Chamberlin and Bertaud had definitely planned to leave this morning and Linderbergh is also ready to leave any time. Commander Bryd is not yet ready but may be at anytime. Fair weather is expected to send three into the thrilling air race for Paris tomorrow.

FARMERS WHO OPPOSE FENCE LAW MEET

A meeting is being held this afternoon at the court house by a number of farmers who favor the repeal of the no fence stock law in this county. They had not completed their meeting at press time and what action was taken was not available for the paper. The legislature two years ago passed what is known as a no fence law, giving the citizens of the various townships the privilege of voting whether or not fences shall be maintained around farms or torn down. Those who raise stock and want them to run at large on the range oppose the no fence proposition, as under its terms they must keep their stock on their own premises.

The United Press around the world greets Missouri," said the message which travelled over United Press leased wires around the world.

Four hundred newspapermen and women witnessed the demonstration.

MRS. SEIBERT NATIONALLY KNOWN WRITER AND GLOBE TROTTER IS VISITOR TO JONESBORO

Mrs. G. W. Seibert, a noted celebrity in the literary world, is in the city, a guest at Hotel Noble. She has just retired from Miami, Fla. where she spent the winter and stopped off for treatment by Dr. Lecocq. Mrs. Seibert has been through two hurricanes during her winter sojourns in Florida. She will be here for sometime, before going to her home in New York to spend the summer. She is a member of the League of American Penwomen, and her specialty is poetry and religious writings, through which efforts she has attained national recognition. She has made a special study of the Bible for the past thirty years and has contributed to many papers and magazines.

Mrs. Seibert has traveled extensively, covering Australia, New Zealand, Tasmania, West Indies and Europe. She is a graduate of Wellesly College and would be glad to have an interview with any ladies who have attended that famous college.

Her poems have been very comforting to shutins and sick folks and are in the libraries of many hospitals over the nation. The following poem from her collection is printed below. The Tribune editor acknowledges the receipt of a copy of these poems:

THE SWEET-BRIER ROSE

Beside my cottage door it grows,
The loveliest, daintiest flower that blows,
A sweet-brier rose.

At dewy morn or twilight's close,
The rarest perfume from it flows,—
This strange, wild rose.

But when the raindrops on it beat,
Ah, then its odors grow more sweet
About my feet!

Ofttimes with loving tenderness
Its soft green leaves I gently press
In sweet caress,—

A still more wondrous fragrance flows,
The more my fingers firmly close,
And crush the rose!

* * *

Dear Lord, Oh, let my life be so,—
Its perfume when the tempests blow,
The sweeter flow!

And should it be Thy blessed will
With crushing grief my soul to fill,
Press harder still,

And while its dying fragrance flows,
I'll whisper low, "He loves and knows
His crushed brier-rose."

HAIL STORM AND HEAVY RAN IN POCAHONTAS AREA

POCAHONTAS, Ark., May 13—More destructive to property than the tornado that swept this county Monday was a cloudburst and hail storm which visited this section this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The hailstorms fell as thick as rain, beating roofs from houses and breaking all windows and glass with which they came in contact. Gardens and fruits are completely ruined.

Many farmers had small strawberry patches which were just rippening. These will be a total loss. early cotn and cotton will all have to be planted over as it is all completely beaten into the ground. A very heavy rain, increasing to the proportions of a cloudburst, followed the hailstorms, continuing in torrents for more than 30 minutes.

Black River, which had already threatened to overflow the farm lands on the east side, will be flood stage again by tomorrow. The storm came from the northwest and it is feared that conditions are much worse in the northern section of the county than here.

Telephone lines are all out of commission, and it is impossible to learn the extent of the damage done in other sections of the county.

REV. ERNEST BARNETT WILL ATTEND OSTEND BELGIUM MEETING

Guy Barnett received a letter today from his brother, Rev. Ernest Barnett, pastor of the Christian church at Mayfield, Ky., which stated he had been elected a delegate from the Rotary Club of that city to attend the international meeting in Ostend, Belgium, and he and his wife will sail from New York May 25th. They will be met there by Dr. Fred Keller of this city, who represents the Jonesboro club at the meeting. They will take side trips over Europe after the convention.

E. J. Rogers returned this morning from Poplar Bluff, where he went to view the city which was wrecked by the storm Monday afternoon. He reports the city cleaning up the debris and the people determined to rebuild a new city.

CROSS COUNTY MAN IS KILLED WHILE RESISTING ARREST

WYNNE, Ark., May 13—Ransom Hickcock, age 35, was shot and killed late yesterday afternoon on Brushy Lake, one mile east of Hickory Ridge, while resisting arrest at the hands of deputies from the sheriff's office. Deputies C. H. Childress, George Johnson and Bob Hall had gone to a point near Hickcock's home when they found him in a dense thicket, with a still fired up in the act of making whisky, they say.

When ordered to surrender, he attempted to open fire, the officers claim, but was beaten to the draw by Deputy George Johnson, who fired two bullets into Hickcock's body, killing him instantly.

A wagon and team belonging to the moonshiner was near by and the officers placed him in the wagon and carried him to his home. Hickcock was said to be an old offender and had given the officers of Cross County much trouble in the past.

FLOOD CONTINUES ACROSS PARISHES IN LA. AS NEW BREAKS EORCE 150,000 FROM HOMES

NEW ORLEANS, May 14—(UP)—Sweeping across the farms and homes of one hundred and fifty thousand persons and with more than ten million dollars worth of property doomed the flood today continued the final act of devastation in the greatest disaster in the history of the nation.

Water continued to flow into the giant "sugar bowl" forming a vast lake fifty to hundred miles wide and reaching from the northern border of Louisiana to the southern coast.

Six parishes are in the path of the new break and a million acres of rich farm land must be evacuated, bringing the total number of persons forced from their homes in Louisiana alone to more than three hundred thousand and the total to more than half a million.

Widening of the breaks in the Mississippi river levees at Big Bend is pouring three quarters of a million cubic feet of water over the countryside, engineers estimated today.

All roads out of the doomed valley are lined with refugees bound for camps at Mansura and Marksville.

No loss of life is reported from the new breaks.

PINEDO WILL ARRIVE ST. LOUIS LATE AFTERNOON

JONESBORO DAILY TRIBUNE

VOLUME XXL JONESBORO, ARKANSAS SATURDAY, MAY 28, 1927. NUMBER 122

HEAVY HAIL DAMAGE IN AND NEAR CITY

LOCAL GREENHOUSES LOST MORE THAN SEVEN THOUSAND AND CROPS ARE DAMAGED

The hail damage early this morning throughout this section of the county was terrific, according to reports coming in from outlying districts.

Many fruit trees in the city were stripped of a major portion of the fruit and gardens were damaged. The white way lights on Main and Union were damaged considerably also.

Ed Cherry of Bay stated that the hail did more damage in that town than it did here. He stated that the young cotton crop was destroyed, window lights broken out and a number of automobiles which were out in the storm had their tops damaged by the hail.

It did not hail at Otwell but reached a point several miles southwest of town. North of the city farmers in the city today stated that the hail fell to a depth of six inches and damaged gardens, fruit and young cotton.

Citizens of Mangrum who were in the city stated that there was no hail damage there and it was not thought that any damage resulted in the east bottoms across the river.

Henry Kenward of Kenward's greenhouse in this city stated that more than a thousand dollars worth of glass was broken in his greenhouses. Mr. Graves of Graves Greenhouse states his glass loss is $4500 and damage to growing plants, $1500, partially covered by insurance.

J. S. Fry of Walnut Corner, six miles north of Bono said the hail was terrific there and accompanied by high wind. The oat crop was entirely destroyed, gardens cleaned and cotton damaged considerably. He stated that the hail beat the roofs off of his place and Ernest Pollock's home and at several other places in the community.

The Hub Manufacturing Company roof was also damaged by the hail.

Reports received from Black Oak, Monette and Lake City state there was no hail damage there, although a hard rain fell.

MELVA OVERSTREET DIED THIS MORNING IN OGDEN, UTAH

A message was received this morning from Mr. and Mrs. Lynne Overstreet of Ogden, Utah, announcing the death of their daughter, Melva, at three o'clock this morning as a result of meningitis. Mrs. Overstreet will be remembered as Miss Mildred Malone, daughter of Mrs. John K. Malone of this city. The little girl was four years of age and had visited here with her mother. The parents and relatives have the sympathy of a host of relatives in their dark hour of grief.

LINDBERGH HONORED WITH DISTINGUISHED FLYING CROSS BY AMERICAN GOVERNMENT

By United Press:

WASHINGTON, May 28.—America today honored its distinguished hero airman, Charles Lindeberg, with a citation for the distinguished flying cross. It is a rare honor, held by only eight. The announcement came from the White House with the approval of President Coolidge. When Lindberg will receive the honor is uncertain, as the president will be on his vacation on Lindberg's return. He way fly to the Black Hills to receive the honor, or may take it from Secretary Davis at Washington.

Lindberkh met royalty for the first time today when King Albert of Belgium conferred the Order of Leopold on him. He refused the invitation of the king to spend the night at the royal palace.

FOREST FIRE RAGING IN COLORADO

PUEBLO, Colo., May 28—(UP)—A raging forest fire fanned by a high wind today is threatening to destroy a large portion of San Isabel National Forest. More than five thousand acres of timber has already been laid waste and as the blaze continues to gain headway six hundred fire fighters are pessimistic over their ability to stop the fire.

The forest supervisor declared the only chance to save the large forest was for the wind to abate.

HOUSE OF DAVID HAS GOOD TEAM FOR MONDAY GAME

Perhaps a word of explanation is necessary in connection with the base ball game to be played Monday afternoon at Fay's field, when the Jonesboro Buffaloes and the House of David Flying Nine will cross bats.

This is not the original House of David nine from Illinois, but is a team composed of first class ball players over the state. However the game will be played as a burlesque and the visiting players will be dressed to represent the long-whiskered sect from the north. Among them will be one stranger, Kelly. This versatile ball player will change positions every inning and will work in every position on the nine. This game should prove to be highly entertaining, as well as interesting from the standpoint of good baseball.

The game will be called Monday afternoon promptly at 3:30. Get out there early if you want a choice location, as all indications point to an overflowing grandstand.

THREE FINED IN MUNICIPAL COURT

Charles King was fined $1.00 this morning in municipal court for breach of the peace.

BRUSSELS, May 28—(UP)—Capt. Charles A. Linderberg and his Ryan Monoplane arrived here today for a one day visit to this capital during which he will be feted and decorated with the order of Leopold.

He flew all the way from Paris in the rain but declared the trip was fine and the motor was working perfectly.

An escort of ten Belgian planes met him at the border and escorted him here. He was met by a cheering throng of thousands including thousands of school children waving American flags. High government officials met him at the field and extended an official welcome from Belgium.

BLYTHEVILLE GIRL DIED AS RESULT AUTO ACCIDENT

BLYTHEVILLE, ARK., May 28.—Miss Connie Webster, 15, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S L. Webster of Blytheville, died at 2:30 yesterday afternoon as a result of an automobile accident, just one hour before. Miss Kathleen Hessie, who was in the car with Miss Webster, was cut on the right knee and hip and otherwise bruised.

The accident occurred on the Memphis Highway, one fourth mile from the Burdette depot when the Hudson coach in which they were riding turned over.

The young women had been to Memphis for two days and were returning home. Miss Hessie stated that a truck, going in the same direction, was in front of them, and that Miss Hessie, who was driving, honked for the truck to get out of the way. She passed the truck, Miss Hessie said "I don't know whether or not the truck hit us. All I remember was that we were going about 35 or 40 miles an hour, and when we passed the truck, like a flash we were turned over on one side in the middle of the road."

No eye witnesses could be located. Rev. Floyd Jones, stated that he was returning from Osceola and reached the scene of the accident about two minutes after it occurred, and he was told by the crowd which had gathered that the car passed the truck at a high speed and that the car hit the truck's front wheel when it cut in and knocked it over into the ditch.

The young women were thrown from the car, it is said. They were brought to Dr. Johnson's office in this city Miss Webster's skull was fractured and she died in Dr. Johnson's office.

JOE AND SAUL BERTIG INDICTED IN BANK CASE

PARAGOULD, May 27.—Following completion of work by the Greene County Grand jury, it became known today that the fifteen bills of indictment had been returned in the probe of affairs of the Paragould Trust Company which closed its doors by order of the State Banking Department, December 22.

Those indicted include J. C. Mark vice-president; Saul Bertig, director and a member of the partnership and corporation of Bertig Brothers. The indictments, service on which has been duly executed, are as follows.

J. C. Markham, two counts for assenting to receiving deposits when the bank was insolvent; one count for receiving funds when the bank was insolvent, one count for making false entry, one count for exhibiting false papers.

Joe R. Bertig, three counts for asseting to receiving deposits when the bank was insolvent; one count for making false entry; one count for exhibiting false papers. The indictments against Saul Bertig were on the same counts as those against Joe R. Bertig.

Bonds Are Executed.

The bonds of Markham and the two Bertigs were placed at five thousands dollars each, which have been supplied. The defendants are being represented by Attorneys Block & Kirsch, of this city, and Attorney Johnson of Little Rock.

Saul and Joe Bertig are now in this city, while Mr. Markham is in Louisville, Kentucky. Mr. Markham was here a few days ago in connection with the case but returned to Louisville where he has employment.

By United Press:

YATES, Mo., May 28.—Four persons were killed, twelve seriously injured, two of whom are not expected to live and the property damage is mounting into several thousand dollars, by a tornado which struck here early last night. Serious damage was reported to far homes near here but all communication lines are down and it is impossible to determine the extent of damage.

Homes here were picked up and hurled about like match boxes. The dead are: Mrs. J. R. Williams, Mrs. John Morris, J. E. Fray and John Kirby. Kirby died of heart failure when he saw the storm coming, but it missed his house.

THE BIBLE VERSUS EVOLUTION

By Gertrude W. Seibert

The Holy Scriptures were not written to teach scientific truths, nevertheless true science will never contradict the Bible.

According to the dictionary, "Science is classified Knowledge." In other words it is the generally accepted result of man's efforts to discover the facts and laws of the world in which we live.

But if we wish to understand the true science, we must set aside the the teachings of "science falsely so-called." as St. Paul puts it (1 Tim. 6:20) and go directly to the Word of God.

Man in his present fallen and sinful condition, is an extremist, and Satan, the great deceiver, the "father of lies," has taken advantage of this weakness of mankind and driven him from one extreme to the opposite extreme of error, like the pendulum of a clock, whereas the truth will generally be found to lie just between these two extremes.

In the doctrine of Evolution, it seems clear to our careful Bible student that both "modernists" and "Fundamentalists" are wrong, because they go to extremes, one in this direction, the other in the opposite.

Fundamentalists take the Bible too literally, modernists interpret it too figuratively. St. Paul says, we should "rightly divide the word of Truth." i. e. study and learn how to distinguish between the literal passages of scripture and those which are figurative or symbolic.

Bible Students can agree with evolutionists, who accept an intellegent first cause, as to the development of the inferior animals by a process of evolution.

Note the language used in Genesis in the animal creation, viz. "Let the Earth bring forth," and "Let the waters bring forth abundantly." (Chapter 1 verses 20 to 25.)

According to the latest understanding of the Creative Days, each "day" was a period of six thousand years, thus forty-two thousand years, approximately, were given over to the preparation of the physical earth and the development of the lower animal creation before man appeared on the scene.

Now, let us note how different the language employed in describing man's creation. viz. "Let us make man in our own image, after our likeness." (Gen. 1:26.) God did not say, "let the earth bring forth man." although man was formed out of the dust, he was the direct special creation of God (Gen. 1-26-28. 2: 7; 5; 1 2).

The word "image" would evidently not apply to physical form, but rather mean that man was a moral and intellectual image of the Great Spirit, yet so fashioned as to be adapted to his earthly conditions and nature. Man was of the Earth, earthy.

We would understand the word "likeness" to refer to man's official position on earth. As Jehovah God was emperor over the whole universe, so man was to be the king of earth, having dominion over all the lower animals. (Gen. 1:28).

Here is the battle ground between the Word of God and the word of man—called science—to which the whole world, particularly the educated, and even the leaders in theological seminaries, are bowing down and worshipping—their scientific "God," called "evolution." There is no middle ground. If the extreme evolution theory be true, the Bible is false from Genesis to Revolution. If the Bible be true, then the evolution theory is absolutely false in all its deductions in regard to the race of man.

Not only does the Genesis account deny the theory of Evolution, but the entire Book from cover to cover, sets forth the thought that man was "perfect" in the day he was created, that he fell through disobedience to God's expressed law,—and therefore he needed a Redeemer, Christ Jesus, to ransom him from sin and death and restore him to his former condition.

The corner stone of the Christian religion is set forth by our Lord when he declared. "The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." (Luke 19:10). The evolutionist denies that anything was "lost," but claims that man has, through billions of years, been laboriously "climbing" up from protoplasm to oyster, from oyster to fish, and then in turn to reptile, monkey, primitive man and finally to modern man, as we find him today. The Bible clearly shows that modern man is as far below the first man Adam, as a cat is inferior to a lion, if the two can be compared.

EVOLUTION

The Gospel means "Good Tidings," But, if Evolution be true, the "Times of Restitution of all things, which God both spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3: 19-21), would be very far removed from "good tidings"—it would mean a return of man to monkeyhood or perhaps to the oyster or protoplasm stage—in fact, very bad tidings.

Let us take our stand upon the authority of the Word of God!

Let God be true, though it prove every "evolutionist" a liar! (Romans 3:4).

(So large a subject can scarcely be treated satisfactorily in the space alotted, but Mrs. Seibert will be pleased to answer personally or through free literature, any questions on the foregoing or other Bible doctrines, if addressed at Hotel Noble.)

"SLIDE, KELLY, SLIDE"—WITH WILLIAM HAINES, SALLY O'NEIL AND HARRY CAREY

This picture should please not only baseball fans but every film patron. With the great American national game for a background it also presents a very human and sympathetic story, some capital comedy and fast action all the way through. The scenes showing the players doing their spring training and those in which they are playing the last game of the world's series are handled exceedingly well. Additional suspense is created when the hero fails to make good pitching during the early stages of the game, but suddenly rallies and does spectacular work when he sees his little pal and mascot brought in a hospital chair to the side lines. This is a situation which is sure to go over big. The scenes of the boy's injury are full of heart throbs. From the beginning the hero wins one's sympathy. He is shown as a decidedly "fresh" kid, with an overpowering belief in his own ability, but behind it all one can sense the fact that he is the real goods. He is a country lad, who becomes a baseball star and incidentally gets a swelled head as a result of his success. William Haines is at his best as the clever youth who develops into the big star of the diamond, the part suits him in every particular and he plays it with excellent dash and a keen sense of its melodramatic and comedy values; Sally O'Neil is a cute and charming heroine, Karl Dane gives a fine performance as the big Swede player; Junior Coghlan shows up to great advantage as the mascot kid whom the hero befriends and later becomes the pet of the entire team. Several famous baseball players appear in the cast, among whom may be mentioned Mike Donlin, Irish Meusel, Bob Meusel and Tony Lazzeri. Joe Farnham's witty subtitles are a great help in strengthening the humorous side of the picture. The plot has been founded on a story by A. P. Younger; it has been directed skillfully by Edward Sedwick, from a scenario by Frank Sullivan.
